WATER LOST THROUGH LEAK

With a dry summer facing Marin, it appears that water at the rate of more than 1 million gallons a year is running out of this leak in a Marin Municipal Water District tunnel which brings water from Alpine Lake. The tunnel, in a valley south of Fairfax, is leaking profusedly at a point where it connects with large district water pipes. A district official said today that repair of the tunnel, reportedly damaged in a landslide several years ago, is to be included in next year's budget.

$83.4 BILLION PROPOSED

Critics Eye Big Military Budget

By PHILIP W. McKINSEY
The Christian Science Monitor
News Service

WASHINGTON, D.C. — The administration's $83.4-billion defense budget will be coming out of both Senate and House committees shortly, and critics of military spending are gearing up for another round of hoped-for budget cutting.

This year they are zeroing in on four programs in early stage of development, costing about $2 billion in the current budget but billions more in the years ahead if allowed to proceed.

The four programs are the airborne warning and control system (AWACS), which is a modernization and expansion of the defense system against bombers; a fourth nuclear aircraft carrier; the new F-14 Navy fighter that would operate from carriers; and new missile-launching system for submarines called ULMS (undersea long-range missile system).

The outcome of the battle of the budget will have great significance for the hard-pressed aerospace and electronics industries. The $83.4 billion in obligational authority for fiscal 1973 which begins July 1 (the amount committed to projects, not the amount to be spent this year) is $6 billion more than the current budget.

In the past couple of years Congress has been gentler on defense cuts because of the unemployment problem. But now economic recovery gives the military critics a freer hand to cut the budget without being accused of increasing unemployment.

The attack is being coordinated by Members of Congress for Peace Through Law, a group of 10 senators and 15 congressmen of both parties who teamed up against the ABM, SST, and other programs. Sen. William Proxmire (D) of Wisconsin is heading the group this year.

The debate is fueled by the presidential campaign as well. Sen. George McGovern (D), of South Dakota has called for drastic cuts in military spending and Sen. Edmund S. Muskie (D), of Maine has also become a critic of high budgets.

Early this year Sen. John C. Stennis (D) of Mississippi, chairman of the Senate Armed Srvices Committee and usually a defender of a strong military establishment, warned that Cognress will have to scrutinize defense spending extra carefully this year because of the expected deficit of $25.5 billion. He noted that since military manpower costs are sharply on the rise as a result of pay increases designed to attract an all-volunteer army, savings will have to come more than ever out of hardware.

Probably the most vulnerable item in the budget is $299 million to begin building a fourth nuclear carrier. The $735 million to continue development and further production of the F-14 may also be vulnerable, though the extent is not yet clear.

The $474 million budgeted for

HOSPITALS ROOMY IN MARIN: REPORT

Empty Beds Are Reported In Hospitals And Nursing Homes Throughout County

By MARY LEYDECKER

Marin County has too many empty hospital and nursing home beds.

This was the conclusion of an investigating committee in a report adopted yesterday by the Comprehensive Health Planning Council of Marin.

Not only are obstetrical facilities going unused because of a dropping birth rate, but many owners of homes which care for the aged are crying about lack of business as well.

The reasons? Michael L. Ingerman, health planning coordinator for the county and adviser to the council, listed high cost of hospital care, moves by physicians toward more outpatient care, the declining birth rate and overbuilding of nursing homes in the past.

"You would think it would be basic economics," Dr. Michael L. Harris, Novato dentist who is president of the council, said.

However, private developers, left in the past to build hospitals and nursing homes as they saw fit, will now have to have the approval of the council, a government arm set up to bring order into the medical field.

"Any proposed new facility would have to demonstrate (community) need," Harris said, "and also that it is not in conflict with existing facilities."

Marin's "overbedding" situation is not as acute as San Francisco's, Ingerman said, but several hospitals appeared to be in real trouble, according to the statistics in the report.

While a 90 per cent occupancy figure is considered necessary for the efficient operation of a nursing home, the county-wide average was 79 per cent, with one new convalescent hospital only 20.9 per cent filled.

Marin General Hospital among general hospitals had the highest rate of occupancy, for medical-surgical patients, 83.2 per cent in 1971, but 85 per cent is considered the efficient figure.

Ross General Hospital reported a 61.6 per cent occupancy and Novato General, 62.2 per cent, for medical-surgical patients. (Ross has recently converted some beds for treatment of alcoholic problems.)

"The idea of the council is to coordinate health activities, not hinder," Dr. Harris said. "We want to give guidelines."

His committee's report suggests that hospitals and nursing

EOC Agrees To Cut 19 Field Employees

Ties With Head Start Program To Be Severed

By ERIK M. INGRAM

The Marin County Economic Opportunity Council, under federal orders to make sweeping organizational changes, last night agreed to reduce the size of its board, release 19 employees and sever agency ties with the county's Head Start program.

The board's elimination of 12 of its 36 seats remained in question today, however, since the reduction was approved with less than the needed number of directors present.

Under agency regulations, 24 directors must be present to vote on such issues. Last night, the vote came with only 23 directors in attendence — one having left before the vote.

The only protest to the action was voiced by Wallace K. Shepherd, executive director of the Marin County Housing Authority.

Shepherd said he objected to having his agency's EOC seat eliminated since the housing authority serves some 900 poor families in Marin who need a voice in the poverty agency's affairs.

While sympathizing with Shepherd, members of the EOC board noted that the decision to eliminate his agency had been made Tuesday by the board of supervisors. (The board of supervisors has jurisdiction over which county agencies will be represented.)

Further, they said, the poor of Marin hold one-third of the seats on the reconstituted board, representing so-called poverty target areas.

On a motion by Thomas Mason of San Anselmo, the board approved the reduction of directorships with a 22-0 vote, Shepherd abstaining.

About two hours of the board's lengthy meeting, which broke up at 1:30 a.m. today, was spent on a plea from the Marin Head Start for financial independence.

Expansion Of Bus, Ferry Fleet Wins Big Support

By PAUL E. PETERZELL

Overwhelming support for expansion of the Golden Gate Bridge District's ferry and bus fleets was declared last night by 46 labor unions, environmental and civic groups and city and state officials.

The district's pending applications for $13.7 million in federal grants to pay two-thirds of the expansion also were endorsed by 23 private citizens and in a petition signed by 650 persons.

Only three opponents appeared at the hearing asked by the federal government: Harbor Tug and Barge Co., private operator of ferries on the bay; the Marin County Taxpayers Association and Cable Ferries, a group that envisions a system of vessels pulled across the bay on an underwater cable.

Partial support came from the chambers of commerce of Marin and San Francisco. The Marin chamber favored the applications, provided no toll hike will be needed some day to finance transit deficits. The San Francisco chamber and the Marin County Taxpayers Association predicted the ferry operation alone will face an annual deficit of $6 million by 1975, and strain district finances needed for a future long-range rapid transit system.

More than 100 labor union members paraded outside toll plaza offices before the hearing, urging the ferries be built in the Bay Area to relieve unemployment.

The crowd of some 165 persons overflowed the board room and jammed the employee's lunchroom and a hallway to catch testimony relayed throughout the upper floor by loudspeakers. District officials, who had solicited support, said it was the largest crowd ever to attend a hearing at the toll plaza.

The two applications for federal grants are for $1,133,333 to buy 34 additional new buses, expanding the fleet to 168 new buses, and for $12.6 million for three new ferryboats and related facilities. The ferries are scheduled to begin serving a new Larkspur terminal by early 1974.

District officials reported for the first time that six of the 34 new buses will be smaller than the rest of the fleet so they can serve West Marin's narrow roads. They will carry 41 instead of 45 passengers, and be six inches narrower and five feet shorter than the other new buses.

Enthusiastic supporters included Theophus Barron Jr., board chairman of Marin Transit Systems. The private bus company had unsuccessfully opposed the district's first

Nixon Aide Balks At Some ITT Questions

WASHINGTON (UPI) —Presidential aide Peter M. Flanigan balked at answering questions at a Senate hearing today about his contacts with ITT officials or persons acting on ITT's behalf in the out-of-court settlement of a billion dollar antitrust suit against the conglomerate.

Flanigan sai such questions were beyond the scope of an agreement worked out between the Senate Judiciary Committee and the White House on his appearance as a witness.

He appeared at possibly the closing session of an investigation of ITT, the antitrust settlement, a pledge of at least $200,000 to the GOP national convention and the nomination of Richard G. Kleindienst to be attorney general.

Committee chairman James O. Eastland, D-Miss., sustained Flanigan's refusal to answer the questions.

Eastland cited an exchange of letters between the committee and the White House in which it was agreed that Flanigan's testimony would be limited to his knowledge of four subjects.

They included the selection of

Command Ship Trouble Delays Moon Touchdown

BULLETIN

SPACE CENTER, Houston (UPI) —Apollo 16's moon landing astronauts were told today that their descent to the moon was being delayed for hours because of the failure of the command ship to raise its orbit around the moon.

Lunar module pilots John W. Young and Charles M. Duke had been scheduled to land on the moon at 3:42 p.m. EST, after Thomas K. Mattingly was to have raised the orbit of the command ship.

However, when the astronauts returned from a pass around the back side of the moon, Duke advised Mission Control that the command ship maneuver did not occur.

Mission control then advised Young and Duke to anticipate "a wave off" for a landing attempt on the 13th orbit, as originally planned.

The nature of the command ship's problem was not immediately determined.

Radio contact was resumed with Mattingly about 26 minutes after he circled from behind the moon. None of the astronauts was in any immediate danger.

Mission Control reported that the command module's main engine failed to fire because a system called the "thrust vector control" had not operated to specifications.

Free Fishing For Elderly Advanced

SACRAMENTO (UPI) —The Assembly Ways and Means Committee has approved legislation to give free fishing licenses to low-income elderly persons.

On an 18-0 vote Wednesday, the measure by Assemblyman Carlos Bee, D-Hayward, was sent to the floor.

The bill would give the licenses to any woman over 62 and any man over 65 years of age who earns less than $300 per month, compared with the current $140 limit.

The state Fish and Game Department estimated about 30,000 persons would be eligible for the free licenses. It said the proposal would result in a $120,800 annual loss of revenue.

Tank-Led North Viet Troops Back In An Loc

SAIGON (UPI) — Tank-led Communist troops stormed back into An Loc, 60 miles north of Saigon, today in tank-led human wave assaults and then attacked government positions on each side of Lai Khe, 32 miles from Saigon and its last major defense bastion.

The North Vietnamese have vowed to make An Loc the provisional capital of the Viet Cong and set today as the day. All but a handful had been driven out of An Loc by government reinforcements and heavy strikes by U.S. B52s and fighter-bombers, but today they returned.

UPI correspondent Leon Daniel reported from Lai Khe that battles within two miles of that big South Vietnamese base could be seen from the camp. It was the closest major fighting to Saigon since the Communists began their offensive three weeks ago, although skirmishes have been reported 13 miles south of Saigon.

Col. Ross Franklin, senior U.S. adviser to the government soldiers trying to protect Lai Khe, said "it would be highly undesirable for the enemy to get between here and Saigon." The only defense south of Lai Khe was a small defense post at the telephone building six miles north of Saigon.

Although all but a handful of Communists had been reported driven out of An Loc in last week's counter-attack, the Communists were still so strongly entrenched that their antiaircraft guns kept government supply helicopters from landing. On Wednesday they shot down a fifth supply plane.

Two helicopters did manage to land two miles south of An Loc Wednesday night and fly out 46 wounded, described as a "few" of the government victims.

House Demos Denounce Invasion, U.S. Bombings

WASHINGTON (UPI) — House Democrats went on record today denouncing both the Communist invasion of South Vietnam and the retaliatory American bombing of North Vietnam. They ordered that a bill be taken up on the House floor within 30 days to end U.S. military involvement "in and over Indochina."

After approving a resolution that could lead for the first time to congressional passage of end-the-war legislation, the Democratic representatives overwhelmingly voted to add a clause to condemn the North Vietnamese invasion.

By another sizable vote they rejected a strongly worded policy statement that would have attacked North Vietnam and the Soviet Union and endorsed current military actions taken by President Nixon.

By an overwhelming 144-58 vote, the Democrats then gave final approval to a resolution combining the antiwar demands with condemnation of the North Vietnamese invasion.

The key vote came on a surprisingly lopsided 135-66 vote in which members attending a

Chapter Closes For Top Clown

NEW YORK (UPI)—Otto the Clown, a tragic comedian who always tried to help but never was of much help, died in St. Clare's Hospital Wednesday after a brief illness a few days before his 76th birthday.

Otto, born Otto Griebling in Germany, had appeared daily with the Ringling Bros. and Barnum Bailey circus at Madison Square Garden until he entered the hospital 10 days ago with what was thought to be a mild illness.

For 60 years, Griebling had been performing under the big top, first for 10 years as part of a horseback riding act then as a clown. Last year, Life magazine called him "the best American clown."

OTTO THE CLOWN
Succumbs at 75

His best known act was his appearance in the audience with a large block of ice. He would trudge up and down the aisles, trying to deliver it to the person who supposedly ordered it. With each fresh appearance, he would come in with a smaller block until, finally, he came in with an ice cube which melted in his hands.

Once, he tried a variation of this by appearing as a telegraph messenger who progressively grew older and shabbier and still never managed to deliver the ice. That variation stopped when the telegraph company threatened to sue.

Griebling was absent from the circus for only two years after joining it. During his days as an apprentice, when the show was in Madison, Wis., a trainer he feared gave him $5 and told him to buy two loaves of bread and two quarts of milk.

Instead, Griebling took a freight train to the dairy country. For two years, he worked for a farmer. Then, hearing the show was back in Madison, he went there, bought two loaves of bread and two quarts of milk, and gave them to the trainer without offering any explanation.

The trainer simply counted his change, Griebling recalled.

Earlier this year, asked to describe the art of clowning, Griebling said, "If you find yourself able to make people laugh, it is God's gift. You have to do everything from the bottom of your heart."

Indict Troopers In New Jersey Beating

TRENTON (UPI)—Two New Jersey state troopers were indicted by a grand jury Wednesday for allegedly stripping, beating and branding with hot metal a long-haired teenager.

A state grand jury returned the indictments to Superior Court Judge Frank J. Kingfield who then issued bench warrants for the arrest of the two troopers, Thomas Grabowski of Keyport and Dennis Weiglein of Normandy Beach.

They are accused of assaulting Earl Harris Jr., 19, of Bricktown, last Feb.20. Harris told newsmen he was driving a car on Drum Point Road when a trooper pulled in front of him and told him to follow the cruiser to the state police barracks at Laurelton.

Harris said he believed he was being charged with speeding, but a check of municipal records showed no such charge against him.

At the Laurelton barracks, the youth was allegedly stripped, beaten and branded on the buttocks with a triangle formed by paper clips fused together.

Evan W. Jahos, director of the state's Division of Criminal Justice, said state police were also considering disciplinary action against the two indicted troopers and two other unidentified troopers who were suspended with them last March 20 in connection with the incident.

Specifically, the indictment charged the two men with misconduct in office and aiding and abetting. Grabowski was also charged with atrocious assault and battery. There have been other reports of alleged state brutality against longhaired youths and the grand jury is reportedly investigating them.

Muskie To Fight Till End

By U.P. INTERNATIONAL

Sen. Edmund S. Muskie, faced with a surge by Sen. George S. McGovern in Pennsylvania, said Wednesday he will stay in the Democratic presidential race until the nominating convention.

Elsewhere on the political front, Alabama Gov. George C. Wallace indicated he would settle for the No. 2 spot on the ticket.

Sandwiched between precinct caucus victories in Idaho and North Dakota Tuesday and Vermont Wednesday night, a labor public opinion poll in Pennsylvania showed McGovern growing in popularity in the Keystone State, which ballots for 137 convention delegates April 25.

SURPRISES REGULARS

McGovern also surprised Democratic regulars in Missouri's precinct caucuses by reportedly winning enough strength to gain unofficially about half the 73 convention delegates.

McGovern in a Philadelphia interview compared his surge to the one made by the late John F. Kennedy in winning the 1960 Democratic nomination.

"I felt in the very beginning that at some point one or the other of the candidates would take off in these primaries," McGovern said.

Muskie, the frontrunner in public opinion polls until primary balloting began in March, slipped to third behind Sen. Hubert H. Humphrey and McGovern in Pennsylvania after previously falling behind McGovern in Massachusetts.

MUSKIE PLEDGE

But Muskie said in Boston he intended to win in his neighboring state of Massachusetts in Tuesday's primary and to "stay in this fight until I get the nomination for the presidency in July. I intend to stay in until I defeat Richard Nixon."

Wallace, campaigning in LaPorte, Ind., indicated he would accept the vice presidential nomination. "I'm not angling for it," Wallace said, "but it could be."

A third party candidate in the 1968 election, Wallace said he would remain in the Democratic party in 1972 unless he was "thrown out of the convention."

After a stop at Springfield, Mass., today, Muskie was to join Humphrey in Pennsylvania.

Only 24 hours after student jeers at the University of Pennsylvania interrupted his speech against the Vietnam war, Humphrey told a Harrisburg, Pa., news conference that new campus demonstrations will break out unless U.S. bombing is halted.

NEW DEVELOPMENT

In other political developments, Rep. Wilbur D. Mills told the New York State legislature that revenue sharing would pass the U.S. House, Sen. Henry M. Jackson in Bellenfontaine, Ohio, called for increased federal spending for education and a takeover of state welfare programs and Los Angeles. Mayor Sam Yorty predicted he would get some of the "protest vote" in California's June 6 primary.

WORLD NEWS IN BRIEF

Crucial Talks

By U.P. INTERNATIONAL

Egyptian President Anwar Sadat will travel to Moscow later this month or in early May for crucial military and political talks on the Middle East crisis, authoritative political sources said today.

The sources said Sadat will request further weapons and supplies from the Russians during the visit, expected to last three to four days. He will meet with Kremlin leaders before President Nixon's trip to Moscow May 22.

The official Syrian Arab News Agency reported earlier today that Sadat would make the trip for talks of "utmost importance."

West Accused

GENEVA (UPI) — The Soviet Union today accused the West of trying to block the prohibition of chemical weapons by bogging down negotiations in technicalities.

Soviet disarmament negotiator Alexei Roschin said the United States and its allies are evading the "political decision" necessary for such a treaty.

He told the disarmament conference Western demands for technical discussions on verifying a ban and on the different types of chemical weapons would delay progress for "many years."

"The readiness of parties to take a political decision is needed above all," Roschin said.

Suspect Free

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — A man accused of skyjacking a Frontier Airlines 737 from Albuquerque, N. M., to Los Angeles last week was freed on $35,000 bail Wednesday after 13 persons raised the bond.

Some of the contributors, mostly from the Mexican-American community, pledged their homes as security that Ricardo Chavez Ortiz would appear in court to answer the charges.

Chavez allegedly forced the Phoenix, Ariz.-bound plane to land in Los Angeles where he demanded radio and television air time to air his grievances on behalf of Mexican-Americans.

Irish Hair Cut

BELFAST, Northern Ireland (UPI) — Two men cut off the hair of two Roman Catholic girls engaged to British soldiers, then plastered them with paint and feathers today as a cursing crowd of neighborhood women shouted their approval.

Police said two men forced the girls into a hijacked truck at gunpoint in Belfast and drove them to the town square of Coalisland, 20 miles west of Belfast. There they cut off the girls' hair and poured yellow paint and feathers over them.

The men were urged on by women who cursed the girls as traitors to the Catholic community for planning to wed British soldiers.

The girls were hospitalized at Dungannon in a state of shock, police said.

Wreckage Found

JAKARTA (UPI) — A party of Indonesian students exploring 15,000-foot-high Mount Jakarta in Indonesian New Guinea have reported finding the wreckage of a Dakota aircraft and a number of skeletons.

The expedition members reported finding the plane wreckage upon their return to Jakarta this week.

A Dutch Embassy spokesman in Jakarta said the wreckage was almost certainly that of a Dutch Air Force Dakota transport plane with disappeared July 28, 1962, on a flight from Merauke to Biak Island in what was then Dutch New Guinea.

Petitions Hit Another Snag

SACRAMENTO (UPI)—Law enforcement's drive to qualify an initiative restoring the death penalty for the November election struck another snag yesterday.

Officials reported a second batch of petitions is being recalled because of a typographical error and that new ones are being distributed for voter signature.

The word "shall" was misprinted as "small" and Attorney General Evelle Younger's office advised sponsors of the drive to recall the faulty petitions and issue corrected forms.

Test Announced

MERCURY, Nev. (UPI) — The United States detonated its first announced underground nuclear test of the year yesterday.

The Atomic Energy Commission said the test, code named "Longchamps," occurred at a depth of 1,070 feet below the desert floor at the Nevada Test Site, about 65 miles north of Las Vegas.

The blast was "less than 20 kilotons," which put it near the size of the atomic bombs dropped on Japan at the end of World War II. No radiation was released into the atmosphere, according to the AEC.

Tornado Strikes

Davis, Okla. (UPI) — A tornado destroyed a ranchhouse in which eight persons huddled for safety Wednesday night, killing five of them and injuring the other three. Among the dead were three teen-agers.

A dozen other twisters chewed across southern Oklahoma during the night, injuring 12 more persons, none seriously.

At Davis, 100 miles south of Oklahoma City, the tornado did not leave any part of the house standing.

Those killed were two cousins of the Curtis Bairds who were visiting, Sharon Raines, 15, and Larry Raines, 13; two women who stopped at the ranchhouse to get inside for safety, Pearl Taylor and Mrs. Billy Casey; and Eugene Baird, 13.

LBJ's Improved

SAN ANTONIO, Tex. (UPI) — Former President Lyndon B. Johnson has improved so quickly from an irregular heart flutter that his personal doctor was able to return to his home in Atlanta yesterday.

"President Johnson's irregular heart action has improved in a very gratifying manner," a hospital statement said. "He continues to feel well and his progress is quite satisfactory."

Dr. J. Willis Hurst of Atlanta, Johnson's heart specialist, flew to Texas Monday when the 36th President's recuperation from an April 7 heart attack was interrupted by a burst of heartbeats.

Dole Hooted, Jeered During Vietnam Talk

NEW ORLEANS (UPI)— Republican National Chairman Robert Dole, who defended stepped-up U. S. bombing in Vietnam at Tulane University Wednesday night, was booed, hooted, jeered and laughed at until he finally cut his speech short and left.

"Down with Nixon's puppet!" some members of the audience of about 400 yelled when the Kansas senator walked to the podium.

Dole managed to get through the first two pages of a prepared text, but members of the audience jeered and interrupted him when he talked about the war.

Dole's prepared text blasted the U. S. press for "grudgingly" reporting any South Vietnamese victories in the Indochina war.

"We have fought four wars in the 20th Century," he said. "But we never started those wars. We never fought them for the usual reasons of territorial gain or expansion of empire."

Laughs, boos and hoots. One heckler yelled, "I didn't know we had a comedian."

"I wonder, when I hear noises like that, why I spent 32 months in a hospital after the last war. I wonder if it was worth it," Dole said. "I think it was."

Returning to his text, Dole said Nixon's Vietnamization policy was working, although Democrats, and the national press were reluctant to admit it.

More jeers.

He accused the Democrats of starting the war and wanted to know where the war critics in the Senate were in 1964 when the Gulf of Tonkin resolution was signed.

"Where was Humphrey?" he said. "Where was Muskie?"

"Where were you?" the audience shouted back. "Where was 'Tricky Dicky?'"

When Dole said Nixon was bringing combat troops home, someone shouted, "in boxes."

"I think the Nixon policy..." Dole began,"... is to get reelected," a heckler finished.

Dole shouted back:

"We're going to get you out of the war the Democrats got you into, whether you like it or not!"

He skipped over the rest of his prepared text and left. Outside, about 300 demonstrators chanted, shouted and beat on the pavement with cans and bottles. One of them threw a string of firecrackers into the auditorium lobby.

In his prepared text, Dole said the South was winning its share of victories.

"But the dearth of reporting about that aspect of the war gives the clear impression that it is regretted by those who are doing the reporting," the text said.

"I believe the liberal establishment press has found itself for so long predicting the failure of the President's policies —that they have found it to be in their own interests and the interests of the credibility of the defense analysts of their editorial policies that Vietnamization fail."

Dole walked off the stage before he came to this part in his speech.

Mill Valley Votes Being Counted

A recount of ballots for the contested Mill Valley City Council seat won by Gerald J. Hood began today and is expected to continue into tomorrow.

County elections officer Peter C. Meyer said at 11:30 a.m. today that two of Mill Valley's seven precincts have been recounted. He declined to say whether there had been a change in the tally.

Incumbent Jerome C. Hauke, who lost to Hood by six votes during the April 11 municipal election, called for the recount Tuesday.

closed caucus approved a resolution that would:

Characterize the new bombing as "a dangerous escalation of our role in the Indochina war and a direct contradiction of the administration's stated policy of 'winding down' the war."

Declare it to be in the national interest promptly to "set a date to terminate all U.S. military involvement in and over Indochina," subject only to release of U.S. prisoners and an accounting of missing GIs.

Direct Democratic members of the once hawkish Foreign Affairs Committee "to prepare and report within 30 days legislation designed to accomplish these specific objectives."

San Diego as the site of the Republican convention and matters which occurred in his presence at meetings in the office of former Attorney General John N. Mitchell last April concerning a number of brokerage houses going bankrupt because of the falling stock market.

They also included his involvement with former Assistant Attorney General Richard W. McLaren, who made the out-of-court settlement, and details of a meeting with ITT President Harold S. Geneen.

The impasse arose when Sen. Philip A. Hart, D-Mich., asked Flanigan if other than at two meetings in the attorney general's office, Felix Rohatyn "or anyone else on behalf of ITT expressed concern to you about the effect of a Hartford (Fire Insurance Co.) divestiture?"

"I regret that under the limitations voted by the committee I am not permitted to answer that question," Flanigan answered.

Judge Allows Angela Letters As Evidence

SAN JOSE (UPI) —Judge Richard E. Arnason today refused to bar Angela Davis' love letters to George Jackson from evidence in her murder-kidnap trial.

Arnason said five letters from the 28-year-old militant and Communist to the slain black revolutionary, along with an 18-page "diary" found in Jackson's cell after he was killed at San Quentin Prison, could be used by the prosecution as evidence.

The judge barred from evidence, however, two-pages of sample text secretly typed by a sheriff's deputy on Miss Davis' typewriter, presumably in order to prove the 18-page document was done on the same machine.

Arnason said the deputy, who got the typewriter from Miss Davis' workroom cell at the Marin County Jail, acted improperly in not securing a warrant.

The letters involve a key part of the state's charges that Miss Davis helped plot and furnished guns for the Aug. 7, 1970, Marin County Courthouse kidnapings which resulted in four deaths.

Prosecutor Albert W. Harris Jr. has said she was in love with Jackson, one of the three "Soledad Brothers" accused of killing a guard at Soledad State Prison, and plotted the kidnaping to try to force his release.

The defense had charged that the letters, taken from Miss Davis' Los Angeles apartment during a nationwide search following the shootout, were seized without the proper warrant, and that the "attorney-client relationship" had been violated when another letter from Miss Davis was taken by Soledad State Prison officials from an envelope addressed to Jackson by his attorney.

The 18-page document, described as a "kind of a diary" but not signed, was found in Jackson's bloody cell after he was killed at San Quentin following a violent rampage last August in which three guards and two trusties were beaten and stabbed to death in the cellblock.

The defense said the document was Jackson's property and officials had no right to take it without a warrant.

Arnason said the motion to suppress the Los Angeles letters had been "extensively argued" during pretrial hearings and turned down them.

"The prior order is sustained," he said. "The warrant was legal. The motion to suppress is denied."

The defense had also complained that two of the letters were photostatic copies, when it had been assumed they were originals. Arnason said he hight "with reluctance" grant defense attorneys more time to prepare their arguments on this if they wanted it.

On the letter seized at Soledad Prison, Arnason said, "it is established that inmates have no rights of privacy to invade. The violation of the attorney-client privilege is not applicable because the privilege belongs to the client and not the attorney. And it does not relate to Miss Davis."

Free Seniors Parking Proposed At Parks

The Marin County Parks and Recreation Commission recommended yesterday that senior citizens be allowed to park free at three county parks.

The recommendation, proposed by Edward T. Ryken, executive director of the Marin Senior Coordinating Council, will be considered later this month by county supervisors.

"If there's any group that's discriminated against around here it is the seniors," said commissioner Leroy M. Gerner, urging support for the proposal.

If approved by county supervisors, Marin residents over 65 years of age will be given a car sticker allowing them to park at McNear's Beach, Stafford Lake and Paradise Beach.

Commissioner Merritt A. Robinson proposed that the 50-cent parking fee be lifted for all Marin County taxpayers since it amounts to double taxation for use of the parks.

His proposal was referred to committee, however, after Pierre W. Joske, director of the parks department, complained that such action would encourage use of automobiles. He said the parking fee is aimed at discouraging cars at the parks.

(Persons who enter the parks on foot or bicycle pay no fee.)

The commission also referred to the county counsel's office a proposal by Robinson that state lelislation be enacted to give property tax exemptions to homeowners groups providing park and recreation services.

homes can change their uses to meet changing needs.

The fight for the elderly patients is expected to surface tomorrow night when the Community Church of Mill Valley will ask the council for approval of 58 beds to be used for patients at the 300-unit retirement center now under construction in Mill Valley.

The council is not interested in the living units, intended for persons of low and moderate income levels; only the medical facility and its beds.

Protests from owners of neighboring nursing homes are expected, because the retirement home plans to allow outsiders to use the medical facility until its own residents take up all the space.

Many nursing homes were built on expectations of Medical and Medicare aid which did not materialize, Ingerman said.

At the other end of the spectrum is the young mother.

Not only is she having fewer babies, she, in many instances, wants her child born at home, Ingerman said.

High costs of hospitalization and a resentment toward institutionalized medicine were offered as suggested reasons.

One physician in West Marin is delivering between 15 and 20 babies a month in homes, Ingerman said.

Marion C. Ibach, longtime member of the Marin Hospital District board and a member of the committee which drew up the report, was optimistic, however, about the hospital situation.

"We'll have to reevaluate our thinking," she said, adding that additional out-patient facilities, better emergency room care and more home care can provide good alternatives for hospitalization.

In the meantime, those who seek approval of the council, necessary for receiving Medicare and Medical funds, and, in part, for licenses, seem to be in for tough sledding if they plan to add traditional beds to the overcrowded hospital situation.

DEFENSE

AWACS, the airborne bomber defense system, will cause heated debate. The program is designed to move ground-based radar systems into the air where they could spot aircraft coming in at low levels under the present radar screen.

Critics charge that this year's budgeted amount is only the down payment on a program that will run $5.5 billion. And they argue that it is futile to spend that much money to protect cities against bombers when there is no defense anyway against missile attacks which would be far more devastating.

They argue that the Soviet bomber threat is overblown. The administration argues that the bomber threat is real and that a modernized air-alert system would be effective at least against bombers.

What a go-ahead on the program would mean can be seen from a look at one company, Boeing, which at present has 700 people employed on initial research on a portion of AWACS and would add 3,000 more next year if it got a contract.

The submarine missile-launching system is budgeted for $977 million. The critics are in an awkward position opposing it, because in the past they have fought against land-based missiles on the grounds that the real defense of the future would be missiles hidden under the sea.

Now they say they are willing to go ahead with $330 million earmarked for development of a new type missile, but oppose the $647 million for new type submarines.

They would hold that to $50 million for research. Research is not yet far enough along, they argue, to justify a full-scale go-ahead on ULMS, which they say would eventually cost $30 billion. Costly mistakes would be made, they assert.

Meanwhile, the existing Polar submarines can be used as launching pads for the new missiels, and Polaris will not be outdated before the 1985-90 period. They argue that the United States does not need to match the Soviet submarine buildup (42 ballistic missile submarines) because the U.S. has multiple warheads the Soviet Union does not.

Underlying the defense debate this year is the hope that President Nixon will sign a strategic arms limitation agreement with the Soviets when he goes to Moscow next montn, obviating the need for the kind of military buildup the administration has budgeted.

Ecumenical Housing Now Corporation

The Ecumenical Association for Housing in Marin last night completed formation of a limited-dividend corporation and became its sole stockholder, according to William Parnow, association president.

Attorney Douglas P. Ferguson explained that the corporation could obtain certain Housing and Urban Development funds more easily than a nonprofit corporation, and also could finance the ecumenical association after its present grant from the San Francisco Foundation expires next year.

The new corporation's officers will include Henry Arian of Mill Valley, president; Parnow of San Rafael, vice president; Thomas Zeller of San Anselmo, secretary, and Hazen Goddard of Terra Linda, treasurer.

The ecumenical association directors voted to spend $300 to buy the new corporation's initial stock issue.

Two loans were approved — $1,600 to Interfaith Housing Foundation, sponsors of the Shelter Hill housing project in Mill Valley, and $5,000 to the Catholic Social Services of Marin, sponsors of the Priory housing project in Kentfield.

The Mill Valley loan will be needed unless the federal department of Housing and Urban Development waives its requirement for a feasibility study application fee equalling 1 per cent of the total mortgage sought from the federal agency.

The loan to the Catholic Social Services will pay part of the fees of architect James McDonald if the HUD seed money loan fails to win approval, for the conversion of the church property in Kentfield to moderate-income housing.

program and an outspoken critic of the EOC's past administration, said his agency could only be hindered by continued association with the EOC.

(The EOC has acted as a funding source for Heard Start by making application for and disbursing federal funds. It never has been invovolved in the operation of Head Start. Problems arose earlier this year when it was disclosed that the EOC had used for its own programs between $5,000 and $20,000 of federal funds earmarked for Heard Start.)

Torczyner said under new federal legislation his agency can become an independent agency with power to apply for its own funding.

After discussion of Head Start's financial responsibility — a discussion question by director William J. Bielser who said the EOC was the last agency to question someone else's financial responsibility — the board approved the separation.

"The only thing I can see that we would do for them is drag them down with us," director Gerald J. Hood said in making the motion to approve Head Start's request. It was approved on a 20-2 vote with one abstension.

In other action, the board approved a recommendation from management consultant Ben Young of Belvedere, who is acting as interim executive director, to release 19 employees and close offices in Marin City, Novato and one in San Rafael where the main office on C Street will remain open.

Under his recommendation, the agency will keep seven employees to reorganize programs under the reduced budget imposed by the federal government.

The release of employees was highlighted by a letter from one threatening suit if she didn't receive about $2,000 she said was "promised her by former executive director W. Robert Lomax Jr.

Collie Gaines, a community worker in Marin City, said she had been promised a 20 per cent raise two years ago by Lomax but never received it.

The board took no action on the letter.

Spring Festival Set Saturday

The San Ramon Parent Faculty Club will conduct its fourth annual spring festival at the school ground, 45 San Ramon Way, from 11 a.m. to 3 p.m. Saturday.

The event will include a flea market with items made by children, game booths, relay games and races, a cakewalk and cake deocration contest.

A treasure hunt for preschool age children will be held at 11:30 a.m.

Proceeds from the festival will be used to purchase sports equipment for the playground and school.

federal grant of $6.2 million for the initial bus fleet.

Endorsing the bridge district's applications for the federal grants were San Francisco Mayor Joseph L. Alioto, the Metropolitan Transportation Commission, Marin County Transit District, Marin Council for Civic Affairs, Golden Gate Commuters Club, Irate Taxpayers of Marin, Bay Cities Metal Trades Council, Maritime Trades Council, People for a Golden Gate National Recreation Area, International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers Local 6, League of Women Voters of Central Marin, Boiler Makers Union Local 6, Inland Boatman's Union, Sierra Club, Masters, Mates and Pilots, San Francisco Building and Construction Trades Council and Save San Francisco Bay Association.

Support also came from the city councils of San Rafael, Tiburon, Novato, San Anselmo, Sausalito, Larkspur, Mill Valley, Rohnert Park and Cotati.

Labor's strong support was summed up by Thomas A. Rotell, executive secretary-treasurer of the Bay Cities Metal Trades Council: "we need the jobs," especially in shipyards to build the ferries. But he added that "we are not opposed to the buses; we believe in integration."

Rotell assured the bridge board that "we know where to get the dough, and we know where to pull strings to get it done here."

Alioto, especially enthusiastic about the ferries, said "this is one of those rare instances in public life where the romantic and nostalgic clearly coincide with rational, hard-headed and efficiency-oriented decisions as to the expenditure of public money." He cited district figures showing that the operating deficit per passenger on the Sausalito ferry has been only about half of the deficit for the buses, "clearly refuting those who would claim that a ferry system is uneconomic."

Margaret Azevedo, speaking for the Marin Council for Civic Affairs, challenged the handful of critics of the joint system to consider the "spectacular costs" of new highways that would be needed, "if we do not support a bus-ferry system adequate to do the job." A new bridge and about 400 lane-miles of highway between San Francisco and Sonoma would cost over $1 billion, "not to speak of an immeasurable cost to our physical environment," she said.

The strongest opposition to the grant applications came from Harbor Tug, whose president, Albert D. Elledge, charged the district with seeking federal funds to drive his private enterprise out of business. "You are not operating a bona fide commute service, but you are operating a sightseeing service, for which you are not entitled to a federal grant," he declared.

Elledge's attorney, James W. Halley, objected that in addition to competing unfairly with the private company, the bridge district had ignored the company's offer to handle expansion of ferry service.

Halley also reported that a survey of 589 persons taking the district's Sausalito ferry showed that almost three-quarters of them rode the ferry only for sightseeing and tourist purposes. The bridge district's attorney, Thomas M. Jenkins, later rebutted that many of these pleasure riders otherwise would have gone to Sausalito via the bridge, and that the ferry system was designed to relieve traffic on the bridge regardless of whether it is tourist or commuter traffic.

The bridge district's environmental impact statement that accompanied its ferry grant application was challenged by a consultant hired by Elledge, Hans Feibusch. He suggested that dredging necessary for the Larkspur ferry terminal would violate the bay plan of the Bay Conservation and Development Commission.

District officials, however, noted that the executive director of the commission, Joseph E. Bodovitz, had endorsed the grant application as "fully in accord with bay plan policies and findings."

Feibusch predicted few commuters would ride the expanded ferry system, but at the same time predicted massive traffic congestion caused by commuters at the ferry terminals.

Corte Madera Driver Hurt In Petaluma

Judith Sinclair, 31, of 21 Key Largo Court, Corte Madera, was treated at Hillcrest Hospital for leg cuts suffered in an accident at 2 a.m. today on Highway 101, north of Washington Street, Petaluma.

The California Highway Patrol said Mrs. Sinclair apparently dozed at the wheel. The car drifted off the right side of the road.

OBITUARIES

Concetta Barsotti Dies At 74

Concetta M. Barsotti, a longtime resident of San Anselmo, died yesterday in a local hospital after a long illness. She was 74.

Mrs. Barsotti was a native of San Francisco who had lived in San Anselmo since 1927.

Her late husband, Aladino Barsotti, was the owner of a San Francisco auto body repair shop. He died in 1952.

Mrs. Barsotti was a member of the Italian Catholic Federation, Sons of Italy, Club Italia, the Senior Citizens of Fairfax and a Portuguese fraternal organization, S.P.R.S.I., Council 29 of Sausalito.

Survivors are a daughter, Elva Camiccia of Fairfax; a son, Aldo Barsotti of San Rafael; two sisters, Norma Baldocci of San Francisco and Fulvia Mennucci of San Anselmo; a brother, Mario Franchini of San Francisco, and three grandchildren.

Mass of Requiem will be offered at 9:30 a.m. Saturday at St. Anselm's Church, San Anselmo. Burial will be private. Rosary will be recited at 8 p.m. tomorrow at the Chapel of the Hills, San Anselmo.

MRS. McLACHLIN

Funeral for Isabella (Belle) D. McLachlin of Santa Venetia will be held at 10 a.m. tomorrow in Westminster Presbyterian Church, Long Beach.

Mrs. McLachlin was the mother of William W. McLachlin, owner of a San Rafael insurance agency. She died April 13 in a local hospital after a brief illness. She was a native of Michigan and lived in Canada before moving to Southern California in 1919.

She was a member of the Gay 70s senior citizens group in Santa Venetia.

She also is survived by another son, John H. McLachlin of Saratoga, 15 grandchildren and 39 great-grandchildren.

Burial will be in Sunnyside Cemetery, Long Beach.

servations of the distinctive volcanic lava flows that appeared to have formed the lofty highlands between 3.6 billion and 4 billion years ago.

Traveling on foot and aboard their battery-driven four-wheeled lunar rover over more than 15 miles in three seven-hour excursions, the astronauts will explore the rims of bright-rayed centers and drive up the lower slopes of Stone Mountain to the south of the landing site.

Besides bringing back a record 195-pound haul of moon rock and soil samples, Young and Duke hope to complete a variety of scientific experiments, including temperature readings in the lunar subsoil, re-exposure of an Apollo 12 rock sample to the moon's magnetic field, and ultraviolet photography of distant stars, galaxies and gas clouds with a $2 million electronic camera.

Four metallic panels on the side of the Orion landing craft will measure cosmic rays from deep space as Young and Duke go about their tasks of describing the rugged features of the Descartes region, just south of the lunar equator, for clues to the still incomplete picture of the moon's evolution.

The astronauts, once awake Thursday morning, reported they were "charging hard."

BERT JOHNS

Funeral was held today in Vallejo for Bert Johns, 67, of Point Reyes Station, retired civilian maintenance engineer with the Army.

Johns collapsed at his home on Sir Francis Drake Boulevard Sunday after a short hike. He was pronounced dead at Marin General Hospital. Death was attributed to natural causes by the Marin coroner's office.

Johns moved to Marin after retiring from the Army in the Midwest. He had lived in Point Reyes Station four years.

Survivors are his wife, Josephine; two daughters, Mabelle Darby of Trevose, Pa., and Patricia Goodrich of Vallejo; two sons, James Johns of Chester, Plumas County, and Wes Johns of Vallejo, and his mother, Sarah Johns of Canton, Ohio.

Burial was in Sunrise Memorial Cemetery, Vallejo.

ETTA NAVTANOVICH

Etta Navtanovich, 88, a resident of San Rafael for 10 years, died yesterday in a Chico hospital after a short illness.

A native of Chita, Russia, she came to this country 35 years ago, and lived in San Rafael for 10 years. She moved to Chico to be near her daughter, Rachael Gorb.

She was a former member of B'nai Brith.

She is survived by her daughters, Mrs. Gorb and Paulette Poliak of San Francisco. She is also survived by two grandchildren and four great-grandchildren.

Funeral will be at 11:30 a.m. Friday at Sinai Memorial Chapel, Divisadero at Geary Street, San Francisco. Interment will follow at the Eternal Home Cemetery in Colma.

Recess Bill Is Opposed By GOP

SACRAMENTO (UPI) — Republicans on the Senate Rules Committee have balked at approving a Democratic plan to recess the legislature on June 30 until after the November election with one lawmaker warning the proposal would cause a "big mess."

Senate Democratic leader George Moscone of San Francisco, author of the proposal, suggested the legislature recess its current session on June 30, return Nov. 8, a day after the election, and adjourn the regular session Dec. 1.

He submitted the plan in the form of an amendment to a resolution which previously proposed adjourning the legislature June 30. The committee approved the amendment Wednesday but delayed a vote on the measure itself until Republican leaders are consulted.

"We'd end up like we did last year in a big mess," observed Sen. Robert Lagomarsino, R-Ojai. "It's better to stay here and get the work done."

Lagomarsino noted that the 1971 legislature met for almost an entire year and never came to grips with reapportionment.

Moscone predicted that an "overwhelming majority" of members of both parties will attend the national conventions during the summer and leave the legislature with only a few members on hand.

Chairman James R. Mills, D-San Diego, said, however, that for the legislature to return after the election "perhaps it will be a little easier to do something with respect to reapportionment."

"After the election when the air clears, everybody will know where he stands," Mills said.

Assembly Speaker Bob Moretti, D-Van Nuys, said he favors the Moscone plan, adding, "We arrived at that mutually."

Assembly Approves Dam Moratorium Bill

SACRAMENTO (UPI) —Over the objections of some conservationists who favored a stronger measure, the Assembly has passed a bill imposing a five-year moratorium on construction of dams on four north coast rivers.

The bill by Assemblyman Frank P. Belotti, R-Eureka, would bar construction of dams or reservoirs on the Eel, Smith, Trinity and Klamath rivers until 1977 while a study of them is being made by the Resources Agency.

It was sent to the Senate Wednesday on a 48-12 vote.

Assemblyman Edwin L. Z'berg, D-Sacramento, argued that the bill "goes nowhere near solving the problem" of the rivers.

He opposed it on the grounds that it was a substitute for stronger measures designed to preserve the streams as "wild rivers." The legislation by Sen. Randolph Coller, D-Yreka, Sen. Peter H. Behr, R-San Rafael, is pending in the Senate Finance Committee.

Assemblyman Ray Johnson, R-Chico, said Belotti's proposal "makes sense ... that we won't do anything in the way on construction until we make a study."

Marin Judge Sues Neighbors

Marin Superior Court Judge Samuel W. Gardiner and his wife have filed suit against all the neighbors of land they own in Napa County in an effort to win a right-of-way to a road.

In the suit filed Tuesday in both Marin and Napa Superior Courts, the judge and his wife, Barbara, claim there was an implied easement when they bought a 120-acre parcel of land near Moskowitz reservoir. The lot is surrounded by private land.

Named as defendants in the suit are J. Roy, Ella, Donald, Clinton R. and Marilyn Pridmore, J. H. Langford Inc., Circle Oaks Investments Inc., Irene W. Haynes, Nancy Lee and East Sierra Development Associates.

Interest Down

WASHINGTON (UPI)—The Federal Home Loan Bank Board reports that interest rates on new mortgages during March averaged 7.52 per cent.

Two Have Pot Charges Dismissed

A Marin Municipal Court judge has dismissed charges of growing marijuana and having narcotics paraphernalia against two San Anselmo men, but a third was bound over to superior court on the marijuana charge.

Judge Robert W. Smallman said there was insufficient evidence to prosecute Marvin Joe Shuck, 25, and Fred Joseph St. Arnault, 19, but ruled enough evidence was presented to try 28-year-old Charles Galbraith Carmalt.

He was ordered to appear for arraignment in superior court May 3.

The three were charged with the felony cultivation charge and the misdemeanor paraphernalia count last month after San Anselmo police said they saw marijuana plants growing inside a window of their house at 135 Redwood Road.

Police allegedly found 10 marijuana plants growing there plus several pipes, three hypodermic needles, a plastic container of marijuana seeds and cigarette papers.

Tablets, Cash Taken

Dr. Lawrence Saunders told Petaluma police yesterday his office at 148 Keller Street had been burgled with 50 seconal tablets and an undetermined amount of cash taken.

Bill To Kill Utility Advertising Killed

SACRAMENTO (UPI) —The Senate has killed a bill to prohibit public utilities from doing any advertising that would encourage the increased consumption of light, heat or power.

After a brief floor debate Wednesday in which opponents denounced the bill as a "backdoor" approach to conservation of energy and natural resources, the measure by Sen. Alfred E. Alquist, D-San Jose, was defeated on a 16-18 vote.

Greener grass ...and a guarantee!

With Park 100 Lawn Seed—blended especially for Bay Area growing conditions—you get a greener lawn and a money-back guarantee. If Park 100 doesn't perform to your expectations, Northrup King will refund the full purchase price.

What makes Park 100 work is a combination of grasses: two improved narrow-leafed ryegrasses, Pelo and NK 100, plus Park Kentucky Bluegrass and creeping red fescue. They're precisely blended for even appearance, rich green color and controlled growth (less mowing!). Other benefits are summarized by Bay Area residents who've used Park 100:

"It mows very easily—there is no browning of the leaf tips." "Park 100 is the most uniform grass I've seen for establishing a lawn from the seedling stage." "It just filled in so good that we haven't had any weed problems." Buy Northrup King's Park 100 Lawn Seed, and have a greener lawn this year.

Meany In Attack On Profits

WASHINGTON (UPI) —AFL-CIO President George Meany used the government's own statistics today to try to prove his claim that President Nixon's wage-price controls are holding down pay increases while allowing prices to skyrocket.

In testimony prepared for a hearing by the Joint Economic Committee of Congress, Meany asked the lawmakers to take the issue away from Nixon, revise the control machinery and impose a tax on "excess profits."

"The administration has proven its incompetence in these areas," Meany said. "It is up to the Congress to restore the confidence of the American people in the American economy."

ECONOMIC STATISTICS

Citing economic statistics produced by the government, Meany said the system established by Nixon in mid-November to contain both price and wage increases has demonstrated a bias against working people.

He said the figures show:

In December, January and February, the consumer price index rose at an annual rate of 4.9 per cent—exactly equal to its performance from May through July, before Nixon froze prices and wages on Aug. 15.

Wholesale prices rose at a 5.1 per cent annual rate in the first three months of this year, compared to an annual rate of 5.3 per cent before Nixon's August actions.

From December through March, according to a wage index which "tends to overstate increases in wage rates," wages rose at a yearly rate of 6 per cent.

PROFITS ATTACKED

Since productivity—output per manhour—has been rising rapidly, as it always does in a recovery period, Meany said, industries are reaping undeserved profits. Instead of raising prices, he said, they should be keeping them stable.

Consequently, he said, after-tax corporate profits were up 19 per cent in the second half of 1971 and profits of the nation's 100 largest corporations rose 76 per cent in all of last year.

All of this, he said, proves both the ineffectiveness of the administration's anti-inflation program and "its favoritism to business, against the interests of the consumer and worker."

"Look at the record of these past 39 months," Meany said. "Unemployment, tax bonanzas to business, persistent economic slack and continuing, huge budget deficits have been added to inflation, which still plagues the American people."

Pain Killer Ads Called Misleading

WASHINGTON (UPI) —The Federal Trade Commission (FTC) says 36 cents of every dollar consumers spend for 10 leading headache medicines is used for advertising which in turn deceives the buyer with unproven or misleading claims.

To purge the public mind of this alleged deception, the FTC envisions Anacin, Bufferin and Excedrin commercials devoted exclusively to confessions that the products haven't been proven any better than aspirin, and Bayer commercials acknowledging that other aspirins may be just as good.

"Over the years these companies, through intensive advertising efforts, have given consumers the misleading impression that there are significant therapeutic differences among these products," Robert Pitofsky, director of the FTC's Bureau of Consumer Protection, told a news conference Wednesday.

As a result, Pitofsky said, "consumers pay significantly more" to get the advertised brands. Much of the money, he said, is pumped into more deceptive advertising which has garnered two-third of the $330 million analgesic market for three companies which make the 10 products.

Pitofsky said $80 million was spent to advertise the 10 products in 1970—36 per cent of their total sales.

The companies and their respective products are American Home Products (Anacin and Arthritis Pain Formula); Bristol-Myers (Bufferin, Excedrin and Excedrin PM); and Sterling Drug (Bayer Aspirin, Bayer Children's Aspirin, Cope, Vanquish and Midol).

Pitofsky said all 10 products are based on aspirin and there is no proof the other ingredients do much good, if any.

Sterling Drug and Bristol-Myers issued statements strongly contesting the FTC allegations and indicating they would fight the case in court. If they do, the allegedly misleading ads can continue until the case is settled, perhaps years from now, by the Supreme Court.

Novato Schools Set Pre-Registration

Pre-registration of kindergarten pupils for the coming school year will be held from 9:30 a.m. to noon Tuesday at all elementary schools in the Novato Unified School District office, the district office announced today.

Children must be 5 years of age on or before Dec. 2, 1972, to be eligible. Parents must bring a birth certificate or affadavit of birth.

Reagan Setback On Trustee Nominations

SACRAMENTO (UPI) —The Senate Rules committee has handed Gov. Ronald Reagan an unexpected setback by holding up the appointment of two Republicans to the State College Board of Trustees.

Opponents asserted the nominees, attorney Frank Adams of Piedmont and construction executive Roy Brophy of Sacramento, would "perpetuate" what they called the board's failure to adequately represent minorities, women, youth and the poor.

"The issue of representation of the board is a legitimate issue," Rules chairman James R. Mills, D-San Diego, told Brophy and Adams Wednesday after 13 witnesses trooped forward during a two-hour hearing to recommend against Senate confirmation of the pair.

Usually, the committee grants routine approval for confirmation of gubernatorial appointees. But on a voice vote without dissent, the three Democrats and two Republicans agreed to take no action on Adams and Brophy.

The committee indicated, however, it would take another look at them next week when two other nominees, Mrs. Jeanette Ritchie of Menlo Park and Robert Beaver of Fullerton, are scheduled to appear. All are Republicans.

Mills told Brophy and Adams, a former president of the California Republican Assembly, that he intends to vote against their appointment. But Sen. Stephen P. Teale, D-Rail Road Flat, announced he plans to recommend confirmation of Brophy.

It takes 27 favorable Senate votes to confirm a trustee. Democrats currently outnumber Republicans 21 to 18.

Witness after witness, including state college student body presidents, said they had no personal quarrel with either nominee but asserted they reflected the board's currently mostly white, Republican and over-50 composition.

Art Bierman, president of the United Professors of California, a union, told the committee that the board "in no way" can be said to be "representative of the people of California."

"The trustees are and therefore represent white, older, male Republican professionals or business managers," he said. "The views and values of this narrow and unrepresentative group prevail in the consideration of trustee business."

James Hirabayashi, dean of ethnic studies at San Francisco State, said approval of Brophy and Adams would "confirm" a generally held belief among minorities that the "educational system is unresponsive" to them.

Sen. Robert Stevens, R-Los Angeles, challenged the accuracy of some opponents' assertions, noting that in the past six years under Reagan the trustees have approved such innovative projects as the Economic Opportunity Program for economically disadvantaged students.

He declared it was "intellectually dishonest" to suggest as did Robert Smith, a San Francisco State professor, that Republicans would vote as a "bloc" on any single issue.

But Robert Arellanes, coordinator of ethnic studies at Sacramento State, insisted that the "board is shot through with political appointments and people of particular political persuasions."

Joe Hay, lobbyist for state college students, urged the committee to impose a "moratorium" on approval of Reagan's nominees to the board "until a more representative group of the people of California is presented by the governor."

Brophy and Adams will continue as "interim" trustees until the Senate decides their disposition. Or, Reagan could withdraw their nomination.

Adams told the committee, "I think I can be fair-minded and understanding of minority groups." Brophy assured the lawmakers, "The fact that I am a Republican goes no further than the gavel."

Adams, Brophy, Beaver and Mrs. Ritchie were nominated to succeed Phebe Conley of Fresno and William Norris of Pasadena, whose terms expired and Dudley Swim of Carmel and Guy Warren of Hayward, who died.

Police Arrest San Rafaelan

Lanny Irvin Johnson, 19, of San Rafael was arraigned yesterday in Marin Municipal Court on a charge of burglarizing a van in San Rafael Feb. 11.

Johnson was arrested Tuesday by San Rafael police on a warrant after fingerprints lifted from the broken wing window of the vehicle were matched with Johnson's.

Johnson was seen sitting on his car next to the van at the county club bowling alley when the owner returned to find his vehicle had been broken into.

$812,494 — Top Salary During 1971

NEW YORK (UPI)—ITT Chairman Harold S. Geneen's salary last year was $812,494, making him the highest paid U.S. executive, according to the Gallagher Presidents' Report.

Henry Ford II was the second highest paid executive, earning $689,000, followed by Ford President Lee Iacocca, $675,000.

The top executives of America's 47 top companies got pay boosts averaging 14.4 per cent in 1971, increasing the average compensation of chairmen to $346,744, of presidents to $288,425 and of top vice presidents to $242,208, Gallagher's said.

Some top executives had their pay doubled or more during the year. Among these, Gallagher listed Charles Branch, president of Dow Chemical, raised 196 per cent to $305,089; President Ed Cole of General Motors, raised 121 per cent to $497,534, and Chairman A. P. Fontaine of Bendix, raised 130 per cent to $280,664.

Some salaries were reduced. Chairman Neil McElroy of Procter & Gamble was reduced 22.5 per cent to $258,333; Chairman John Harper of Alcoa 14.2 per cent to $256,500 and Continental Oil President John McLean 16.6 per cent to $258,701.

MOVING RIGHT ALONG

Renovations to Fairfax's 46-year-old city hall continued yesterday with City Administrator Robert E. Crowe predicting the work will be done "in about a month." Next phase of the two-year civic center project will be construction of a new fire station, then demolition of the old station, leaving portions of the present building for added police department space.

Panelists Agree On Vets' Jobs

By JEFF GREER

A Vietnam veteran, an employer and three government spokesmen all agreed today that returning veterans should be given preference in hiring.

Nevertheless, one official told the Radio KTIM "Sounding Board" audience that the unemployment rate among returning veterans is higher than the national average and that there are 9,000 jobless Vietnam veterans in the Bay Area. The broadcast apparently found at least one veteran a job.

The speakers were Philip Parker of San Anselmo, a job-seeking veteran; employer Harold B. Wilde, president of Harver Industries in San Rafael; Robert R. Souza, Northern California veterans representative with the Human Resources Development Agency; Robert C. Beebe, veterans employment representative with the state Human Resources office in San Rafael, and Robert G. Waldman, assistant veterans services officer for Marin County.

California veterans have a 7.2 per cent unemployment rate compared with a 5.8 per cent rate for all state residents, Souza noted. He said stepped-up efforts had reduced the veterans' jobless rate from 9.8 per cent a year ago. Returning veterans range from 20 to 29 years old, with the average age of 23, but the younger ones show a disproportionately high jobless rate, particularly if a minority member, Souza said.

Parker reported that despite four years of military experience in hospital administration and finance, he found potential employers were wary of his disability — a heart condition — and often tended to hire women rather than men as bookkeepers.

He urged the employers "give veterans a chance to prove themselves" instead of hiring others with more formal job qualifications.

Panel moderator Kitty Oppenheimer reported that after the program Parker was offered a job as a trainee bookkeeper at $500 a month.

Businessman Wilde said that employers often believe that men having to support a family would require higher pay than women filling the same job, and that men more often switch jobs after being trained by the company. Disabled job-seekers often cannot pass physcial examinations for the insurance employers must carry, he added. But Wilde agreed with the idea, dating back to George Washington's day, that the veteran was entitled to hiring preference.

The government officials outlined a broad list of services available to veterans and employers. They described unemployment compensation, on-the-job training programs in which the state pays part of the veterans' wages, G.I. educational programs and intensive placement programs. Information is available from the county veterans service office at the Civic Center, from state Human Resources Development offices in San Rafael and San Francisco, from the Veterans Administration and other agencies, they said.

The program will be rebroadcast at 10:05 a.m. Sunday.

Stolen Property Count Dismissed

A Marin Municipal Court judge has dismissed a charge of possessig stolen property against Darrell William Drennan, 51, of El Cerrito.

Judge Peter Allen Smith refused to hold Drennan on the charge bacause he felt evidence against him was improperly gathered.

In granting a defense motion to suppress the evidence, Smith said police should have obtained a search warrant before raiding the San Rafael motel room where Drennan was staying.

From the room police seized a television set with its serial numbers scratched out, a tape recorder and a projector believed stolen in a school burglary in Modesto.

Drennan was charged with possessing stolen property and a misdemeanor count of having property with the serial number removed following the January arrest.

Housing Group Plans Meeting

The annual general meeting and election of officers of the Alto-Sutton Manor Association will by May 24 at 8 p.m. in the Alto firehouse, according to association member Sara Ruffner.

The association's annual picnic will be held June 3 at Boyle Park beginning at 1 p.m., she said.

At last night's meeting, she said the association's board endorsed a regional park proposed to the board of supervisors, but asked that the issue be put on the November ballot.

Senate Advances State Welfare Takeover Bill

SACRAMENTO (UPI) — A Senate committee has approved legislation requiring the state to assume full financing and administration of welfare after supporters said it would remove a $450 million tax burden from home owners.

On identical 8-2 votes Wednesday, the Senate Health and Welfare Committee passed and sent to the Finance Committee two measures by Sen. Alfred Alquist, D-San Jose, that would effect the changeover. One would do it by statute and the other through a constitutional amendment.

Sen. Ralph Dills, D-Gardena, told his colleagues, "We've talked about property tax relief for a long time and done nothing, so let's do it now by picking up this tab."

The "no" votes on both measures were cast by Sens. Peter Behr, R-San Rafael, and Jack Schrade, R-San Diego.

Boas Attacks New Photostating Policy

Democratic congressional candidate Roger Boas yesterday attacked as "incredible" a new Treasury Department regulation requiring all banks to keep photostatic records of their customers' personal checks.

"This is carrying big brotherism too far," the San Francisco supervisor declared. "Government encroachment on our private lives must be stopped and the trend reversed," he declared.

"It strikes me as just incredible that the government plans to go sneaking about, peeking into our private, personal checking accounts," Boas declared. "I hope we don't have to wait for years of litigation in the courts to resolve this issue — Congress should take immediate steps to prevent this newest governmental scheme to invade our privacy," he said.

Boas is seeking the Siyth Congressional District seat held by Republican William S. Mailliard. The incumbent congressman voted for the Bank Secrecy Act, which authorized the new regulations, and has endorsed its provisions as necessary to control criminal activity.

A Bank of America official confirmed Tuesday that the regulations will go into effect July 1, and will extend as well to dealings in securities, certain credit usage and travelers' check purchases. Federal officials can subpoena the records for criminal and tax investigation.

IRS Hiring

Muir Beach New Director Is Selected

A director of the Muir Beach Community Services District resigned last night under fire from county officials because her husband is employed by the district as general manager.

Mary Mosteller resigned her position, but the board reappointed her husband, Gordon, to his $500-per-month job, according to board chairman Bruce E. Harlow.

Appointed to take her place was Doris Clark, of 50 Starbuck Drive, Muir Beach, wife of San Francisco surgeon Edward W. Clark.

Also, Director Gerald N. Pearlman missed a third consecutive meeting last night, and will be replaced at the district's May 17 meeting, said Harlow.

County auditor-controller Michael Mitchell, the man who first pointed out the possible conflict of interest in a letter to the board early this month, said today Mrs. Mosteller resigned "in the absence of any state legislation to allow family operation" of a community services district.

After Mitchell's letter to the district, members of the Muir Beach Improvement Association had voted to support the Mostellers, and asked county officials to find some method by which both could be retained in their jobs.

The district's water rates were raised at last night's meeting from $5 for the first 1,000 cubic feet to $5 for the first 500 cubic feet and one cent for each cubic foot after 500 and 1.5 cents for each cubic foot after 1,000 feet, according to district secretary Hazel Melo.

She said the new rates would take effect May 1.

The district also agreed to buy a used fire truck for $375 under terms of an agreement worked out by the county attorney.

How to get the most out of a dishwasher:

Hold dirty dishes in it until there's a full load, instead of frequent washing, and you'll save water, detergent and heat.

Let it clean pots and pans. New machines have a special cycle to remove heavy accumulations of grease and food.

Sanitize baby bottles, dishes, pots and silverware in it, since it uses hotter water than your hands can stand (because it dries, too, there are no dirty dishtowels).

Store dirty dishes in it—out of sight—instead of in your sink.

Use the "dry" or "warm" setting to warm dishes.

Clean house with it. A dishwasher can take over miscellaneous chores such as cleaning light fixtures and ashtrays.

Women who work outside the home in particular rely on a dishwasher to help keep house. The cost of about three cents a day to run one is a bargain. PG and E

Oil Company Phasing Out Its Billboards

LOS ANGELES (UPI)—Atlantic Richfield, one of the nation's major oil companies, announced Wednesday it was "phasing out" use of about 1,000 advertising billboards in 36 states in the interest of highway beautification.

Company president Thornton Bradshaw said the action went further than requirements of the National Highway Beautification Act.

"We as a company are fully in accord with the aims of the act," Bradshaw said. "While many of those billboards may not be illegal under the act, we feel strongly that we must make this contribution toward improving the attractiveness of the natural scenery along streets and roads across the country."

Land Proposed For Hospital In Petaluma

The Petaluma Hospital District board yesterday heard land on North McDowell Boulevard proposed as the site for the new hospital.

District administrator Joseph E. Horner said architects Stone, Maracini and Patterson recommended the board accept the offer of Qantas Development Corp. for free land on North McDowell adjacent to Lucchesi Park.

Horner said the architects advised that other free land on Adobe Road offered by Land Investors Research would not be as practical because of the proximity of the Skyranch Airport and proposed golf courses. The McDowell site was recommended for its better access to Highway 101 and availability of water and sewer services.

Horner said the board delayed site selection until soil testing reports are complete on both sites. A decision is expected on May 2.

College Trustees Given A Bleak Funding Report

Marin Community College District trustees last night glumly listened to a prediction that the district will be facing a $1.5 million annual deficit in five years unless costs are cut or new sources of income found.

In a report which gave budget predictions for the next five years, Business Manager Norman Bird said, "The 1976-77 year has a disastrous ending with a $1.5 million deficit."

Bird had worked out his predictions at the request of the board, which now has set workshop sessions to find ways of avoiding future financial disaster.

Although Bird predicted that the college district will run in the black through 1975-76, reserves will be much less than earlier estimated, he said.

A 25-cent tax override approved by the voters in 1970 which became effective this year will be sufficient to keep the district in the black for four years if part of the money is put into reserves for two or three years, he said.

However, after the new Indian Valley Colleges in Novato, slated to open in the fall of 1974, go into operation, increased operating costs are expected to cause financial trouble for the district, which now operates only College of Marin.

Byrd explained today that inflation, both in material and personnel, as well as additional staff positions for the two campuses would make it impossible for the college district to operate in five years on the income expected.

He said he based his predictions on assumptions about income and expenditures, all of which could change or turn out to be inaccurate.

Major changes in assumptions used in making the latest predictions, as compared to those made in 1971, he said, include opening of Indian Valley Colleges classes at other locations prior to 1974 and an enlarged staff for the district because of a new district organization plan.

Trustees will wrestle with the problems predicted by Byrd in a workshop at 8 p.m. Wednesday in the college board room.

The Marin Community College District board also:

CLASSES — Approved two classes — conversational Spanish and creative writing — to be given by Indian Valley Colleges at Novato High School this summer.

FEDERAL — Accepted a grant of $23,413 in federal funds for a "systems approach to community development" project and agreed to spend matching funds from district money.

LEAVE — Granted the request of instructor Judy Dunlop for a leave during the 1972-73 academic year.

SABBATICAL — Approved a sabbatical leave for spring semester, 1973, for professor Cornelius Weber.

BUSES — Learned from student body President Gregory Fearon that it seemed likely that the Golden Gate Bridge District will provide additional busing service to the College of Marin.

A New No-Fault Bill Is Offered

SACRAMENTO (UPI) —A Democratic Senator has proposed a no-fault automobile insurance plan under which a driver's own insurance plan would pay his benefits regardless of who caused an accident.

Sen. Alfred H. Song, D-Monterey Park, told a news conference Wednesday his proposal would reduce premiums and unclog the courts. He said the plan has been amended into a Senate measure already introduced.

The legislature is considering several no-fault insurance proposals this year.

Under Song's proposal, up to $5,000 in compensation will be provided for medical expenses, loss of wages, loss of services, survivor benefits and funeral expenses.

Tam High Teacher Facing New Charges

The Tamalpais Union High School District board voted unanimously today to add charges of immoral conduct against English teacher Kenneth A. Anderson, and suspend him immediately.

Supt. Wilber D. Hawkins said the charge evolved from evidence in Anderson's depositions and that of a high school student Hawkins refused to identify.

According to Hawkins, the immoral conduct charge carries with it the provision of immediate suspension. He said that if Anderson does not ask for a hearing within 30 days on the immoral conduct charge he will be automatically fired.

Hawkins said the hearing does not actually have to take place with the 30-day period, but must be requested.

The superintendent said Anderson attended the 7:30 a.m. breakfast meeting of the board at a Greenbrae restaurant, and was handed notice of suspension. Hawkins said Anderson took the notice and left, without a word.

Anderson had been working at Tamalpais High School in a nonteaching position, doing curriculum work in freshman English, since September.

Anderson was not available for comment this morning. He had not reported to Tamalpais High School by 10 a.m.

Anderson's attorney, Carl B. Shapiro, was in court, and also unavailable for comment. William O. Weissich, hired March 20 by the board to help Asst. County Counsel Richard V. Godino with the firing, refused to comment on the case.

The immoral conduct charge is the third general one lodged against Anderson by the board, the others being unfitness for service and persistent violation of or refusal to obey prescribed school rules, according to Hawkins.

The board initially voted May 13, 1971, to fire the 31-year-old teacher, and has been attempting to do so ever since. Because he is a tenured teacher, the board cannot fire him without a trial.

March 16 attorneys for the district questioned Anderson about the three southern Marin bombings last year. Four days later they hired Weissich.

Hawkins said he expects all the necessary depositions to be completed in the next two weeks, and then the case will go to trial. He made no estimate when the trial would actually begin.

7:57 a.m., Novato — Fire in television set at home of Lois J. Cannon, 1305 Denlyn Street, apparently caused by a short circuit; out on arrival of firemen.

9:13 a.m., Larkspur — Fire damaged redwood trees and a fence at the Hiven Nursery, 2 Ward Street; cause unknown.

12:12 p.m., San Rafael — Fire which started in a garbage enclosure under the home of Steve Sommers of 15 Miraflores Avenue, destroyed the house; damage estimated at $35,000 to building and $10,000 to contents.

2:50 p.m., Belvedere — A fallen power line at 214 Bayview Avenue started a small fire in a tree; out on arrival of firemen.

Median Prices Range Is Wide On Marin Homes

The median prices of homes in Marin range from a low of $24,400 in Fairfax to a high of $50,000 plus in Belvedere, Ross and Tiburon.

The figures were compiled by the Marin County Chamber of Commerce and Visitors Bureau on owner-occupied, single family homes on the basis of the 1970 United States Census on housing.

Median prices of homes in the 11 cities and in the unincorporated areas of the county are as follows:

Belvedere $50,000 plus; Corte Madera $31,900; Fairfax $24,400; Larkspur $41,900; Mill Valley $36,200; Novato $28,800; Ross $50,000 plus; San Anselmo $28,500; San Rafael $38,000; Sausalito $48,300; Tiburon $50,000 plus; and unincorporated areas of Marin $33,900.

Bound Over On Felony Charge

Carlos John Flores, 35, of San Francisco has been bound over to superior court on charges of felony drunken driving and marijuana stemming from a crash on the Golden Gate Bridge.

During the accident, Dec. 12, Julia May Langville, 52, of Guerneville was killed and a Larkspur man and wife were injured.

The California Highway Patrol said the wreck occurred when a car driven by Flores crossed the center line and crashed into three northbound cars.

Deepening Split Seen In U.S.-Japan Ties

WASHINGTON (UPI) —A leading China scholar predicted today that U.S.-Japanese relations would continue to deteriorate as the United States moves to improve relations with China.

A. Doak Barnett, a senior fellow at the Brookings Institution in Washington, discussed China's foreign relations policies with a group of other panelists during the second day of a three-day convention of the American Society of Newspaper Editors (ASNE).

Barnett said: "I think we should continue to show originality and effort in continuing our relations with China. We should try to open up various subjects with them including basic arms control and disarmament issues."

Barnett said he was "cautiously optimistic" on the future of U.S.-China relations. He said however, he thought "we can expect deteriorating relations with Japan over this. I think we should give high priority to repairing various grievances. We can't allow a U.S.-Japan split to occur."

There have been increasing tensions in recent months between Japan and the United States over trade relations and a feeling by the Japanese that President Nixon hasn't consulted them sufficiently on various Asian diplomatic moves.

The panel was moderated by Robert Keatley of the Wall Street Journal. Also speaking to the editors was Prof. Paul T. K. Lin director of the Center for East Asian Studies at McGill University in Toronto; Prof. Robert A. Scalapino of the University of California at Berkeley, and Marshall Green assistant secretary of State for Far Eastern affairs.

Lin reviewed a history of U.S.-Chinse relations, observing that "trends in China are being set not by Chairman Mao himself but by hundreds of millions of people with a memory of the past."

Scalapino said China's Prime Minister Chou En-lai, has asserted that in our new relationship there can be and there need be no abandonment of principles and no desertion of allies by the United States. The acid test of this doctrine will be our willingness to maintain our military protection against external threats and our economic interaction with the people of Taiwan if events should unfold in such a fashion as to cause this state to evolve toward legal as well as de facto independence."

The discussion was to be followed by appearances by Democratic presidential candidates Sens. Henry M. Jackson of Washington, George S. McGovern of South Dakota and Gov. George C. Wallace of Alabama. Sen. Hubert H. Humphrey, campaigning in Pennsylvania, cancelled his appearance.

During a panel discussion Wednesday on press rights vs. press responsibilities, the editors continued a day-long discussion which was sparked by publication in 1971 of the controversial Pentagon Papers and disclosures by columnist Jack Anderson of the administration's position on the India-Pakistan conflict plus a current investigation of acting Attorney General Richard G. Kleindienst.

Anderson told the group he felt that too many government documents have been kept secret when it would have been in the national interest to make them public. He added that people he has talked to say that 95 to 98 per cent of secret government documents should be declassified.

"It's not national security, it's political security," Anderson said. "We're not supposed to be engaged in a conspiracy with the government to cover up their blunders."

Prison Term To Marinite In Pot Case

I-J Special Report

SAN FRANCISCO — Attorney Harry J. Kreamer of Bolinas was sentenced yesterday to a maximum of six years in federal prison in connection with confiscation of large amounts of marijuana in Marin County.

Kreamer, sentenced in U.S. District Court, had pleaded guilty to felony conspiracy to possess 800 pounds of marijuana seized last Oct. 17 in San Rafael's Northgate Industrial Park.

Kreamer, former law clerk to U.S. District Judge Stanley A. Weigel, also had pleaded guilty to a misdemeanor charge of carrying about 20 pounds of pot in his car in Novato on Aug. 16.

In the Northgate case, the huge pot haul was found in a truck. Agents said at the time the marijuana had been flown into Oakland International Airport from Miami.

District Court Judge William M. Byrne, visiting from Los Angeles, yesterday ordered Kreamer to undergo 90 days of psychiatric observation after which he will be returned for possible modification of sentence.

Car Equipment Gone From Novato Cars

Auto equipment valued at more than $335 was taken in a series of auto burglaries near apartments on Posada Del Sol and Alameda Del Prado late Tuesday or early yesterday, Novato police reported.

Nine cars were entered and equipment taken from seven, officers said. The losses included auto stereos, tire and rim, tachometer and tools.

House Blaze Does $45,500 In Damages

A fire which started under the deck of a house at 15 Miraflores Avenue in San Rafael destroyed the residence and sent billowing smoke and flames over the horizon before it was extinguished.

A neighbor, of the house occuped by Steve Sommers and his wife, first spotted the blaze at 12:12 p.m. and attempted to put it out with a garden hose while his wife called the fire department.

Emil Bernauer said he thought he had the fire, which started in a garbage enclosure area, extinguished when it seemed to explode.

By the time two fire trucks and 15 firemen made it up the narrow winding road to the house, the residence was completely engulfed in flames.

Fire Marshall Kenneth Mazza said today that Sommers told him he had cleaned out his fireplace yesterday and placed the ashes in a box which he had put in the garbage area. Near the garbage enclosure was a gas meter, Mazza said.

Neither Sommers nor his wife was home when the fire broke out, but firemen found a dead dog inside the house. Another family dog was missing, they said.

Firemen spent more than two hours mopping up the fire.

Damage was estimated at $35,000 to the house and $10,000 to the contents, Mazza said.

I-J In Error

The Independent-Journal erred yesterday, in reporting that Minnie Dinucci, nominated for Marin's senior citizen of the year from San Anselmo, devoted volunteer service to Ross General Hospital. She has worked at Center Medical Hospital in Kentfield.

CALLING ALL
CAMERA FANS

METER MAGIC

These days of built-in exposure meters have a tendency to let the magic meter do all our thinking for us. But the truth is that no exposure meter, inside or outside the camera, of the reflected light or incident light type, can provide all the answers for the creative photographer.

The exposure just reads; it doesn't think. It takes a reading of the average of light which it measures, and automatically tells you what exposure to use for that average light level (or automatically sets the camera).

But there are many occasions when you don't want just an average reading. Maybe you want to concentrate on a figure, not the background. or you are faced with strong contrasts in which case you have to choose to read either the deep shadows or the highlights. In such circumstances, you have to take your reading from flesh tones, or from the area you want to emphasize.

Whether you want a camera that does just about everything for you, or a precision instrument for your own creative improvising, you'll find the right selection of cameras and accessories in our big display. Come in ... for everything photographic.

More Money Sought For Petaluma

The Petaluma Recreation, Music and Parks Commission last night agreed to ask for an additional $64,000 from Sonoma County to develop a park adjacent to the boat launching ramp.

The Sonoma County Board of Supervisors rejected plans for the county to build an athletic complex of baseball diamonds and a soccer field at the county park, saying it would serve mainly city residents rather than the entire district.

Commissioner Raymond Boccaleoni gained commission support to go back to the supervisors to get at least another $64,000 for park development. The county has already allocated $25,000 for grading, but refused any other money commitments.

Boccaleoni said he believed the county should at least pay for road access, restrooms, landscaping and fencing estimated at $64,000. He said the city and sports organizations could then do the remainder of the work.

Boccaleoni said he would remind the supervisors that the Petaluma district is the second largest tax contributor in the county, but has not received its share of county park plans.

San Anselmo Man Accused Of Threat

A 33-year-old San Anselmo man arrested Tuesday after allegedly threatening a police officer with a butcher knife has been arraigned in Marin Municipal Court. He is scheduled to plead Wednesday.

Everett Americo Cirio of 211 San Anselmo Avenue was arrested when police answered a report of a family squabble at his home at 2:45 a.m. Police said they had calmed the couple when Cirio suddenly grabbed the knife. He dropped it when the officer drew his gun.

Woman Candidate Is Top Novato Spender

Dorothy P. Young, lone woman candidate, was the top spender among the three winners in the Novato City Council election last week, according to campaign expenditure statements filed at Novato City Hall.

Mrs. Young listed contributions totaling, $1,990, including $1,290 from Novato Citizens for Responsible Government and $250 from the Century Club of Marin.

Her expenditures were listed at $2,727.

Fred F. Ruegg, the top vote getter in the election, listed both expenditures and contributions at $2,700, with the largest contributions $800 from the Century Club of Marin and $650 from Novato Citizens for Responsible Government.

David Price Jones listed contributions at $1,045, coming from a large number of small contributors, and expenses at $1,442.

The eight losing candidates have until May 16 to file their campaign statements, according to the city manager's office.

Marin Court Jury Trial Progresses

Jury selection continued today in Marin Superior Court in the murder trial of Russell Gilbert Wonnacott, who is accused of shooting his estranged wife's boyfriend.

The 48-year-old Eureka man is charged with the killing of Charles Patrick Ely, 37, of San Rafael.

The shooting happened in Wonnacott's room at the Holiday Inn in San Rafael after Wonnacott, his wife and their two children had dinner with Ely at the hotel.

According to police, the couple and Ely were discussing finances and a divorce when Wonnacott pulled a gun from a desk drawer and fired six shots into Ely after a struggle for the weapon.

Wives Protest To Liberation At One Plant

NEW ORLEANS (UPI)— Avondale Shipyard officials say equal rights for women include sharing toilet facilities with men at the yard, but the male workers' wifes say that's carrying women's liberation too far.

"My interpretation of the law is that women are equal and they should use the same facilities," said Walter Barrios, Avondale personnel manager. He has ordered male workers to share the toilet and dressing room facilities with two female welders.

But Barrios said Tuesday a welder's wife called and complained and said all the other wives were upset too.

"That's the way it goes," Barrios said. "We're not causing any undue hardship."

He said none of the men had complained.

Rock Concert At Stafford Park Booted

The Marin County Parks and Recreation Commission rejected a request yesterday to use the new Stafford Lake Park facilities for a rock music concert next month.

According to Michael Whitehoffer, who made the request, a rock concert is being planned to raise money for the Marin County Jail Prisoners Fund.

Commissioners agreed with member Leroy M. Gerner that the park is too new to risk the damage which could result from a rock concert.

He suggested the promoters of the affair approach the board of supervisors for use of the Civic Center fairgrounds near the lagoon.

(A spokesman for the inmates' welfare fund said today he hadn't heard of the rock concert and added that the prisoners' fund is financially healthy. It is financed by profits from a small store at the jail.)

Report Drug Deaths

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI)— The American Social Health Association reported today 1,726 persons died from narcotics overdoses last year in 14 major cities, more than half of them in New York.

Woman, Boy Cited For Civic Duties

A Petaluma woman and a 12-year-old Sonoma boy were honored with public service awards last night at the 66th Petaluma Chamber of Commerce annual dinner.

Irene Sasso received the "woman of the year" award for her community activities serving schools and families in need. Mrs. Sasso annually leads the Christmas Cheer Program which delivers food, clothing and toys to needy families.

Ace Felder, a sixth grade student, received the "young man of the year" award for his efforts in collecting Betty Crocker coupons. Felder collected 800,000 coupons to buy a kidney machine for Sonoma County and distributed more than a million coupons to other cities in the Bay Area.

New chamber officers were formally installed at the dinner and outgoing president Arthur L. Lafranchi received a plaque. Kent Brandley, Petaluma Argus-Courier reporter, received the honest reporting award for 1971.

Pumping Station Nearly Complete

The new pumping station on Francisco Boulevard will be completed "within two weeks," the San Rafael Sanitation District board was told last night.

District Administrator Norris M. Rawles told the board the facility, located near Grand Avenue, "is 99 per cent complete." The $496,000 project was begun in February 1971 when a contract was awarded Clearwater Hydromech Corp. of Burlingame.

The new station is to replace another which was displaced by work on Highway 101.

The board also directed Rawles to prepare plans for architectural improvements of the Loch Lomond pump station on South San Pedro Road near the Loch Lomond subdivision, Rawles reported.

China's Table Tennis Stars Put On Show

UNITED NATIONS (UPI)— Suits and ties made way for sneakers, shorts and T-shirts at the United Nations Wednesday night when China's touring table tennis stars put on exhibition matches before 500 persons crowded into the Trusteeship Council chambers.

The unprecedented event brought cheers and applause from spectators who paid from $5 to $50 per ticket to watch the matches. The audience, crowded around a makeshift stage that prompted mild complaints from one of the Chinese players, included U.S. Ambassador and Mrs. George Bush, Chinese Ambassador Huang Hua, U. N. Secretary General Kurt Waldheim and other U.N. diplomats and staff members.

The Chinese, whose national sport is table tennis, are the world champions and it was no surprise that they won both individual matches. Lon Hsiuying defeated Marguerite Burnett of Guyana, a member of the U.N. team, 21-14 in the ladies' match. George Braithwaite, star of the U.N. team who works in the conference services publishing division was beaten 21-18 by Ho Tsu-pin.

It was the Chinese playing each other that brought the most applause. Several spectators leapt from their seats in shouts of admiration during exhibitions by championship women's doubles players and two men's singles matches.

The entire performance, with the visitors in red T-shirts and dark shorts and the U.N. team dressed in blue, lasted only about an hour.

During a preliminary tour of the building, one of the players talked briefly through an interpreter to C. V. Narasimhan, U.N. undersecretary general. Narasimhan said later: "He said the court was too small. I told him it was the best we could do. He was willing to make the best of the situation."

President Of Stanford Fires Off Viet Letter

STANFORD (UPI) —Stanford University president Richard W. Lyman has sent a letter to President Nixon protesting the bombing of North Vietnam.

Lyman, speaking as a private citizen, said Wednesday that "the most charitable explanation of the return to bombing of North Vietnam is fear for the safety of American soldiers in the south in the event of South Vietnamese collapse.

"The only way that we are going to bring such fear to an end is to withdraw those troops immediately. At present, they constitute hostages for the safety of the Thieu regime."

Lyman, a historian, said history shows that massive bombing "does not provide a conclusive weapon militarily, and it tends to reinforce the will-to-win of the enemy against whom it is practiced.

Truck Missing From Larkspur

Larkspur police have reported the theft of a rental truck by a San Rafael man.

According to reports, Robert Melvel Hawkins of 420 Canal Street, San Rafael, rented a 16-foot van April 11 from Ken's U-Haul at 2060 Redwood Highway, Larkspur, saying he would return it the 14th.

After waiting five extra days, Kenneth S. Garrick, manager of the rental agency, reported the truck stolen to police yesterday. A check of Hawkins' address revealed he had moved, and the business where he said he worked was closed, police said.

The event will run from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m.

New Antismog Devices Standards Are Adopted

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI)— The California Air Resources Board today adopted minimum standards for new antismog devices which motorists will be required to install on 1966-1970 cars by February of 1974.

The devices, which are not yet on the market, will reduce the emission of oxides of nitrogen—one of the two components of photochemical smog—by at least 20 per cent in small cars and 30 per cent in large ones.

Four manufacturers indicated they would submit applications for approval of devices meeting the smog reduction standards and a $35 installed-cost limit. Representatives of the big four auto makers said they were not going to submit proposals.

When the devices are finally approved by the board after testing, the owners of five million 1966-70 vehicles will be required to have them installed prior to registration in 1974.

Dr. A. J. Haagen-Smit, Air Resources Board chairman, said the reductions were aimed at getting emissions of nitrogen oxides back to the level of pre-1966 cars without smog-control devices.

"The 1966-70 cars already have systems which control hydrocarbons and carbon monoxide," he said. "Auto manufacturers accomplished this by leaning the air-fuel ration and improving combustion within the engine.

"Consequently, the oxides of nitrogen emissions were increased by approximately 50 per cent.

He noted that emissions of hydrocarbons and of oxides of nitrogen are the two pollutants which cause photochemical smog.

Haagen-Smit wanted higher control standards set than those approved by the board. He said nitrogen oxide emissions averaged 1,020 parts per million in pre-1966 cars and rose to 1,500 parts per million in 1966-70 models. Controls went into effect with 1971 models.

Spokesmen for General Motors and Air Quality Products, the two firms with anti-nitrogen oxide devices approved for 1955-65 cars, said they were not submitting applications for devices on 1966-70 models. Both warned that some of the proposed devices could result in exhaust valve burning and urged tests of that possibility.

In opening remarks to the board, Haagen-Smit said smog control devices for used cars were approved with mixed feelings.

"Although the control systems will be beneficial in decreasing smog, they probably will be the subject of considerable complaint from motorists, both for real and imagined reasons," he said.

BEAUTICIAN JIMIDENE Randall of San Rafael applies semipermanent false eyelashes on Susan Sanders of Terra Linda. With the customer in a reclining position the false lashes can be applied in less than a hour's time and will last three to four weeks, depending on the life of the real lash to which they are attached.

Eyelash Implant Painless

By JOAN LISETOR

Pity the men who suffer the agonies described by Sen. William Proxmire, who is undergoing treatment for hair transplants. For women with hirsute vanities there are semipermanent false eyelashes, that can be applied painlessly in less than an hour.

Jimidene Randall, a Marin County beautician, trained to apply the lashes, said they last from three to four weeks.

"They are permanently attached to your lashes by a hypo-allergenic adhesive," she explained. "The reason they do not last forever is that your own lashes fall out, which most people do not realize."

MRS. RANDALL said she can apply the lashes in less than an hour's time if the customer is cooperative.

"With one customer it took me much longer because she asked me to hand her the mirror with every other lash," she said. Another customer falls asleep with her eyes open which speeds up the application considerably.

Time is also determined by the number of lashes desired. Mrs. Randall recommends between 30 and 60, depending on how thick the customer wants them.

"We can alternate between short and long, light and dark and give either a very natural or an artificial look," she said. "I prefer them to sets of false eyelashes because they can give a custom look, which depends on the shape of the eye."

AFTER THE original set is applied fill-ins are available when necessary, the beautician said. As for price, she said, it is less expensive than buying good false eyelashes when figured over a year's time.

And isn't it nice not to have to leave your false eyelashes on the nightstand overnight?

PREPARING TO SPIN

Ginny Lancaster of Santa Rosa (right) demonstrated the ancient art of spinning yarn by hand Tuesday at the San Rafael Library. She guided 5-year-old Jeffrey Anderson as he placed the wool, which was sheared from the lamb, washed and picked, on a carder. The carder makes the wool uniform so that when it is put on the shaft of a spinner, as the one in Miss Lancaster's left hand, it can be spun into yarn. Today Miss Lancaster demonstrated the art of Japanese ink painting for children as a part of the library's observance of National Library Week.

Drive To Improve Animal Care Can Be Helped By Teen-Ager

DEAR HELEN AND SUE:

I went to our animal shelter to look for a missing dog that belonged to a friend. He wasn't there, so I thought I'd take her home a pretty, friendly puppy. The lady in charge said, "That will be $7.00 plus $4.00 for distemper shots."

I then asked her how much it would cost if my friend found her own dog at the shelter and wanted him back. Only a few dollars less!

This dog got out of her back yard because the electric meter man left the gate open, which is the city's fault. Yet the city pound is charging her for another dog — or maybe her own, if they catch him!

I pointed this out and said I could go as high as $1.50 (all I had) for the puppy, but the lady turned me down. So maybe that poor puppy was gassed, because a lot of people don't have $11.00 to spend for a pet.

Sure, the city has to raise money for food and shelter (and the dog-catcher's salary and the gas chamber), but if they'd charge less, maybe they could make more because more people would buy (or reclaim) pets.

Another thing I learned: if you want a cat from the shelter, it has to be "fixed" first and that costs up to $20 for a female. This, with the shot for distemper makes it an awfully expensive animal. I just cried, seeing all those animals waiting to die.

But what can a teen-ager do about it? — SOFT-HEARTED AND SLIM-PURSED

DEAR SHASP:

Your pound has higher-than-average fees. And a teen-ager CAN do something about it, if she gets enough adults and young people interested. A good start is a letter-to-the-editor of your local newspaper. Once published, it will bring many supporters —and perhaps a campaign to divert more tax money toward animal care. — HELEN

P.S. But don't expect EVERYONE on your side. People who vote down school improvements in fear of higher taxes won't, for example, favor more tax money "going to the dogs." — H.

DEAR SOFT HEARTED:

I'm with you. If homeless animals could be "bought" cheap, and "fixed" for maybe half price, a lot of them might live —and it wouldn't cost the taxpayers enough to hurt.

Also, it's kind of like asking ransom when the pound truck picks up an animal, then charges the owner for his return, especially when a city employee leaves the gate open!

Maybe you should mention "dognaping" in your letter-to-the-editor. After all, police don't hold lost kids for a payoff. — SUE

NOTE FROM HELEN:. . .But if a child constantly turns up "lost," police can charge parents with neglect. How about giving animal owners one free "warning," then fining them if their pets are picked up again? — H.

DEAR RAP:

You are so right: a child these days isn't crushed when he discovers he had "premature parents." So why do parents make such a big thing about their wedding date?

I came across my parents' (hidden) wedding license when I was 16. They were married when I was four months old. I wasn't shocked. In fact, I'd heard little hints from relatives. But I wish my folks had told me. It's kind of rough, having to tell THEM you know what they think is a "shameful" secret; and then trying to show them you don't think it is.

They were afraid that if I found out I might put myself down for being illegitimate — or follow in their footsteps. Don't they realize I'M ME, with my own standards — and I'm very proud of THEM? — NO BIG THING

Be our guest in the White House

You will know as much as anyone about what goes on in the White House and in the Presidency by the simple act of reading the I-J. (Only the President and intimates will know more).

UPI A TEAM REPORT

For the I-J, through its United Press International reporters, is virtually "in residence" as much as the President. Which makes you our welcome guest to the White House.

Our reporters are constantly alert to staff and cabinet meetings, to affairs of international import, to the diplomatic front, to the comings and goings which make the White House a world center of significant news. The job is sensitive. It requires a sixth sense to know when news of major concern is about to break. And concern in how to "break" it accurately and without bias.

Be our guest and stay as long as you like. Our columns lead right to the White House.

This is Eugene V. Risher, another member of the UPI team assigned to cover President Nixon. You'll be hearing from him.

MR. AND MRS. WILLIAM R. CASASSA
Married in San Rafael mission

Casassa-Wood Wedding In San Rafael Mission

San Rafael residents Deborah Kay Wood and William Robert Casassa were married Sunday at Mission San Rafael Arcangel. A reception followed at the Marinwood Community Center.

Parents of the bride are Mr. and Mrs. Chester K. Wood of San Rafael, and the bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Casassa, also of San Rafael.

Matron of honor for her sister was Mrs. Keith Stothers of San Jose, and the bridegroom's sister, Donna Casassa; Dianne Lee; and Vicki Sturiale, all of San Rafael, were the bridesmaids.

Gary Casassa was his brother's best man, and guests were ushered to their seats by Clyde Faus of Santa Rosa and Wayne Magliulo anld Louis Gazzoli, both of San Rafael.

The newlyweds will live in San Rafael following a wedding trip to Acapulco, Mexico.

The bride was graduated from San Rafael High School and attended College of Marin. She is employed by California Blue Shield in Fairfax. Chester K. Wood III of Walnut Creek is her brother.

The bridegroom was also graduated from San Rafael High School and also attended College of Marin. He is employed by Marin Cleaners in San Rafael. Lucille Brown of San Rafael is his grandmother.

BIRTHDAY QUIZ

By GORDON B. GREB

Try this quiz on the April 20 58th birthday of Lionel Hampton (1914), jazz musician.

T F 1. Born at Louisville, Kentucky, Lionel grew up in Chicago, where he started out as a drummer in a small amateur band.

T F 2. Graduating to name outfits (like Les Hite and Paul Howard), he took up the vibraphone and started fronting his own band in the early 30's.

T F 3. Spike Jones heard him running a stick across a washboard in Los Angeles and immediately signed him up to play "Der Fuehrer's Face."

T F 4. The first musician to play genuine jazz as a vibraharpist, Lionel Hampton still gets night club engagements for his Big Band sound despite trends to other music.

ANSWERS

1. TRUE — Lionel first played with the "Chicago Defender" Boys' Band.
2. TRUE He was one of the first to jive with Louis Armstrong.
3. FALSE — Benny Goodman heard him and signed him up.
4. TRUE — Hampton records on his own label with his wife, Gladys.

HOW TO PLAY

WINNING BRIDGE

By ALFRED SHEINWOLD

Deliberate Overbid Often Pays As Experienced Player Knows

As an experienced player, you know that it often pays to overbid deliberately. Even if the opponents double, you may lose fewer points by going down than the opponents would score by playing the hand themselves. The deliberate overbid, or sacrifice bid is most useful when you anticipate what the opponents are going to bid and make the sacrifice in advance.

Opening lead — ♠ 4

NO COMPLAINTS

South has no complaints about the final contract. He would rather play five clubs doubled than allow East to play four spades. At five clubs, South is down one. He must lose one spade, one heart and one diamond.

At four spades East would lose one heart and two diamonds. East would be better off making the game and rubber than collecting a mere 100 points from South.

SHOULD NOT WAIT

North should bid five clubs without waiting to be pushed there. South's bid of four clubs announces a very long club suit and no defense against the opponents. North should be doubtful about his ace of clubs and can hardly expect to win more than one diamond trick.

North knows that he will sacrifice at five clubs if he is forced to do so — and it is a cinch that four clubs will not be the final contract. Therefore nothing is gained by passing at four clubs.

EAST TOO HIGH

If North bids five clubs, East must bid five hearts. West has to show a preference for spades, and now East is too high. If North has the nerve to pass five hearts (as he should), he will wind up with a plus score instead of a minus.

Here is a good rule for sacrifice bidding: When you know in advance how high you are willing to bid as a sacrifice, bid it as soon as possible. Make the opponents guess before they have exchanged enough information to know their best course.

The hand is not quite strong enough for a forcing opening bid.

Book On Recycling Is All Recycled

EAST LANSING, Mich. (UPI) — A new book on ecology — "Environmental Quality: Now or Never" — advised its readers to recycle waste materials. It practices what it preaches.

The book is the first text in the nation to be published on 100 per cent recycled paper, says its editor, Dr. Charles L. San Clemente, professor of microbiology and public health at Michigan State University. The 320-page paperback is a collection of lectures by various persons on the general topic of the environment.

Court Orders Secret Papers

LOS ANGELES (UPI) —The government will have to supply the defense with copies of secret documents it intends to use in the trial of Daniel Ellsberg in the Pentagon Papers case.

U.S. District Court Judge William M. Byrne ruled Tuesday that the documents must be turned over to attorneys for Ellsberg and his codefendant, Anthony J. Russo.

However, Byrne set strict rules to protect the classified nature of the documents and ordered the defense to keep a list of those seeing the material.

Sierra Club To Continue Disney Fight

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI)— Sierra Club attorneys, interpreting the Supreme Court's rejection of the club's fight to prevent Mineral King Valley in tha Sierras from becoming a $35 million "Alpine Disneyland" as an invitation to try again, today looked for new approaches.

The conservationist group's three-year legal battle to block development of the old mining area near Sequoia National Park ended with "shock and dismay" Wednesday when the U.S. Supreme Court barred the club from further litigation.

A Disney spokesman said work would resume "in a year, perhaps longer" on the recreational development expected to draw a million visitors annually.

Sierra Club President Raymond J. Sherwin, a Solano County Superior Court Judge, labelled the Supreme Court decision a "grievous blow to Democracy."

"I'm sure this decision won't be the end of this matter," Sherwin said.

The 4-3 ruling held that the club was not entitled to continue federal court action because it did not show that the club itself would suffer economic or other injury from the Mineral King project.

Sierra Club executive secretary Michael McCloskey called the decision "muddled" and "confusing" and said attorneys for the club would meet in a special session to discuss further action.

McCloskey said the decision against the 78,000-member club was "by no means the end of the line."

The wording of the court opinion, he said, "virtually gives us an invitation to refile our pleadings after amending them to prove that our aesthetic interest in Mineral King would indeed suffer if Disney is allowed to build its resort complex with the bulldozing, blasting and general destruction that would inevitably follow."

The Disney development would turn the high mountain valley into one of the largest skiing and recreation areas in the West.

Disney Enterprises was granted a permit to prepare a master plan for the area by the U.S. Forest Service in 1965. The Sierra Club began its opposition to the project at public hearings and finally filed a federal court suit in June, 1969.

Douglas R. Leisz, a U.S. Forest Service official, said, "The Forest Service believes that development of this area for year-long family-type recreation will meet a very urgent need in an outstanding setting."

Disney developers said the area could be opened for all to enjoy without harm to the natural environment. Tulare County residents view the project as a windfall for jobs.

Theater Patrons To Meet Tonight

Movie Goers of Marin, a newly organized group of theater patrons, will hold its first public meeting at 7:30 p.m. today in the Corte Madera Library, according to Chris Clemens, MGM spokesman.

He said the group will report the results of its just-completed survey of movie patrons' attitudes about the films offered and box office process in Marin. "Preliminary results show great dissatisfaction," Clemens said.

Attending film fans will be served popcorn and other theater refreshments, he added.

First Victory For Wage Control Policy

BALTIMORE (UPI)—President Nixon's wage control system won its first court test Wednesday.

U.S. District Judge C. Stanley Blair ruled Wednesday that the A&P supermarkets and a Baltimore meatcutters local must abide by a federal pay board ruling and cut wage increases back to the 7 per cent approved by the board.

Following a nine-day strike beginning Nov. 14, the day the wage-price freeze ended, A&P and the Amalgamated Meatcutters and Butchers Workmen of North America, AFL-CIO, agreed to a 16 month contract for 77 workers in the company's plant here.

The contract called for a 22 per cent pay increase for the butchers. The pay board reduced the figure to 7 per cent, slightly higher than the 5.5 per cent increase ceiling set for pay hikes.

Blair ruled that though 7 per cent was above the limit, the pay board ruling is binding and "must be adhered to."

The judge, in an 18-page opinion, also imposed the maximum $2,500 fine on tha union and the company for violating the pay board ruling. Blair said the two were "equally at fault" in not observing the ruling.

"This is the first decision and we consider it of extra importance," said U.S. attorney George Beall, who prosecuted the case.

Blair, a longtime political associate of Vice President Spiro T. Agnew, ran unsuccessfully for governor of Maryland in 1970 on the Republican ticket before his appointment to the bench. He served as Maryland secretary of state while Agnew was governor.

Drake High Festival Set Tomorrow

Sir Francis Drake High School's annual creative arts festival — featuring art, music, drama, food and crafts — will be held tomorrow, Saturday and Sunday.

Art work, sculpture and jewelry will be displayed in the school's music building on Sir Francis Drake Boulevard beginning at 7 p.m. tomorrow and Saturday and 1:30 p.m. Sunday.

The music and drama schedule is:

Tomorrow: beginning at 8 p.m., Drake Jazz Band, directed by J. Perry Smith; "Theater Games," directed by Dorothy Desrosiers; and "I'm Hubert," a one-act play directed by Priscilla Guastavino.

Saturday: beginning at 8 p.m., Drake Concert Band, directed by Smith; Drake A Cappella Choir, directed by Darrell Parker; "La Sache Bleue," an original dance-mime directed by Wendy Rice, and "Hear the Sound of My Feet Walking, Drown the Sound of My Voice Talking," a play based on the comic strip, "Odd Bodkins," directed by Michael Faw.

Sunday: beginning at 2:30 p.m., Drake Jazz Band, and "Hear the Sound of My Feet Walking, Drown the Sound of My Voice Talking."

First Lady Dons Bonnet For Tobacco Land Outing

ROBERSONVILLE, N.C (UPI)—Pat Nixon, wearing a bright bonnet and accompanied by sheepish Secret Service agents in stovepipe hats, rode down tobacco road Wednesday and straight into the hearts of the gingham and overall set.

Two high school bands played slightly off key as America's first lady entered the small town as gust of honor of its centennial celebration

Everybody for miles around the tobacco flatlands—upwards of 8,000 persons—lined the two-block long downtown area for the occasion

The street was draped with bunting. Small children waved American flags.

"To come down a flag-lined street like that makes one proud to be an American," said the President's wife in her response to the greeting.

The crowd broke into cheers, whistles and applause. And that was the reaction to just about every statement Mrs. Nixon made after that.

But she kept her remarks away from such things as elections and controversial issues. She was out to build good will for a Republican president in traditionally Democratic country. Not even the Democrats would deny the success of her venture.

Robersonville, a crossroads community whose main street ends in a row of tobacco warehouses and whose business district is bisected by a lone pair of railroad tracks and whose environs include miles and miles of flat peanut fields, had never seen so many people at one time.

The effect of the packed throng, which had sweltered for several hours under a scorching sun and windless sky before the guest of honor arrived, could be seen in several places.

It was impossible to find a soft drink machine that hadn't sold out by late afternoon and the lone pay telephone near the downtown area, besieged by a horde of newsmen that included a team from the French television network, had finally given up.

All it would emit was the plaintive bleep-bleep of a busy signal—before a call could be placed

Many townsfolk, proudly admiring polaroid prints of them shaking hands with the President's wife, felt that it had all been worth it

Mrs. Nixon did too

'I wouldn't have missed all the fun for anything,' she said

Magazine Picks 'Movie Worsts'

CAMBRIDGE, Mass (UPI)— The Harvard Lampoon, the nation s oldest college humor magazine yesterday named "A Clockwork Orange' as the year s worst movie with Jack Nicholson getting non-honors as worst actor and Candice Bergen named as worst actress

In its 32nd annual 'Movie Worsts' issue the Lampoon said A Clockwork Orange was guilty on three counts cheap tricks overrated che pooka and a blatant deception of America s critics

Nicholson was given the Kirk Douglas Award as Worst Actor for his role in 'Carnal Knowledge' while Miss Bergen was given the Natalie Wood Award as Worst Actress for her performance in 'T R Baskin

Navy Plans Air Pollution Aid

ALAMEDA (UPI) — The Alameda Naval Air Station Monday announced plans for construction of a $2.9 million industrial waste treatment system to avoid pollution of San Francisco Bay.

The Navy said construction of the plant was expected to begin in about two months and was scheduled for completion by mid-1973.

The Navy said it would attempt to award a contract for the first phase of construction to a qualified small business from a minority or disadvantaged group.

Guaraldi Benefit Tomorrow Night

A benefit piano concert by Vincent A. Guaraldi, composer of the music for the Charlie Brown television series and "Cast Your Fate To the Wind" will be given at 8 p.m. tomorrow at the Golden Semi Siminary in Strawberry.

Proceeds of the concert will be used for sending the sixth grade class of Donald A. Kline, nicknamed "Super Strawberries" to Yosemite National Park for an ecology study trip on May 24.

Mrs. Kennedy: Race Too Risky

NEW YORK (UPI)—Mrs. Joseph P. Kennedy believes it would be too risky for her son, Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass., to seek the 1972 presidential nomination.

"I think there's too much risk now...If he wants to, it would be much better to run a little later," she said in an article of May's Ladies' Home Journal.

"I'm sure it is Teddy's present intention not to run. I think it is a wise intention," she said.

The mother of the late President John F. Kennedy and Sen. Robert F. Kennedy, said her surviving son has "certain obligations to Ethel's (Mrs. Robert Kennedy) children and, of course, to his own children."

Oils and acrylics by George R. Johansen, Fairfax artist of the Impressionist Realism School, are on display now at Patrick Brothers art store at 500 San Anselmo Avenue, San Anselmo. The show will continue for about a month.

Washington Crime Halved, Nixon Says

WASHINGTON (UPI) —President Nixon says the crime rate in Washington D. C. has been cut in half during the last three years, making it "one of the safest cities in the country."

Nixon made the comment Wednesday in a ceremony congratulating Police Chief Jerry V. Wilson. Wilson in turn said the credit belongs to Nixon for his backing and to other steps, including brighter street lights, court reorganization and doubling the number of prosecutors.

There Oughta Be Law — But Not This One

One of the most popular cartoons on the Independent-Journal's comic page takes its name from the famliar remark, "There oughta be a law."

We have all said it, when something annoyed us, "There oughta be a law." Usually we don't intend anyone to take this literally; it is said in jest.

THERE ARE SOME people, however, who believe that "there oughta be a law" to prohibit anything with which they disagree, to curb anything they find annoying — and, conversely, to legalize anything they happen to like. All too often, these single-minded folk get up a campaign, influence some legislators, and get their pet phobias put into the law books.

An example of this is Proposition 9, which will be on the June primary ballot, titled "Environment Initiative."

Proposition 9 would write into state law a host of restrictions on things its sponsors believe pollute the air, water and land — especially the air.

It would, in addition, provide that the Legislature could not change any of the rules it enacted, except to make them tougher.

PROPOSITION 9 — like many of the laws that get on the books — is intended for a very worthwile purpose. It is, as its title suggests, intended to preserve the environment.

But — again like many laws that get on the books — it is poorly thought out and might very well have the opposite effect from that intended.

Its restrictions on what may be emitted into the atmosphere, for instance, are based on data that may be found misleading — for the very good reason that the study of air pollution is making rapid strides and what were deemed the most objectionable pollutants a few years ago (such as smoke from that backyard bonfire) have been found to be of little importance. Other development certainly will follow by the Jan. 1, 1975, effective date of the proposed new law. Some of them may run counter to the provisions of Proposition 9.

Again, Proposition 9 would impose a five-year ban on construction of nuclear power plants. But there will be need for more electric power. Some other types of plants produce more air and water pollution than do nuclear plants, so instead of protecting the environment, this restriction might result in greater pollution.

The proposition also goes clear beyond reason in its "conflict of interest" provisions, which could be interpreted as barring anyone who invested in mutual funds that might include some public utility stock from working for a pollution control board or serving on any such board.

THE FACT of the matter is that there are very tough laws about pollution on books in California right now. Some of them need to be more strictly enforced. But Proposition 9 would do nothing about that.

Maybe "there oughta be a law" against initiative measures that gum up the legislative process.

Walk Shows Youth Willing, Casts Doubt On Organizers

By EARL G. WATERS

In what was hailed as a pilgrimage to demonstrate concern for the needy, more than 12,000 youngsters traipsed the capital city on a recent Saturday in a 29-mile hike.

The event was termed a "Walk for Development" and was sponsored by local organizations and the American Freedom From Hunger Foundation. Funds raised were to be apportioned to some local do-good efforts and to programs to feed persons in foreign lands.

The basis for collecting the money was by having youngsters solicit adults as sponsors. These sponsors agreed to donate so much for each mile the sponsored child hiked. Upon completion of the hike or a portion thereof, the walker must return to his sponsore to collect.

The same type of program has been and will be undertaken in other communities.

THE PARTICIPATION in this event by so huge a turnout of school children speaks well of the kids. In fact it was an amazing exhibition of the selflessness and willingness of today's youth to participate in something that will benefit others.

But it does raise a question as to the wisdom of the elders who dreamed up this method of endeavor to achieve a purpose. And it points up the lack of constructive work opportunities open to school children today.

Those of another era sold newspapers, mowed lawns, and did a variety of odd jobs in the neighborhood to earn money for themselves or for a cause and to generally keep occupied.

ALL THIS has changed. Laws, generated by school officials who seem to have come to the view that they know more about what is good for Johnny than the parents, have been enacted to prevent the school kids from working. The schoolagers cannot work unless they obtain work permits from the school authorities. Laws are so restrictive those who could give the children odd jobs don't want to be bothered with the red tape.

The youthful enterprisers find obstacles at every turn and become discouraged from trying. The elders sit back and complain about the youth of today while the young bend to mischief.

That these energies can be turned to good was clearly shown by the march. But the question remains as to why those charged with giving the young direction could not channel such tremendous effort to things more constructive and productive than an aimless walk.

THERE PROBABLY isn't a householder in the community who would not have been willing to find some odd job about the house or yard for the kids to do. The money so raised would have been earned, not donated. It would have had the added benefit of making the children feel they were doing something productive.

And other efforts such as collecting bottles, cans and other substances for recycling would have brought earned dollars. They would also not only have accomplished the benefit of raising money for the hungry but would have made the additional contribution to the betterment of society by assisting in a general community clean-up.

Demonstrations have become a plague while the idea of hard work to produce a result gets less and less encouragement.

'Jawboning' Advocated To End Vietnam War

When I was a small boy, dad would read one chapter of the Bible every night before bedtime. One chapter told of a fellow that killed 1,500 guys with the jawbone of an ass. Now with all the asses in the government there's enough jawbones to arm all of South Vietnam and get this assinine thing over with in 48 hours.

Terwilliger Trips Charming Experiences

Our young family has been "Tripping With Terwilliger" on Saturday mornings for the first time since our arrival in Marin just one short year ago.

What a charming, enlightening experience these Saturdays have been! We loved Marin so much we moved ourselves here from Birmingham, Mich. — but now we're hooked for life to the causes of preserving and giving back to Marin all the love it has given us.

Mrs. Terwilliger's charm and knowledge should be made a prerequisite for entering Marin even on a visit — then perhaps this beautiful county will stay this way for the years and generations to come.

No one would ever try to fill a salt water marsh for apartments again — their eyes would be opened to the beauty of this one piece of land left on Canal Street's bay end. One would gaze on our state parks and forest as gifts to be cherished and enjoyed.

Mrs. Terwilliger can't do it alone, but her love is "catching" and I can't help but encourage everyone that can to be open for this great happening in Marin available through the Boyd Museum.

Fulltime Supervisor Held Not Necessary

I question the validity of the battle cry being used in the second supervisorial district; if we need a full-time representative, let's vote on that issue separately.

Mr. Peter Arrigoni has been on the job beyond the call of duty and always responsive to suggestions and differences on opinions brought to him by his constituents. I speak from experience in commending him on his initiative and good sense in handling the tasks of amelioration of catastrophes which stemmed from the previous office holder. I hope we will not seek chance carelessly when we already have a devoted public servant in our ranks. Crisis politics grows up from a field of weeds; constituent input guarantees representative government; instead of a full-time supervisor, let us look forward to capable constituents with constructive concern. Supervisor Arrigoni will listen.

No, Des Moines Didn't Go Down The River

I was concerned to read on your Editorial Page of April 13 that 20 years ago the whole of Iowa must have been inundated by the Mississippi as its flood crest moved across Iowa to Omaha, Neb.

I was especially concerned to learn of this since I was in Des Moines at the time and wasn't aware that we were underwater.

Could you tell me — did Des Moines wash down the Des Moines or Racoon River? I'd like to know where I ended up.

Only Thing Unnecessary Is An Apology

To the reporter who covered the recent shooting in San Rafael ("Readers," Apr. 18), I'm sure "many people" feel the only thing "unnecessary" is an apology! The writer was responsible for doing his job, not for the facts and events that led Don Oliver to shoot a police officer. The bullet that hit Lieutenant Green could have been a fatal shot and then the story of his life would have appeared in the paper along with a picture of him lying dead in the street.

The article told of the tragedy that often results from drug use and the public should be made aware of this whenever possible. This story and picture may have been offensive to some but crime and the killing of policemen and all innocent victims is offensive to us all.

Significant Errors In IRS Scrutiny Story

In your article (April 18) on the far-reaching prying into private bank transactions by the IRS, to start July 1, there were two misprints that were significant and they were so accurately spelled I am wondering about how accidental they were. The first referred to "out of county" transactions. Surely this meant "out of country." The second was about credit card use in foreign companies." Again I'm sure this meant "foreign countries."

One of the major reasons for this new set of restrictions is, ultimately, to restrict private citizens from transferring their assets out of this country when they are afraid of the monetary stability of the country. The above two errors mask this facet of the story pretty well.

Of course the rules don't apply to big business. Subsequent study, reported in the Wall Street Journal and other financial paper, showed that the majority of the "speculators" Nixon blamed for pressure on the dollar last August when he devalued the dollar) were not sly sharpies but the big international American companies who were shifting their assets to foreign currencies to protect their assets.

Perhaps there's nothing the little guy can do about itt. We'll end up like many foreign nationals who can't take a holiday outside their country because their government won't allow them but a tiny amount of their money to be spent outside their country. Traveling Englishmen are pretty smart — most have an outside bank account (by foresight or other) from which they can draw when traveling outside England. Perhaps, before it is too late, we should all set up a savings account or similar fund in a Canadian or English bank to use when the same happens here — as seems to be the direction of things.

Believer In Truth, Constitution Battles 'Executive Privilege'

WASHINGTON — As the foremost constitutional lawyer in the Senate, Sam Ervin of North Carolina is a good man to have on your side. It follows, as the inquiry into Richard Kleindienst and ITT is demonstrating, that he is a formidable adversary.

Ervin says that unless the White House relents and allows Peter Flanigan to testify on the role he played in the ITT antitrust settlement, he will block Kleindienst's confirmation to be attorney general. If the judiciary committee simply closes the hearings with no resolution of the Flanigan matter, he will carry the fight to the Senate floor. And there he seems to be rapidly gaining recruits.

THE CRAGGY, stern-voiced North Carolinian has gone before the Supreme Court to challenge the administration on another constitutional issue. He believes beyond mere lip service, profoundly and without equivocation, in the freedoms guaranteed by the Constitution and in the independence of the three separate and coordinate branches of government.

Ervin spoke for a committee of senators, both Republicans and Democrats, as friend of the court in the case of Sen. Mike Gravel of Alaska. While the administration holds to the right to keep an executive agent (Flanigan) from speaking out, the Department of Justice tried to force a Gravel aide to talk to a federal grand jury on the charge that the senator had violated national security by releasing and bringing about the publication of a greatly amplified version of the Pentagon Papers.

A federal district court and later a court of appeals upheld the right of both Gravel and his aide to refuse to testify. The appeal to the Supreme Court is on the publication of the papers as read by Gravel into the record of his subcommittee.

In a brief filed with the Supreme Court, Ervin cited Article I, Section 6, of the Constitution, which declares that "for any speech or debate in either house, they (members of Congress) shall not be questioned in any other place." While making it plain that they have no brief for Gravel, the senators intend to protect the independence of the Senate. If any discipline is due Gravel for reading the secret papers into the record, the Senate itself must administer that discipline.

THAT ERVIN should be a Daniel come to judgment in the Kleindienst-ITT affair is hardly surprising. Along with his respect for the Constitution goes a healthy regard for the common or garden variety of honesty. The mishmash of half-truths, lies skirting on perjury and just plain obfuscation developed during the hearings persuaded a normally conservative southerner that something was very wrong and only the testimony of Flanigan as to his part in the settlement could sort truth from falsehood.

The performance of ITT's executives has shocked not only conservative in the Senate but the business community. W. R. Merriam, head of the company's Washington office, appeared to be openly contemptuous of the judiciary committee in the course of his meandering testimony covering when he would lie and when he would not. The company's chief executive, Harold Geneen, came off rather better, but only because he pleaded ignorance of much of what had gone on.

Corporate executives are privately wringing their hands over the damage they believe the ITT affair has done to the corporate image. The maladroit way the company's public relations have been handled — above all, the buffoonery surrounding the hapless Dita Beard — seemed an invitation to committee wrath. All the old prejudice against the business giants out of the early New Deal days has been aroused, countering the long campaign of propaganda aimed at picturing the beneficence of the free enterprise system.

Nomination Of Kennedy Not Wanted, Yet Looms Likely

A lot of people are doing their utmost to head off another Nixon-Kennedy confrontation in an American presidential election including certainly one and probably both of the men most concerned.

Edward M. Kennedy is the Democrat Richard M. Nixon is least eager to run against —for obvious reasons. Any Kennedy runs a tough campaign. Kennedys always play to win. And they play hard.

As for the senator from Massachusetts. Why run in 1972 against another man who plays to win, and also plays hard and has the enormous advantage of being able to run from the White House as incumbent President, when all this kind of opposition would disappear in another four years?

The only rational reason why the senator would prefer a bruising campaign with uncertain outcome in 1972 against an easy campaign against some unknown in 1976 would be if he really likes a political fight all that much. Would he choose the hardest possible effort? True the Irish are sometimes like that. But considering the changes that four years can make to his advantage it seems reasonable to think that Senator Kennedy actually would prefer to wait another four years, as he consistently insists he does to all who sound him out on the subject.

THEN THERE ARE all the official Democratic Party candidates, from Edmund S. Muskie to George C. Wallace, every one of whom is earnestly and diligently working through the various primaries to get the chance to run against Mr. Nixon.

Just why they want that chance so much is sometimes difficult to understand. No one runs against Mr. Nixon (or a Kennedy) without getting scratched in the process. And the chance that any one of the Democrats in the lineup from Muskie to Wallace could beat Mr. Nixon is not, at least at this phase of the campaign, exciting.

True, it could happen. But it's not something you would put down right now on a list of probabilities.

Nevertheless there is a whole covey of Democrats out there on the hustings reaching for a chance to get into the decisive finals with Mr. Nixon. And who knows? One of them just might make it and thus spare Mr. Kennedy the ordeal of having the Democratic convention virtually force the nomination on him.

WITH MR. NIXON, Mr. Kennedy, and all the other Democrats bent on avoiding if possible a Kennedy draft, one would almost think that so much effort would be rewarded by success. Yet somehow there is a glacier-like quality about the way the political pattern seems to be setting toward precisely what all of these men are trying so diligently to avoid.

Just the latest item which contributes to this movement is a Harris Poll showing Mr. Nixon leading Mr. Muskie by 50-to-37 per cent. Last January the poll showed these two men at 42-42.

IF THE IDEA once gets around among the lower level politicians of the Democratic Party that they are going to lose in 1972 behind anyone but Edward Kennedy, they will stampede for Edward Kennedy. And then he would be in a position of having to accept or look like a man trying to avoid a fight. And that would not be an image easy for a Kennedy to wear.

It may not be inevitable. There are a horde of reasons why the United States would be better without a Nixon-Kennedy contest. But no politician can any longer overlook the steady slide of events in that direction.

Sewer Project Exposes Some Strange Strata In Fifth Avenue

Travelers in the West often pause to gaze with interest on strata exposed by the forces of nature. On mountainsides are seen striations of different kinds of rock, sometimes tipped at odd angles, which silently tell of tremendous earth tremors in bygone ages. At other places, the receding waters of lake or river have left a series of bench marks on the shore which tell their own story of climatic changes over many centuries.

Workers for Kirkwood-Bly, Santa Rosa contractor, have exposed some man-made strata as they cut open Fifth Avenue in San Rafael for replacement of a sewer line.

The City of San Rafael every few years had overlaid the street as cracks and pot-holes showed up in the paving. Each overlay is about two inches thick. But the vertical cuts made for the new sewer line went through about a foot of them.

They're not all alike, either, attesting to different paving materials used at different periods.

LOOKING AT the cuts sent me into a little flight of fancy.

Suppose that at some far future date, a major earth upheaval wipes out the existing surface features of San Rafael (as one almost certainly will do some day).

Suppose that long after that, excavators for whatever kind of structures mankind is using in that day turn up the strange but very regular layers of what is now street overlay.

Can't you just imagine geologists of that far future time puzzling over how the earth's surface got into that strange strata way back in the 20th Century A.D.?

They'll probably make a very good circumstantial case for an explanation that is far wide of the mark, too —just as today's scientists probably do when they attempt to explain things far back in geologic time.

GETTING BACK to today, and the sewer projects on Fifth Avenue:

This is part of the $1.5 million sewer replacement project, financed by a bond issue and federal funds, which along with the new pumping station installed last year should mean fewer backups, less flooding, and less pollution entering the Bay in the future.

The whole project, except for sealing and testing, should be completed sometime in October, according to City Engineer Ely Caillouette. The present portion is replacement of an assortment of old sewer lines, some 6-inch and some 4-inch, on Fifth Avenue and F Street with a new, straighter 8-inch line.

Monday (or possibly Friday), the crew will move to another section due for replacement, on Greenfield Avenue at Santa Margarita. That will mean another detour for traffic for a few days.

Doing the work in sections has so far avoided much traffic congestion —though when the work moves to Lincoln Avenue a little later, we can expect plenty. Even that, however, will be more than compensated if the job means there will be no more manhole covers lifted off by bubbling sewage during winter rains.

Paulsen Out Of President Race

The television comedian who insisted he was a serious candidate said he has notified Rhode Island Secretary of State August P. LaFrance that he would be "unable" to run in that state's May 23 primary because of "The restrictions put upon my career and my employment by the Federal Communications Commission throughout the past four months."

Paulsen said the FCC's "equal time" provision kept him from working because television stations would have to make available free time to other candidates.

ART BUCHWALD

Justice's Lawyers Wouldn't Lie —But What Terrible Memories!

WASHINGTON — A 10-year-old boy named Virgil has just written me a letter.

He says: "dear Sir, I notice in the newspapers that several Justice Department attorneys have testified in the ITT case. Sometimes one Justice attorney says one thing and then another Justice attorney says another. Suppose they're lying? Who prosecutes the prosecutors?"

DEAR VIRGIL,

Yours is a very impertinent question which really doesn't deserve an answer. To assume that someone in the Justice Department would tell an untruth makes you no better than a Barrigan brother.

A Justice Department attorney takes an oath that he will never tell a lie — on a Bible. This Bible belongs to the Attorney general, who has taken an oath on a Bible that belongs to the chief justice of the Supreme Court, who has taken an oath on a Bible that belongs to the President of the United States. You can readily see the trouble a Justice Department attorney would be in if he perjured himself on that many Bibles.

What you are confusing is perjury and loss of memory. Several of the Justice Department attorneys have suffered from an inability to remember facts pertinent to the ITT investigation. This is understandable when you realize that most Justice Department attorneys are trained to ask questions, but are very rarely called upon to answer them.

IF YOU SPENT all your life asking, "Where were you on the night of Feb. 12, 1961?" you would be in a heck of a jam if someone suddenly asked you that question.

It is for this reason that under our system Justice Department attorneys in congressional hearings are permitted to "correct" their testimony and "refresh" their memories.

The fact that a Justice Department attorney says one thing in the morning does not preclude him from saying the opposite in the afternoon. And just because one Justice Department attorney says one thing and another Justice Department attorney says another thing does not mean either one of them is lying. It just means they're getting at the truth from opposite directions.

LET ME GIVE you an example. Justice Department attorney Wishbone tells a Senate committee that he's never talked to anyone in the Zigzag Monopoly Co. He goes home that night and his wife reminds him that his brother-in-law is president of the Zigzag Monopoly Co. So he goes back to the committee and says he's just remembered that his brother-in-law is president of the company, but he hasn't seen him in 10 years.

Then he takes a recess break and his secretary tells him he's had 20 meetings with his brother-in-law in the past three months.

So he goes back to the committee and says he would like to correct the record; he did see his brother-in-law, but they never really talked business. That night his brother-in-law calls him and says he's in trouble with the IRS because he's put Wishbone down for 20 business lunches.

So Wishbone goes back to the committee the next day and says he talked business with his brother-in-law, but he did nothing to affect Zigzag Monopoly Co.'s case.

THAT, VIRGIL, is not called perjury — it's called amnesia.

I can assure you that your question about who prosecutes the prosecutors has no validity in Washington. There is no reason to prosecute anyone in the ITT case because everyone is telling the truth; and if you keep writing troublemaking letters like this, I won't be surprised if, when you grow a little older, someone down here doesn't start tapping your phone.

Talk Will Center On Area's Indians

Earl F. Couey, history professor at Sonoma State College, will speak on Indians of Marin and Sonoma County before the Marin County Historical Society at 8 p.m. May 3 at the San Rafael Improvement Club, Fifth and H Streets, San Rafael.

Couey is of mixed Caucasian and American Indian ancestry and his wife is a Mishewal Indian from Sonoma County.

Camps Will Be Explained On Saturday

Free T-shirts and a search for helium-filled balloons will highlight the Young Men's Christian Association summer camp sign-up from 10 a.m. to 1 p.m. Saturday at the headquarters at 241 North San Pedro Road, San Rafael.

Potential campers and parents will be able to get advice from counselors on various camp programs. Each registrant will receive a camp T-shirt, the YMCA has announced.

In addition, 300 balloons will be released. The boy or girl finding the one the farthest away from the headquarters and still in Marin County will receive a free week at a camp.

The program includes 10 weeks of day camp for which buses will pick up the boys and girls 5 to 11 years old and take them to camp headquarters.

Other camp programs available include backpacking for boys 9 to 12 years old on the Stanislaus River; mountain camps for boys and girls 9 to 14 years of age at Camp Loma Mar in the Santa Cruz mountains and at High Sierra Camp Redwoods on Lake Sequoia. Also scheduled are camping trips for junior and senior high school students, including 40 days in Europe to six days on the Smith River.

Further information may be obtained from the headquarters.

School Registration Bill Before Assembly

The measure by Assemblyman John Vasconcellos, D-San Jose, was sent to the floor Wednesday on an 8-0 vote.

Foster Home Subsidy Increases Supported

The Marin County Juvenile Delinquency Prevention Commission has recommended the county increase its subsidy to foster homes.

According to L. Charles Smith, the commission's executive officer, the commission agreed Tuesday to support such a request next wek by foster parents to the board of supervisors.

Smith said foster parents are not receiving enough to cover costs of rearing their boarders. For example, he said, foster parents of a teen-age boy receive about $130 per month but the actual cost of caring for the youth may be more than $200. per month.

He said the disparity between income and cost may be keeping many families from opening their homes to foster children.

On other matters, Smith said the commission is seeking parents to help run the teen center at Dominican College in San Rafael.

The center, which operates Thursday evenings, was created by the commission at the request of Dominican area residents.

He said the commission also has set May 16 at 4 p.m. for interviewing applicants for two vacant seats on the commission. Those interested in serving may contact Smith at the county probation department.

County Chamber Endorses Sale

The Marin County Chamber of Commerce and Visitors Bureau has endorsed the sale of the San Rafael courthouse square to McKeon Construction Co., of Sacramento, at a reduced price.

McKeon has bid $650,000 for the block, $100,000 below the county's asking price.

In taking the action, the chamber and bureau joins the San Rafael Chamber of Commerce, which has already urged negotiation of the sale "without delay".

Both groups cite esthetic and practical considerations in their statements, noting that the area would be reestablished as a focal point for the downtown area and taxes could be reaped from the property.

ISOLATION BOOTHS?

Less talk, more work seemed to be the message as Corte Madera clerk typist Nancy Urbani found herself walled off yesterday from other town employees by new partitions. Not so, according to Town Mgr. Ronald E. Bartels, who said the idea was to separate department heads from the distraction of the front desk.

Free Rides On BART Suggested

SAN FRAMCISCO (UPI)—A Lafayette business counselor suggests giving everybody free rides on Bay Area Rapid Transit District trains.

He suggested Wednesday that the district would lose money otherwise when it starts operating trains on a 75-mile rail network now under construction in San Francisco, Alameda and Contra Costa counties.

But he said that it could be operated without fares if a half-cent retail sales tax is continued in the district and if revenue is used from new gasoline sales taxes.

Operating free, the system would attract patrons, reduce vehicular congestion and air pollution, he held.

B.R. Stokes, BART's general manager, said the idea would appeal to a great number of persons.

Court Delays Drug Plea Until Monday

Gregory Gerald Nelson, 25, of no known address was arraigned today in Marin Superior Court on a felony charge of possessing a dangerous drug, but a plea was put off until Monday.

Nelson was stopped March 30 bz Mill Valley police, who discovered he was wanted on a traffic warrant. During a search, a substance believed to be amphetamine was found.

Pilot Missing As Barges Hit Dam

CANNELTON, Ind. (UPI)—A string of barges struck an Ohio River dam under construction in a fog and burst into flames early today.

Two of the three barges were loaded with gasoline and diesel fuel. One sank and the other floated downstream.

The pilot, identified as R.W. Griffin, was missing and presumed dead, either from an explosion which may have blown him off the boat pushing the barges, or from drowning.

Three crewmen were injured.

Indications were that strong current from the flooded stream contributed to the accident.

A U.S. Army Corps of Engineers construction inspector on duty at the "Cannelton locks and dam said the boat piloted by Griffin and the three barges were preparing to lock through the dam from the upriver side when the current swept them into the mainstream and into a construction area of the dam.

The barges hit a pier at the dam and broke away from the boat. One barge was empty.

One of the burning barges was lodged against a dam pier. Spokesmen said it may burn for two days. A second burning barge sank near Hawesville, Ky., across the river from Cannelton. The third barge, empty, also was afire and was floating downstream toward Troy.

Three-Faucet City Chucks One Away

COALINGA (UPI) —The three-faucet era officially comes to an end today in this west San Joaquin Valley city which has had to truck in its drinking water for years.

For as long as most residents can remember, every kitchen sink had three water faucets, one for hot water, one for cold and one for drinking water.

The reason was that the area's ground water contains a heavy concentration of minerals —harmless enough to drink but not too tasty.

Thus drinking water was trucked in and run through a separate system resulting in the third spigot.

But thanks to the California-Water Project, the city now has a brand new system utilizing water from the San Luis Dam.

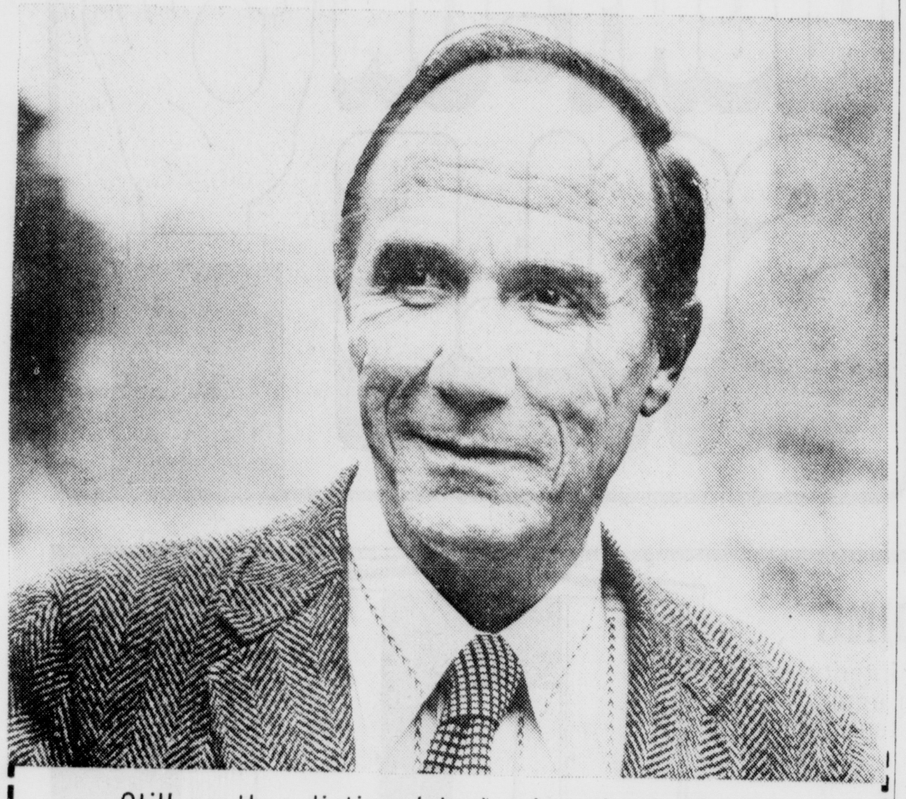
The Chamber of Commerce is commemorating the occasion with a three-day water festival beginning today and running through Saturday.

Guided tours will be conducted to the new water plant 12 miles east of here by means of shuttle bus runs departing every hour throughout the day.

a parade Saturday morning will precede the official dedication which is set for noon.

Tape Deck Stolen

A tape deck valued at $70 was stolen last night from the 1964 sedan ok Robert J. Morris of 24 Seminole Avenue, Corte Madera, while the car was parked in the lot at Greenbrae Lanes, 101 Sir Francis Drake Boulevard, Larkspur police said today.



Still another distinguished columnist in the I-J

Melvin Maddocks

Columnist-at-large, Christian Science Monitor News Service

Melvin Maddocks doesn't fit into a neat category. The Monitor knew him first as a copyboy who wrote editorials, then as a literature loving sportswriter.

Topic hopping began early in life. He studied six years of Latin and four years of Greek, then went on to major in American history and literature at Harvard.

After sports, he did his turn as television columnist, part-time music reviewer, and theater and film critic both in Boston and New York. He served for seven years as the Monitor's book editor.

Today all these roles play their parts within his role as columnist-at-large for whom variety is practically the motif. Nor will his writing fit a category. Read it closely and what looked like a sharp dagger turns out to be no more than a feather — a carefully directed feather. There is a philosophy under the wit.

What distinguishes Maddocks as a columnist? An awareness of the latest trends and fads. A feeling for what the next wave will be. But also a distrust of too sudden enthusiasms. He wants to alert us before we swallow the fly in the ointment.

Mr. Maddocks' column is supplied exclusively to the Independent-Journal by The Christian Science News Service.

Read him carefully - too good to miss!

GIANT OUT — San Francisco Giant Ken Henderson (15) was tagged out at second base by San Diego's Derrel Thomas on an attempted steal in the third inning last night at San Diego. San Diego's Enzo Hernandez backed up the play. The Giants lost, 4-3.

Giants Mauled By Jeter

San Diego (UPI)—John Jeter is hurting the San Francisco Giants—in more ways than one.

The new center fielder of the San Diego Padres was involved in a collision with Willie McCovey Tuesday night that left the Giant first baseman with a broken arm.

Wednesday night the 27-year-old Jeter, acquired in a trade late last season from the Pittsburgh Pirates, cracked a two-run homer with one out in the ninth inning for a 4-3 Padre win over Juan Marichal and the Giants.

Derrel Thomas, another new Padre, was aboard on a single when Jeter delivered his 360-foot blast over the left field fence.

The teams meet again tonight with Steve Arlin, 0-1, going for San Diego against Sudden Sam McDowell, 1-0.

Nate Colbert accounted for the Padres' other runs with his 90th big league homer and first four-bagger of the year. It came with Jeter on in the fourth with a single.

Ironically, Jeter broke his left arm Dec. 27 while riding a horse in Venezuela. The accident happened while he was in South America to play winter baseball.

Jeter missed most of spring training because his arm was in a cast seven weeks.

"I feel 97 per cent back," he reported after San Diego's last-tinning victory.

"There was no way in the world that I was looking for the homer in the ninth. I just wanted to make contact.

"Marichal's one of the best pitchers in baseball. If I hit him, that makes me pretty good, too."

Jeter said he was "very sorry" about the collision that will cost the Giants the services of the 34-year-old McCovey from two to three months.

"McCovey's such a great guy," he remarked. "It's a shame this had to happen. I know he worked so hard this spring."

Holtzman, Rudi Trigger A's Twin Bill Sweep Of Royals

OAKLAND (UPI)—The Oakland A's have played five games thus far and Joe Rudi and Ken Holtzman are the early start heroes today.

Rudi, finally rid of his military commitments and free to concentrate on playing ball every day, initiated two rallies Tuesday and Holtzman pitches a shutout as the A's defeated the Kansas City Royals, 4-0, and 3-1.

For Hotlzman, who held the Royals to five scattered hits it was his second straight fine performance. He gave up only three hits in eight innings of the season opener but did not figure in the decision.

Wednesday night, the hard-throwing left hander didn't walk a single batter but struck out only one. Still, he said that was just fine with him.

"I'm primarily a control pitcher," he said. "Any time I don't walk a man that's a good game for me."

Rudi got the first of five straight singles in he fourth inning of the first game and before the frame was over the A's scored four times off Dick Drago to wrap things up in a hurry.

In the nightcap, it took them into the eighth inning before they finally solved Bruce Dal Canton, and again it was Rudi who got things rolling. With two out, Rudi lined a triple to left center and Reggie Jackson followed with a broken bat single to right to snap a 1-1 tie. After Sal Bando walked, Mike Epstein, who drove in Oakland's first run with a sacrifice fly, singled off reliever Tom Burgmeier for an insurance run.

"I took some extra batting practice said Rudi, "and I started seeing the ball real good for the first time."

Rudi had a single and double in Wednesday's first game and a double and triple in the nightcap. In the five games played thus far he has a triple, three doubles and two singles.

Nicklaus Golf Pick At La Costa

RANCHO LA COSTA (UPI) — Jack Nicklaus is on the spot once again today in the first round of the $165,000 72-hole Mony Tournament of Champions but he doesn't seem to mind.

Fresh from his fourth triumph in the masters, Nicklaus was rated a 4-1 favorite in the elite field of 26 champions at La Costa country club's par-72 layout.

He is defending champion, having won last year by eight strokes. He is the No. 1 money-winner of the year by far on the PGA tour with $134,473. George Archer is No. 2 with $101,473.

Archer, Arnold Palmer, and other veterans are unbothered by Nicklaus, on the surface anyway, and each of them has his own incentive to win.

There are seven in the field over 40 who know the odds are against them. Palmer at 42 leads this contingent which includes Billy Casper, Bob Roseburg, Paul Harney, Miller Barber, Gardner Dickinson and Bob Goalby.

Palmer is not about to give Nicklaus any psychological edge and says, "I like to beat Nicklaus and I'll try to beat him any time I get the chance. But I'd like to be 32 . . ."

First time entrants who qualifiej by winning a major PGA event in the preceding 12 months number nine — Grier Jones, Johnny Miller, Jerry Heard, Hale Irwin, Hubert Green, Bobby Mitchell, Dewitt Weaver, Dave Eichelberger and Labron Harris Jr.

Others, all of whom have had a crack at the T of C before, are Lee Trevino, Dave Stockton, Frank Beard, Tom Weiskopf, Homero Blancas, Tony Jacklin, Bruce Crampton and Dave Hill.

Hill was the last man to qualify, winning the Monsanto Open last Sunday.

Trevino quit the Monsanto after a first round 74, saying he was exhausted and wanted to rest up for the T of C which he has never won.

The couse is long — over 7,000 yards — but it is not as tight on the fairways as it was in previous years.

Resident pro Tommy Jacobs explained, "The rough is not as rough. There is a shorter collar along the fairways before you get into the deep rough. And the fairways have been widened — some of them from 25 yards to a width of 35 yards."

HATS OFF TO PITCHING

Tom Van Der Meersche of Everett High School delivered a "blinding" fastball as his hat fell off against Meadowdale High in Everett Wash. yesterday. Despite the temporary loss of face, he struck out nine in pitching Everett to a 12-2 victory. (UPI Telephoto)

SPORT NOTES

It's Almost Time For REAL Baseball

By RALPH CHATOIAN

Time is fast approaching for the start of the REAL baseball season. The season for the bubble gum set, not the tobacco chewers.

Little Leaguers throughout the world will start their annual campaigns these next two Saturdays. Managers have picked their major league teams and have sent other players down to the minors "for more seasoning." Really. Little League is just like the big time —farm systems and everything.

It's not like my kiddie days in Sacramento when a bunch of us got together and picked a team, found a sponsor to buy us a couple of bats and a few balls and joined a summer recreation league. Like everything else in the USA, kids' baseball has been refined.

IN MARIN COUNTY, Little League got its start in San Rafael and Angelo Colombo, former San Rafael High School athletic director and dean and now coordinator of physical education for San Rafael's city schools, was first president of that league, 20 years ago. Ang is still working with kids, this year with the newly-formed San Rafael Senior League for boys 13 through 15.

The San Rafael Little League has grown and split into two leagues during its two decades of existence, American and National. So don't think expansion has been confined to the professional leagues. There are now approximately 700 youngsters involved in both leagues. James L. Placak is president of the San Rafael National Little League and George Burton is president of the San Rafael American. Highway 101 is the boundary line. Boys who live on the east side of the highway are in the National League and those on the west side the American.

THE TWO LEAGUES will be working together more this year, according to Placak. On Saturday, April 29, they'll be getting together for a pancake breakfast at 7:30 a.m. at the San Rafael High School cafeteria to kickoff the season and celebrate their 20 years of baseball. Army reservists from Santa Rosa will do the cooking. After the breakfast there will be a huge parade, beginning at 10:30 a.m., from Fifth Avenue and B Street to Albert Field's baseball diamond.

After the usual ceremonies by the older folk, the kids will take the spotlight for two exhibition games —one senior and one little — between players of the two leagues.

The American League uses Albert Park as its home base, while the Nationals have been playing inside the walls of San Quentin Prison for the past six years. With the recent announcement that San Quentin is going to be phased out of existence, a question of where the National League will play future games is raised.

Looking into this problem is a new group called Community Recreational Development Committee. The committee hopes to buy and develop facilities for all recreational activities, including Little League baseball.

SHORT HOPS — Third baseman Tom Corder of Novato did his share in helping Bakersfield outscore Visalia, 9-8, last night by hitting a home run. . .Frank Reberger, also Novato, pitched eight innings for Phoenix yesterday in the Giants' 5-4 loss to Albuquerque, but didn't get the defeat — Shigeyuki Takahashi, who pitched less than an inning, did.

Rangers, Chicago Tonight

By U.P. INTERNATIONAL

While the Boston Bruin's 6-1 romp over the St. Louis Blues Tuesday night surprised no one, the New York Rangers' second straight triumph over the Chicago Black Hawks has got all National Hockey League observers taking notice.

The Rangers have not won a Stanley Cup since 1940-41. Thus, even when the Broadway Blueshirts disposed of the defending cup champ Montreal Canadiens in six games in the first round this year, the general attitude was "wait and see what happens in Chicago."

But now the Rangers hold a commanding 2-0 lead as the series shifts back to New York tonight and they also have three of the remaining five (if necessary) games left on home ice.

"What we've done so far means nothing so far," Rangers' head coach Emile Francis said Wednesday. "What we do from now on depends how hard we work at it. There's no simple formula in this business."

Meanwhile, as far as the Bruins are concerned, Tuesday's opening win over St. Louis was "business as usual." The Blues made a great showing in upsetting Minnesota in the quarterfinals but it will be a surprise to many if they take even one game from the tough Bruins who posted the best overall won-lost record in the NHL during the regular season.

Ailing McCovey Resting

PALO ALTO (UPI)—Slugging first baseman Willie McCovey of the San Francisco Giants is resting today at Stanford Medical Center with his broken right arm in a full cast.

The 34-year-old infielder had the broken limb set Wednesday by Dr. Fred Behling. He placed a pin in the bone to hold the broken pieces together.

McCovey, who broke the arm Tuesday night in a collision with John Jeter of the San Diego Padres along the first-base line, will be hospitalized until Friday. He is expected to be out of the lineup eight to 12 weeks.

"Willie will be in a long-arm (above the elbow to the fingers) cast for two weeks and then wear a shorter one for four weeks," said Behling. "Everything went just fine. The bone is in excellent position." Once the cast is removed sometime around the first of June, Behling said the first baseman can begin exercises to strengthen his arm muscles.

"The exercises will be governed by the amount of soreness he experiences," said the doctor.

Manager Charlie Fox of the Giants doesn't plan to bring up anyone to take McCovey's place on the roster.

Fox said Dave Kingman would move from third base to first to replace McCovey and Alan Gallagher would play third base.

Bobby Bonds will move up from fifth to fourth in the batting order and Kingman will hit fifth. Gallagher will bat sixth.

SURGERY SET ON WARRIOR RUSSELL

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) Forward Cazzie Russell of the Golden State Warriors was scheduled to undergo corrective surgery today on his ailing back.

Russell, 27, is expected to be hospitalized several weeks following the operation at St. Mary's Hospital to relieve the pressure of a bone on a nerve.

During the past National Basketball Association season, the 6-6 forward averaged 21.4 points a game and was the only Warrior named to the All Star game at midseason. He came to the Warriors from the New York Knicks May 7, 1971 in a trade for Jerry Lucas.

Sonoma State Golf Team Splits Pair

The host Sonoma State golf team divided a pair of recent non league golf matches.

The Cossacks lost yesterday to the University of Pacific, 21-6 at Bennett Valley Golf Course after defeating St. Mary's College of Moraga, 16-11, last Wednesday at Rohnert Park.

49er Hoskins Moves From Tackle To End

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI)—Coach Dick Nolan of the San Francisco 49ers says he will switch 6-2, 235-pound Bob Hoskins from defensive tackle to defensive end for the 1972 season.

"For a man his size, he's fairly agile and should help shore up our defensive end spot," said Nolan. Hoskins will fill in for Cedrik Hardman who will miss part of the season suffered in an off-season basketball game.

Suburban Slams Gonzales In Softball, 10-0

Suburban Auto slammed Gonzales 10-0 in San Rafael League softball action last night on Albert Field.

In the other San Rafael contest, Brandon Tire shut out Jacobsen Auto, 5-0.

Suburban, the Golden Gate League division leaders 4-2, scored three in the first inning, two in the second and five in the fourth to win easily.

Cowens Scores 23 In Celtic Victory

BOSTON (UPI)—Dave Cowens slumped down on a bench in a corner of the Boston Celtic dressing room. Most of his teammates were gone.

Less than an hour earlier, Wednesday night, the 6-foot-9 center from Florida State led the Celtics to a 115-109 win over the New York Knicks for Boston's first triumph in the best-of-seven series for the National Basketball Association's Eastern conference championship. The Knicks won the first two games in the series that resumes Friday night in New York.

Saturday afternoon, the Los Angeles Lakers, who lead their series 3-2, will try to wrap up the NBA's Western Conference title at Milwaukee against the Bucks.

Cowens, who averaged 18.9 points a game in the regular season but could muster only a total of 21 points in the first two games against New York, poured in 23 points and grabbed 16 rebounds in leading Boston Wednesday night.

THE PERILS OF SPRING SKIING

Robin Williams of Hayward, Wis. learned the perils of spring skiing yesterday as she emerged from a dunking following her unsuccessful water skiing attempt on snow skis at Lake Telemark in Cable, Wis. Pirate Win Triggered By Robertson

By U.P. INTERNATIONAL

Bob Robertson didn't expect the bunt signal Wednesday night but he couldn't help looking for it.

Robertson, the slugging first baseman for Pittsburgh, came up with a runner on first and none out in the eighth inning and the Pirates trailing the Chicago Cubs 2-1.

Robertson, who missed a sign from Manager Danny Murtagh in the seventh inning of the third game of last year's World Series and then slammed a homer, was given the go-ahead sign by new Manager Bill Virdon.

Robertson, batting fourth in place of Willie Stargell, who was being given a day's rest, worked the count to 3-2 and fouled tipped a pitch that catcher Randy Hundley couldn't hold. He then lined a two-run homer that started the Pirates on to a 5-2 victory.

In the other National League games, Philadelphia blanked St. Louis 1-0, Los Angeles topped Atlanta 4-0, Houston edged Cincinnati 7-5, San Diego nipped San Francisco 4-3 and the New York at Montreal game was rained out.

In the American League, Cleveland edged Boston 3-1, New York beat Milwaukee 3-2, Chicago topped Texas 2-1, Baltimore edged Detroit 5-2, Minnesota routed California 12-3 and Oakland swept Kansas City 4-0 and 3-1.

Cesar Cedeno collected two doubles and a single as the Astros scored seven runs in the first three innings and held on to beat Cincinnati. Newly-acquired Jerry Reuss allowed nine hits in six innings but got credit for the victory. Former Astro Jack Billingham was tagged for six runs and took the loss.

OVER SAN RAFAEL

Redwood '9' Victorious

Mark Ruggles pitched his second consecutive shutout and Redwood High School scored the only run of the game on a passed ball in the first inning as the Giants defeated San Rafael High yesterday, 1-0.

The victory at Albert Park in San Rafael gave Redwood an undefeated 5-0 Marin County Athletic League record and a commanding two-game hold on first place. San Rafael slumped to 2-3.

San Rafael senior right-hander Steve Rohrs pitched well in his pressure assignment, allowing two hits, none after the second inning. Ruggles was touched for four safeties as he became the MCAL's winningest pitcher at 3-0.

Redwood's Jeff Vogel hit the game's first pitch over the left fielder's head for a double. He moved to third as San Rafael catcher Rick Klarkowski committed a passed ball, and came home on another passed ball while Mike Connor was batting.

Redwood threatened in the second when Jamie Williams doubled but was thrown out going for third, and again in the third frame when runners advanced to second and third with two out.

San Rafael threatened in the third when Dirk Gansloser doubled with one out, and after an intentional walk to Mike Farris, both advanced on a fielder's choice, but the next man struck out.

go in winning in the National League West last year, took a 3-2 lead in the eighth inning when Ken Henderson singled in Tito Fuentes from second.

Fuentes jarred the ball loose in a home plate collision with San Diego catcher Bob Barton.

Bobby Bonds singled home Willie Mays in the first inning and scored the Giants' second run in the fourth on Fran Healy's single.

Tam Errors Help San Marin Win

San Marin High School stole eight bases and Tamalpais committee four passed balls yesterday, enabling the Mustangs to eke out a 7-5 Marin County Athletic League baseball victory despite getting only two hits.

The victory at San Marin left the Novatans tied for second at 3-2 with Drake and Novato High, two full games behind Redwood. Tam is last at 0-5.

San Marin broke a 5-5 tie in the fourth inning as winning pitcher Ken Siler reached base on an error, and pinch-runner Steve Pratt stole second, went to third on an infield out and tallied on a passed ball. The Mustangs struck again in the fifth when two walks, a passed ball and two steals put men on secone and third, and a catcher's throwing error brought the man on third in.

Tam led off the game with four straight singles, with those by Clifford Hall and Donald Parker plating runs. Tim Nowell singled home the third tally of the inning. Nowell was the unlucky losing pitcher.

San Marin came back with four in the bottom half of the first inning on a bases-loaded walk, a two-run error and a double steal. Tam went back ahead with two in the third on run-scoring singles by Hall and Carl Freeman, but San Marin tied it on a walk, stolen base, infield out and passed ball.

TRACK

Petaluma, Santa Rosa Deadlock

Petaluma High School came close to its first North Bay League track and field victory of the year yesterday, but had to settle for a tie with visiting Santa Rosa High.

The Trojans, who will compete in the Martinez Relays Saturday, are now 0-2-1 in league and 2-3-1 overall.

Hurdler Larry David was a double winner for Petaluma with victories in the 120-yard low and 180 high hurdles, as was sprinter Jose Martinez who took the 100 in 10.5 and the 220 in 23.8.

3 Early Choices In California Derby At Albany

ALBANY (UPI)—Royal Owl, Solar Salute and Quack are among the early favorites for Saturday's running of the $100,000 added California Derby at Golden Gate Fields.

Eddie Belmonte, Bill Shoemaker and Laffit Pincay Jr. are among the notable jockeys who will have mounts for the 57th running of the mile-and-an-eighth. Belmonte will guide Royal Owl, Shoemaker will be aboard Quack and Pincay is scheduled to ride Solar Salute.

Favored Willful ($3.40) scored a three-quarter length victory Wednesday over Champs Champ and Riquillo in the featured Children's Theater Association Purse.

Southpaws In Demand In National League

SAN DIEGO — "We tried to get him," said Charlie Fox when he learned that the Astros were successful in swinging a deal with the Cardinals for Jerry Reuss, a 6-foot-5, 200-pound southpaw.

Late in spring training, the manager of the Giants acknowledged that he and Jerry Donovan, Horace Stoneham's executive assistant, had stepped up their trade talks with the Expos and Cardinals for Dick Dietz.

AT ONE STAGE of the talks with the Expos, Jim Fanning, Montreal's general manager, was ready to make a deal for Dietz but Gene Mauch, the Expos' field general, dinged it.

So the talks with the Cardinals were intensified but suddenly terminated when the 600 major league players walked out in baseball's first general strike.

During the 13-day strike all trade talks were suspended because the imperative issue now was settlement of the strike. On March 30, the day before the walkout, Dietz caught what was to become the final spring exhibition game for the Giants. It was in Palm Springs against the California Angels.

HARRY DALTON, the fellow who had swung so many important deals for the perennial American League champion Baltimore Orioles, was very impressed by Dietz' performance against the Angels for whom Dalton now is general manager.

Dalton went to Fox and asked if Dietz still was available. Fox told Dalton that he had no chance of getting Dietz now. It wasn't that the Giants had changed their mind about dealing Dietz. "I don't believe there is a chance of getting waivers on him in our league," Fox told Dalton.

Fox was right. When the Giants tried to get waivers on Dietz in the National League, the Dodgers claimed him for the $20,000 waiver price on April 14, the day after the strike was settled. The Giants could have taken Dietz off the waiver list but by this time Fox had made up his mind to do what he had planned to do from the opening day of spring training: platoon Fran Healy, a righthanded hitter, and Dave Rader, a lefthanded hitter, in catching roles.

RADER, WHO HAD been optioned to Phoenix on April 6 to meet the 25-player team limit for the opening day that never opened because of the strike, was recalled by the Giants and joined the team in Houston just as the Astros were announcing they had obtained Reuss from the Cardinals.

Spec Richardson, Houston's general manager who swung the deal for Reuss, said: "I think we can win it now. I felt that way even before we got Reuss because the 1972 Astros are the best club we've put on the field. But Reuss, with Dave Roberts, gives us the necessary southpaw depth we lacked before against lefthanded lineups, such as the Dodgers can throw at you."

Richardson then added: "The Dodgers aren't the only team with dangerous lefthanded hitters. The Pirates and Cubs have some pretty good lefthanded swingers, too."

THAT'S PRECISELY why the Giants traded Gaylord Perry and Frank Duffy last winter for Sam McDowell. Fox also tried to add Reuss to the Giants' pitching staff, knowing as everyone else in the National League did that the Cardinals were unhappy with Reuss, not because of his pitching but because he was a holdout who hadn't signed a contract.

He didn't report until spring training was long under way and only then because the Cardinals declared his contract automatically renewed under a reserve clause stipulation.

Marin Tar Tennis Team In Conference Playoffs

The College of Marin tennis team will play West Valley College in Campbell tomorrow in the first round of the Camino Norte Conference post-season playoffs.

Under the playoff setup, the first-place team meets the fourth-place team and No. 2 meets No. 3. Winners of the first round will collide next Tuesday, so it is possible the Tars will get another shot at league champion Canada College of Redwood City, which drubbed them last week, 9-0.

Marin clinched second place in the CNC Tuesday by defeating West Valley, 5-3. The Tars finshed at 6-1, while West Valley was 5-2. Canada was 7-0.

Marin 5, West Valley 3

A's Sign Horlen, Option Infielder

OAKLAND (UPI)—Veteran righthander Joe Horlen has been signed as a free agent by the Oakland Athletics.

Horlen, 34, was released by the White Sox this spring after he compiled a 113-113 record in 11 seasons with the club. To make room for Horlen, the A's optioned utility infielder Tim Cullen to their Iowa farm club in the American Association.

Trevino Talks Golf

A 'Waist' Of Shots

By LEE TREVINO

It's tough to think about birdies when your stomach's making bogeys. I'm not saying I got my eating and drinking program from Weight Watchers, but I don't carry any fried chicken or tamales in my bag, either.

I've seen young dudes eat like they were scared somebody was gonna steal their forks, then try to play golf. After six holes they got a belly full of misery.

I don't even eat breakfast if I'm teeing off before 9 o'clock. Maybe I'll have a roll and coffee, or milk. If I'm playing after 12 noon, corned beef hash and eggs around 9 or 10 o'clock will do me, but nothing heavy.

When it's real hot you lose a lot of body liquids, so I'll drink a little cup of water on each hole. Just one cup. Ice water is bad for a player who's hot and sweaty. Orville Moody got sick from the heat at Philadelphia, probably from too much water.

Don't stuff yourself and expect to make birdies. Go easy on the grub. AFTER you're in, a mess of tacos, nachos and a cold drink are . . . know what I mean?

Tam's Clifford Hall Is League Leader

Outfielder Clifford Hall of Tamalpais High School, a professional baseball prospect who somehow managed to hit .235 in the Marin County Athletic League last year, apparently is determined not to let it happen again.

The speedy left-handed batter belted six hits in his last two games and currently is leading the league with a .571 average. He also leads in triples, is tied for the lead in home runs, and is tied for second in doubles and runs batted in.

Novato's Bill Busher ranks second at .526. Marin Catholic's Vince Bormolini is tied for third at .462 and leads in runs batted in with five.

Leading pitcher, based on earned run average, is Gene Frey of Redwood. His ERA is 0.33, computed on a seven-inning basis, and his record is 2-0. Redwood teammate Mark Ruggles, 2-0 with a perfect 0.00 ERA in eight innings of work, barely missed the minimum qualifying total of 10 innings pitched.

The statistics, which include games through Tuesday:

A Big Week For Moller Of Redwood

Perhaps Jan-Eric Moller should run in a meet every day.

Due to rain-outs, Redwood High School's track and field team was compelled to run two meets on consecutive days last week. Moller, a distance man, was more than equal to the task.

On Thursday, he ran the Marin County Athletic League's fastest mile (4:37.5) against Terra Linda, and on Friday, he ran the fastest two-mile (9:50.8) against Novato. On Saturday, presumably, he rested.

There were several other changes in the league's best dual-meet performances for 1972. Notable among them was a 42 foot, 7-inch triple jump by Roy Garner of Tamalpais. It was the third longest in MCAL history, according to figures compiled by Redwood coach Dough Basham.

Steve McGee of Redwood heaved the shot 53-5½, sixth longest in league history. McGee had a 53-4 earlier this year, ubt it was declared unofficial because the shot put circle at Marin Catholic, where the put occured, does not have a toe board.

A 14.8 clocking by Ed Harris of Novato in the high hurdles, previously proclaimed a best, is not. The course was shorter than the normal 120 yards, according to Novato mentor Craig Bond. Harris' earlier 15.6 remains the best.

Greg Biber of Tamalpais, who virtually owns the 180 low hurdles, again lowered his best, to 21.0. Dave Janbaz of Terra Linda did 23.3 in the 220.

Redwood pole-vaulter Kip Kermoian and Novato 100 man Joe Powell each equaled their previously-established bests.

The top marks:

120 HH — Ed Harris (Novato), 15.6; 440 Relay — San Marin (Steve Goins, Larry Butti, Bob Briot, Randy Colfer), 45.3; 880 — Gary Lathrop (San Marin), 2:01.2; 100 — Joe Powell (Novato), 10.1; Mile — Jan Eric Moller (Redwood), 4:37.5; 440 — Bob Briot (San Marin), 52.4; 180 LH — Greg Biber (Tamalpais), 21.0; 220 — Dave Janbaz (Terra Linda), 23.3; Two-Mile — Jan-Eric Moller (Redwood), 9:50.8; Mile Relay — San Marin (Ron Zechlin, Gary Lathrop, Bob Briot, Randy Colfer), 3:33.4; Shot Put — Steve McGee (Redwood), 53-5½; Pole Vault — Kip Kermoian (Redwood), 12-6; Discus — Darrell Elder (Redwood), 150-2½; Long Jump — Don Nelson (Marin Catholic), 21-6; High Jump — Mark Farrar (San Rafael), 6-2; Triple Jump — Roy Garner (Tamalpais), 42-7.

SWIMMING

A Calm Before A Storm

It must be the calm before the storm.

Rick DeMont of Terra Linda High School made inroads into the sprint freestyle territory this week, but elsewhere all was quiet on the Marin County Athletic League swim scene in a lull before the championship confrontation Tuesday between Redwood (9-0) and Terra Linda (8-1).

DeMont equaled Redwood's John Redig's 50-yard freestyle time of 23.0 seconds this past week, and lowered his own 100 free time to 49.1, but there were no other changes in the listing of MCAL best times.

The top marks:

200 medley relay - Redwood (Pete Brunstetter, Paul Cane, Corky Hull, John Redig), 1:46.0; 200 free - Spencer Eldred (Redwood), 1:54.5; 200 I.M. - Rick DeMont (Terra Linda), 2:06.0; 500 free - John Redig (Redwood) and Rick DeMont (Terra Linda), the 23.0; Diving - John Summerfield (Novato), 362.45; 100 fly — Rick DeMont (Terra Linda), 57.0; 100 free - Rick DeMont (Terra Linda), 49.1; 400 free - Spencer Eldred (Redwood), 4:06.2; 100 back - Roger Rechsteiner (Novato), 1:00.8; 100 breast - Paul Cane (Redwood), 1:03.5; 400 free relay - Redwood (Troy Dunham, Spencer Eldred, John Goepp, John Redig), 3:30.6.

San Marin Track Men Tie For 1st

San Marin High School moved into a first-place tie with Redwood in the Marin County Athletic League track and field standings yesterday by defeating Tamalpais 77-59, in a meet at San Marin.

Castro Dickens won three events for Tam and Greg Biber took two more but it was not enough to offset the Mustangs.

Northern Cal Car Dealers Offer Aid In Blue Furor

By U.P. INTERNATIONAL

SACRAMENTO — A group of Northern California automobile dealers has offered to put up the salary money needed to get pitcher Vida Blue to sign his 1972 contract with the Oakland A's.

Jack Vandenberg of Sacramento, president of the 92-dealer Northern California Chrysler Sales Association, said Wednesday that the association has offered to pay the difference between what Blue is reportedly demanding in salary and what A's owner Charles Finley is offering.

"The story we hear is that Finley has offered $50,000 but that Blue will settle for $65,000," Vandenberg said. "Anyway, our Chrysler dealers will pick up the difference. We don't think it is dignified for Blue to be out of baseball and working for a plumbing concern."

Basketball

NEW YORK — Sidney Wicks was No. 2 in the National Basketball Association's collegiate draft last year but he turned out to be No. 1 in the Rookie-of-the-Year balloting.

Wicks, who scored 2,009 points for the Portland Trail Blazers, received 77 votes from a panel of sportswriters and broadcasters in the 17 NBA cities to easily win the award over Buffalo's Elmore Smith, who was a distant second with 21 votes.

Tennis

CHARLOTTE, N.C. — Tiburon's Bob Lutz was ousted yesterday by John Alexander in the $50,000 North Carolina National Bank tennis tournament singles competition but the Marinite still has championship aspirations.

After losing 3-6, 6-2 to Alexander, Lutz was set for his doubles match with teammate Arthur Ashe against Roger Taylor and Owen Davidson today.

ELECTRONIC CABLE PROTECTORS

An operator at the Philadelphia Insulated Wire Plant of GTE Sylvania Inc., Moorestown, N.J., adjusts one of a battery of shield braiding machines used to electronically protect cable used in the telecommunications and computers industries. All coaxial cable has a slight signal loss and the armored cable drains off and prevents interference with adjoining cables.

Diamond Fake Is Accepted

By JOSEPHINE RIPLEY
The Christian Science Monitor News Service

If your diamonds aren't real, don't apologize. "Counterfeit" diamonds have become socially acceptable.

More and more of today's sparklers are phonies. And it's not all a gigantic swindle. It's honest counterfeiting. People are buying these stones for what they really are — genuine frauds.

TEMPORARY ECONOMY

Many an engaged girl is now flashing a simulated diamond and doesn't care who knows it. After all, it's a temporary economy, as a rule.

Setting up housekeeping is expensive in these days of rising costs. So why pay for a real diamond when you can get a finely cut replica for only $75, and put the difference into furnishings for the new home, young couples ask themselves.

Not that "counterfeit" diamonds really take the place of the genuine gem. That will probably come later, after the heavy expenses of homemaking have been met.

ONLY JEWELER KNOWS

But it's not only the young people who are buying these replicas. Many of the well-to-do who already possess fine gems have stashed them away in the vault and are now wearing simulated jewels so genuine in appearance that only their jeweler knows the difference.

In this case, it's not only a safety measure, but an economy as well. The cost of insurance for real jewels is lower when they are kept in a vault.

Even jewel thieves have been taken in sometimes by these very genuine looking counterfeits.

COUNTERFEIT STOLEN

The story is told of a man who bought a 24-carat replica to replace a ring he had in storage, only to have the counterfeit stolen within a matter of weeks.

He laughed — and sent for another to replace it. Not long afterward, another jewel thief bit the dust.The replacement was stolen. The owner laughed again, but not as hard.

Many of these fine fake diamonds are cut by experienced European lapidists.

FUTURE ECONOMY CAR

Two views of the Modulo, a low-priced economy car of the future designed by Italian designer Sergio Pininfarina and exhibited yesterday at the 16th Annual New York International Automobile Show. The car has no doors, no drag and the whole front slides forward for passengers to walk in, standing up to be seated. The dashboard has been eliminated and controls are in an adjustable sphere at the driver's right. A partial vacuum created by the fastback rear is eliminated by holes and vents that also draw in air to cool the engine.

Soybean Futures Had A Good Week

CHICAGO (BW) — Soybean futures values advanced throughout the week making new contract seasonal high levels in the process, according to the Chicago board of trade's weekly summary.

This week's advances moving futures into new, upside, uncharted territory came on follow through response to the tight balance between supply and demand being drawn by domestic and export users of the old crop.

SUCCESSFUL INVESTING

Stock's Price Rise Makes Sale Good

By ROGER E. SPEAR

Q. A few years ago when our son was employed there, he urged us to buy shares of Sheller-Globe. We are in our seventies and need income. Would you advise a change at this time? — M.M.

A. The 80 per cent price rise since the end of the year presents an excellent chance for you to sell these Big Board shares. While further appreciation is anticipated over the next several years, the strong performance of the first quarter will undoubtedly be modified. As a replacement, First Mortgage Investors offers a generous indicated return of 9.1 per cent. Listed on the NYSE, FIM was the first mortgage investments trust to qualify under the REIT Act of 1960.

For the year ended Jan. 31, 1972, earnings reached $2.40 a share, an 18 per cent increase year-to-year. In the previous five years earnings have increased an average of 15 per cent compounded annually. Further earnings gains, reflecting the upturn in construction, are anticipated this year. Since at least 90 per cent of earnings must be paid to shareholders in order to retain tax exemption as an investment trust, dividends should remain generous.

Q. I am 19 and this will be my first venture in the stock market. I am interested in buying Maritime Fruit Carriers (OTC) and would like your opinion on it. — L.G.

A. Company has just reported its fifth consecutive year of rising earnings. Sales for 1971 gained 67 per cent to $47.6 million. On a fully diluted basis, earnings rose to $1.49 a share from $1.31 in 1970 despite a 15 per cent increase in shares outstanding. Maritime's 24 automated refrigerated cargo ships are chartered to a Swedish company. By 1974 the fleet will number 41 ships.

Other activities include oil tanker operations, a 75 per cent interest in an oil venture company and insurance. Although shares are trading at 15x last year's earnings, the $80-million market value of common is almost double 1971 sales volume. Long-term debt was $97 million and current ratio less than 1-to-1 at the 1970 year end, not unusual in the transportation industry. Maritime has speculative appeal.

Late Flurry Erases Loss In Market

NEW YORK (UPI)—A flurry of buying late in the session today on the New York Stock Exchange erased some early losses and the list closed mixed in fairly active trading.

Of the more than 1,743 issues traded, declines led advances by around 250 issues.

The Dow average was down more than five points at one time.

Analysts attributed the market's comeback to selective interest in quality issues. The sharp downturn earlier stemmed from stepped-up activity in Vietnam and the budget in the inflation rate. Analysts had said the market appeared "tired" after a five-month advance.

First quarter earnings reports continued to help a number of stocks.

RCA was again actively traded. Trading was led by a block of 89,500 shares at 38 3-4, up 1-2.

Dentsply got a boost after announcement by the American Dental Association saying it has provisionally accepted the dental supply firm's new plastic sealant designed to stop decay.

Prices were slightly lower in fairly active trading on the American Stock Exchange.

Marin's New Shut-In Service Can Help Almost Any Needy

A new service called SIS has opened up in Marin to help make life more pleasant for shut-in patients — older adults, the chronically ill, and almost anyone needing assistance.

SIS, which stands for Shut-In-Services, is operated by Maxine Cooley of Post Office Box 2434, San Rafael, 94902. She's in the phone book under SIS. The service is available on either a regular schedule or on a one-time only basis.

Mrs. Cooley explained that she launched the business at the suggestion of a Marin doctor who saw a crying need for the service. People who are confined like to know that someone cares. SIS will call daily or periodically and make a personal visit if there is no answer after several calls.

Other services offered by SIS are personal visits daily or periodically, shopping for those who cannot get to a store, secretarilal and bookkeeping services for the shut-in, and dozens of other little chores that may seem impossible for one who is confined.

"This is an organization that exists to help when relatives or friends cannot," said Mrs. Cooley. "Most families appreciate the assurance of having SIS to call on when they are not available. This service is not intended to replace family assistance — only as a supplement to it."

All services are $7.50 per hour, except telephone reassurance calls. This fee varies with the number of calls made each month.

RONALD W. MURPHY of San Rafael has been appointed associate manager of the San rancisco-Grayson Agency of Home Life Insurance Co. The firm specializes in pension planning and advanced underwriting.

Murphy started with Home Life in 1967 as a supervisor in San Rafael and was assigned to the western regional office in San Francisco in 1969.

JAMES C. NELSON JR. of Lucas Valley, executive vice president and creative director of Hoefer, Dieterich and Brown advertising agency, was principal speaker at the Wednesday meeting of the San Francisco Advertising Club. He urged the advertising industry to be more responsive to what women are saying and thinking today.

BRITTON'S CHEVRON has taken over the former Darrell Foust Chevron Service at 1722 Fourth Street in San Rafael.

New owner Garry Britton, who took over this month, has been in the business since 1947, mostly with Chevron Service in Danville. He will keep the station open seven days a week from 6 a.m. to midnight. Helping Britton manage the station is Robert Steward, who was with Foust Chevron for the past five years.

Britton's Chevron Station offers such services as front end alignment, brake service, tune-up, and smog control inspection and service. Britton has all the state licenses issued by the Bureau of Automotibe Repairs.

Darrell Foust, the former owner, sold the station to Britton and went into the selling field.

GOLDEN GATE MARKET in Sausalito, owned by Albert M. Leet for 30 years, may soon be sold to his son and one of his employees.

Prospective purchasers are Donald L. Leet and a long-time employee, Ervin D. Cox of Mill Valley. Cox said the transfer of ownership of the market and the off-sale liquor license is still pending because the legal papers have not been completed. No change is contemplated in the operation of the market, located at 221 Second Street.

PACIFIC HOUSE in San Anselmo at 727 Sir Francis Drake Boulevard, next to Sight and Sound TV, carries a complete line of jade, pearls and coral. The last time we reported on the expansion of Pacific House, we failed to mention jade, pearls and coral among the Far East art objects sold at the store. Customers are invited to have tea and cookies with owner-manager Maria Miyagi Bartruff.

Some Medi-Cal Lab Payments Criticized

SACRAMENTO (UPI) —The Medi-Cal program is paying "too much" for clinical laboratory services and Reagan administration changes to cut the costs are "inadequate," a legislative report said today.

The report, prepared y the auditor general's office, was submitted to the legislature by the Joint Legislative Audit Committee.

The report saia the Medi-Cal reimbursement system conducted by California Blue Shield for providers of laboratory services in "cumbersome and lacking in control because of excessive manual pricing of claims."

"We conclude that the MediCal program is paying too much for laboratory services," the report said.

It noted the Department of Health Care Services last year under the Medi-Cal Reform Act issued changes on its clinical laboratory regulations on an emergency basis.

But the report said the changes were "inadequate" because they affect only 16 laboratory tests out of a total of about 690 tests.

It also said the department gave Blue Shield permission to set payment policy if the policy does not conflict with department regulations or the prices do not exceed the maximum price schedule.

But the report said, "Blue Shield has made changes without the department's knowledge which are in conflict with the regulations."

The committee recommended that Blue Shield set up reimbursement rates for tests conducted simultaneously by automated methods instead of billing Medi-Cal for each individual test in such circumstances. It said such a practice will hold down costs.

Other recommendations include reviewing maximum reimbursement rates for laboratory procedures, periodically monitoring of lab payments to determine if Blue Shield is to comply with policy guidelines and requiring Blue Shield to use a computer to process claims as a means of reducing errors.

Photograph's Feature New Mexico Scenes

A display of photographs entitled "A New Mexican Village" is on view at the Social Security office, 549 Northgate Drive, San Rafael.

The photographs were taken by Lynn Adler, Jules Backus and Ben Tarcher, known collectively as the Optic Nerve. Viewing hours are 8:30 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. weekdays.

THAT WAS THE NIGHT THAT WAS

Not only did the night watchman sleep through the burglary of the Bolinas Community Center, but no one woke up to see that a $900 announcing system had been missing for a month and a half, according to sheriff's deputies.

Deputies said a guard sleeping in the the building woke up to find the door standing open in early March, but couldn't find anything missing.

Not until this month was the theft discovered and reported, deputies said.

NASA Exhibit At Larkspur Library

A special exhibit of National Aeronautics and Space Administration material has been put on display in the Larkspur Library, thanks to the interest of a group of children in the Apollo 16 journey.

The children — 4 to 6 year olds who attend the library's story hours — sent special notes and pictures to the astronauts in Houston.

The Manned Space Craft Center sent back colored photos of space crews and other NASA material. The items are on display from 10 a.m. to 9 p.m. Monday and Friday, 10 a.m.to 6 p.m. Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday and 10 a.m. to noon on Saturday.

Fire Board Seeking Director

The Kentfield Fire Protection District board will hold a special meeting next Monday night at 7:30 p.m. in the fire house to discuss appointment of a new director and decide on hose purchases, according to Kentfield Fire Chief Kenneth Kamp.

District Board member Raymond N. Vogel drowned April 8 after a boating accident in the Golden Gate.

Kamp also said the board will consider buying 2,000 feet of fire hose for the district's new 1,500 gallon per minute pumper, purchased Feb. 10, 1971 from the Van Pelt Fire Apparatus Co. in Oakdale. Delivery is expected in about two months, Kamp said.

He said the board has approved sending Asst. Fire Chief Robert G. Mariani to a fire training seminar May 1 to 5 in Fresno, and scheduled a grass and brush fire seminar at the Kentfield fire house this Friday and Saturday, to be conducted by the County fire department.

Inflation Bill Sent To House By Senate

WASHINGTON (UPI)—The Senate has passed and sent to the House a resolution calling on Americans to fight inflation by planting their own vegetable gardens this summer.

Only four senators were on the floor when the resolution passed on a voice vote.

SURVIVAL INC. IS FIGHTING TO LIVE

Faced With Money And Morale Problems, It Will Charge Marin Residents A Fee

By JAY GOODWIN

The best things in life are free.

Not any more — when you're talking about garbage recycling in Marin County.

Faced with financial ruin and deteriorating morale, the two young directors of Survival Inc. — a 14-month-old organization — have decided to charge their customers 50 cents per carload of recyclable garbage.

Survival Inc. had decided to close down its collection depots at Terra Linda, Tamalpais, San Marin, Redwood and Sir Francis Drake High Schools and Pacheco Plaza, when the suggestion was made to charge customers for the recycling service.

Beginning Saturday, the program will seek to survive on a "pay-as-you-dump" basis.

Survival Inc. is run by two directors — 24-year-old Judy Nicoll of San Rafael, and 22-year-old Roger Bockrath. She handles the organization's bookkeeping and administrative details, while he serves as the group's field director.

Yesterday, sitting in Mrs. Nicoll's home — which doubles as Survival's office — they discussed some of their group's problems.

"Our biggest problem is the communication gap we're forced to deal with," explained Mrs. Nicoll. "More than 75 per cent of the people who recycle with us don't even know what we do with all their stuff. For all they know, we're driving down the street and dumping it in the bay."

"Another public misconception that we face," she said, "is that recycling is lucrative. On an average weekend we recycle some 35 tons of cans and bottles. It takes about 100 people to do this. Our gross financial return is around $500. It's plain to see that with trucks, insurance, an office, gas and you name it . . . only about 10 per cent of those people receive anything, and then only about $1 per hour."

She attributed Survival's survival thus far to the volunteer work of a great many young people, but this, in turn can work to the organization's disadvantage, Mrs. Nicoll said, since it prevents many adults from taking it seriously.

Most people, she continued, simply don't realize the size of the job Survival is undertaking. Families drive down to one of the six depots, unload their bottles and cans and drive off.

Unless clients painstakingly sorted their bottles into clear and tinted glass, and cans into aluminum, tin or bi-metal, the volunteers are forced to spend hours doing that job.

If, as Mrs. Nicoll estimates, 25 per cent of the people of Marin dump their recyclable garbage with Survival Inc., that's a pretty big pile of garbage.

Even 100 spirited high school students can get pretty tired and disgusted, she said, when case after case of unsorted bottles get dumped at their feet.

The recyclables collected on the weekends are transportd for sale to three companies during the week.

Glass is sold at $20 per ton to the Owens-Illinois Glass Co. in Oakland. On an average weeuend, Survival Inc. might collect about $500 on that glass.

"Aluminum is easier," explained Nicoll, "because it's lightweight and we don't have to carry it as far. Survival Inc. gets $200 per ton of aluminum from the Golden Gate Distribution Corp. of San Rafael. A good weekend might bring in $150.

"Tin and bi-metal are a real pain in the neck," said Mrs. Nicoll. The sorting process, which all buyers require, is considerably time-consuming for cans. Survival yields about $80 a weekend on these cans from the M and T Chemical Co. of South San Francisco.

While sensing a genuine concern among many businesses for the ecological benefits of recycling, Mrs. Nicoll believes that most firms buying garbage from Survival Inc. are simply tolerating the group — not helping it.

"They're taking our glass as a public relations trip," she said. "They're for recycling bottles as we're doing it now. If we tried recycling bottles without smashing them, you know the bottling companies would not be as friendly."

National figures, Mrs. Nicoll said, attribute about five pounds of garbage daily to each person. In Marin that works out to 1,000,000 pounds, or 500 tons daily. At least half this, she said, is generated by homes, not industry.

Mrs. Nicoll said that since technology cannot yet handle this, and educating the public to cut down on the generation of waste needs time, Survival was formed, not as a solution but as an interim effort to buy time.

Up to their necks in recyclable garbage, Mrs. Nicoll and Bockrath have turned to the county for help. At one time or another, they've asked for use of county-owned trucks to assist in transporting the garbage; access to a corporation yard or paved parking lot that would eliminate the need to use their tiny lot near the College of Marin and respect from the board of supervisors for the work Survival Inc. is doing.

"We want to get rid of the attitude that this is a kid's project," said Bockrath. "This is a county problem and it's time we all tackled it together."

In the near future, according to Mrs. Nicoll, supporters of the recycling group will ask to have their formal requests placed on the board of supervisors agenda.

Until then, the high school students will continue to sort the unsorted mountains of glass and metal. Approximately 300 to 400 people will continue to drop off their garbage at each depot each weekend. And Survival Inc. will continue to struggle — unassisted — with its enormous task.

SORTED OUT — Some of the waste, generated by the hundreds of tons daily in Marin, sits neatly sorted in barrels, some holding flattened paper cartons, some holding tinted glass, some holding clear glass, some holding flattened aluminum cans, some holding tin cans. Most of this sorting, Survival volunteers say they must do because householders either are too lazy or unaware to do it themselves.

HELP, IF YOU CAN — One of the Survival Inc. volunteers unloads a gunnysackful bi-metal cans at the M and T Chemical Co. in South San Francisco. The recycling group gets paid $10 per ton for these cans.

Bay Smog Leaders Hit Proposition 9

I-J Special Report

SAN FRANCISCO — Bay Area smog officials yesterday branded Proposition 9 as an unworkable proposal that would clog the courts and interfere with the urgent need for nuclear power plants.

Bay Area Air Pollution Control District directors agreed unanimously that the Environment Initiative on the June ballot should be rejected by the voters.

The proposition would set unprecedented limits on lead in fuel, prevent new offshore oil or gas leases, bar nuclear power plants for five years, bar persistent pesticides and set extremely tough conflict of interest provisions for members of agencies regulating air and water quality.

Industry has objected that it will be impossible to comply with many of the antipollution provisions in the proposition. It would fine polluting companies .4 per cent of their previous annual gross income for each day they violate pollution limits.

The smog officials, with 10 of 18 directors present, postponed a formal vote opposing the proposition to their May 3 meeting so that more directors could vote on it.

First Curbs On The Brown Air

I-J Special Report

SAN FRANCISCO — Bay Area smog officials, after 17 years in business, yesterday adopted their first limit on nitrogen oxides, the pollutant that turns air brown.

The key pollutant that cooks under the sun into photochemical smog, these oxides also irritate the lungs of sensitive people. The new regulation, aimed at large power plant and industrial boilers, will eliminate up to 30 tons of the oxides that end up in the air each day, district officials estimated.

This reduction still would leave 180 tons a day from sources under district jurisdiction. Motor vehicles add another 419 tons a day, a figure to be cut by future emission controls.

The new limits will apply to new and expanded operation of both large and medium-size boilers, and to existing large boilers in three years. Existing medium-size boilers were exempted pending further staff study of the feasibility of cutting their emissions of nitrogen oxides.

Spokesmen for Pacific Gas and Electric Co. insisted that these medium-size boilers cannot be modified to meet the limits. Changes to the large boilers alone will cost up to $10 million, they said.

The district's advisory council had recommended limits apply only to new and expanded boilers, but existing large boilers had to be included at the last momentwbecause of demands by the state Air Resources Board. The district's administrator, D.J. Callaghan, conceded that he had overlooked the state board's requirements when the advisory council drafted the regulation.

The board voted 10-1 to approve the new limits. Director Mountain View City Councilman William R. Jelavich, an outspoken critic of Callaghan, refused to approve the limits without their review by the advisory council. He noted that the limits had been under study by the district since January, 1970.

The staff estimated that the combined effects of the new district limits and new car smog controls will cut nitrogen oxide emissions by 1985 back to the 1955 level of 300 tons a day. The daily tonnage, however, will climb again after 1985 because the increased number of motor vehicles will more than offset the effect of smog controls according to the staff.

Paul Matthew, manager of PG&E's steam generation department, insisted that "we just don't know how" to cut emissions from existing medium-size boilers to meet the proposed limit. "We have an orderly process" of replacing boilers with improved equipment that may meet the limits, he said, adding that boilers last up to 40 years.

On another issue, cracking down on heavy pollution when industrial equipment breaks down, the board again postponed action to June 22. The issue has been under study by the district since May, 1969.

Citizen groups have urged that all breakdowns be prosecuted as violations of district regulations. They now are excused as unavoidable accidents in most cases.

Glenn H. Baumer, environmental engineer for Phillips Petroleum Co., said "there are hazards in our civilization, and we have to put up with them or abandon our civilization." While some of the breakdowns are caused by human error, he said, "in many cases they are not avoidable."

In other business, the board appointed Dr. David T. Mage, assistant professor at San Jose State College's school of engineering, to a vacancy on the advisory council. Mage early this month reported that air pollution in the Bay Area is far worse than reported by district officials.

His appointment was urged by the labor councils of Contra Costa and Santa Clara counties.

Jury Returns Guilty Verdict

A jury in Marin Superior Court yesterday convicted Ernest Edwin Scott, 38, of San Francisco of selling heroin to an undercover agent in Sausalito last August.

After five and a half hours of deliberation, the jury returned its verdict and Judge E. Warren McGuire set sentencing for May 23.

Scott turned himself in to San Francisco police Oct. 14 when he learned he was wanted for the sale of $380 worth of heroin.

Pastor Says Hart Not A Minister

Rev. Reuben J. Sequiera, minister of the Assembly of God Church in San Rafael, said yesterday that Leonard B. Hart, ordered jailed last month for embezzling money from the Grateful Dead rock group, is not an ordained minister of that church.

Reverend Sequiera said a check with church of .cials contradicted the claims in court of Hart's attorney, Robert McCreadie, that his client was a minister in the Assembly of God church.

HOW TO KEEP WELL

By DR. THEODORE R. VAN DELLEN

Smothering Baby With Love Doesn't Mean A Happy Adult

Does the quality of love and care influence the future personality of an infant? Many pediatricians and psychiatrists believe it does, although this theory is difficult to prove. Total inattention may adversely affect the personality, but smothering the baby with love and affection is no guarantee he will become an emotionally stable adult. Certain studies show children deprived of all mothering do not flourish. Other surveys suggest such children become emotionally retarded or unstable.

The opposite also occurs. Some youngsters reared in institutions mature more quickly and outstrip their playmates who have been showered with maternal love. However, factors other than love during early life enter the picture. Important as is mothering, so are playmates.

RESEARCH on rhesus monkeys at the University of Wisconsin has helped in understanding these problems. Primates show three basic social responses: affection, fear, and aggression. According to the Wisconsin studies, monkeys show a "frightening comparability to children" when deprived of love. In certain cases, normal patterns of development can be blocked and disrupted. For example, an infant monkey raised without its mother forms strong emotional attachments to soft, cloth-covered substitute mothers. The animals do not respond affectionately to "wire mothers," even tho they receive nourishment from the mother substitute.

AFFECTION, a reaction to cuddling, warmth, and food, is followed by fear. The latter occurs as the infant grows and begins exploring a somewhat hostile world. Aggression ensues when the monkey is older and mature enough to take care of itself. A young rhesus monkey can manage without its mother if it associates with other monkeys. If deprived of both mother and peers, it becomes fearful, aggressive, and sexually inadequate. It is the warm relationship with others of the same age that does most to ensure normal development.

According to Wisconsin psychologist Harry F. Harlow, there are definite advantages to these animals having two sources of affection — mother and peers. Each compensates for the deficiencies of the other. Rhesus mothers denied normal affection in early life may be brutal to their offspring. Human mothars do the same, and the battered baby syndrome is an example of the outcome of this type of deprivation.

DISPLACED SHOULDER JOINT

G.R. writes: My shoulder has come out of place three times recently. I'm 32 years old and would like to know if there is a cure for this type of dislocation.

REPLY

Yes. Surgery is indicated after three dislocations. The capsule that supports the shoulder is stretched or torn and must be repaired, to hold the socket together.

Brandt In London

LONDON (UPI)—West German Chancellor Willy Brandt arrived today for a two-day confidential summit with Prime Minister Edward Heath on the organization of an enlarged Europe and future relations with the Soviet bloc.

Legal Bingo Bill Passed By Assembly

SACRAMENTO (UPI) —The Assembly yesterday passed legislation clearing the way for legalization of nonprofit, charitable bingo games over objections it would lead California down the "inexorable" path of permitting all gambling.

Assemblyman Robert W. Crown, D-Alameda, warned, "We should not permit a break in the dike."

He said the question was "whether or not we're going down that inexorable path towards legalized gambling."

But Assemblyman Leroy F. Greene, D-Sacramento, author of the legislation, said he had a list of 1,911 places where bingo is currently being played in violation of state law, including city police associations, a mortuary, churches, lodges and country clubs.

"It is going on today. It went on yesterday and it will go on tomorrow no matter what you do," Greene told his colleagues.

The House voted 55-12 to send to the Senate his proposed constitutional amendment permitting bingo. A companion bill was passed 44-22.

The amendment needed 54 votes and the bill 41.

If approved by the voters, the constitutional amendment would permit the nonprofit games on a local option basis. The bill imposes stringent controls on the games including making it a misdemeanor for persons to receive a profit, wage or salary from the game.

San Diego Still Site Of GOP Convention

WASHINGTON (UPI) —The Republican Party conceded yesterday preparations for its 1972 convention in San Diego had run into "major problems" but said it was "presently proceeding with plans" to meet in the California city Aug. 21.

R. L. Herman, vice chairman of the GOP convention arrangements committee, left open the possibility, however, that the party still might move to another site.

"The arrangements committee does have major problems in San Diego," said Herman in a statement released by the Republican National Committee.

"We are working on them and so are the people of San Diego. It is unlikely that all the difficultues can be solved completely. Most of them can be met even though the situation may not be ideal. Thus, we are presently proceeding with our plans to open the Convention in San Diego Aug. 21. However, it is my obligation to attempt to prepare for any eventuality and to be aware of alternatives."

In a story in the Miami news, Herman was quoted as also saying: "If Miami Beach has an interest, they should make an offer."

The newspaper also said that Jesse Weiss, a member of the Miami Beach Tourist Development Authority, reported that high ranking GOP officials had telephoned him twice last week about the possibility of moving the convention to Miami Beach, which will also be the site of the Democratic convention.

"The people who talked to me are too high in the party to play games," Weiss said. "I think they are very sincere in wanting to come to Miami Beach."

Herman's statement said the "critical problem lies in modifying the San Diego Sports Arena, where the convention is to be held," but that there was also problems of securing enough hotel space and in obtaining cash commitments from the city.

"Our architect and contractor inform us that all of the modifications of the arena cannot be completed in time unless work can begin sooner than the arena owner presently will permit," Herman said.

Another "stumbling block," said Herman, "has been a location of the anchor booths for the television networks that would be satisfactory to both the networks and us."

He also said the San Diego Civic Host Committee "has been having some difficulty in meeting the commitments made in its bid to us."

"We expected to have 12,500 hotel rooms reserved by this time," Herman said, "with a prospect of increasing that number to 14,000 or even 14,500. Today we have available 11,200 rooms, a number which would not permit us to accommodate all of the estimated 4,500 news media within the immediate area."

As for money, Herman said his committee had received $100,000 of the $600,000 pledged in cash by the San Diego community.

The agreed on schedule, he said, called for paying of $200,000 "each on Aug. 1, 1971, and Jan. 1, 1972, and April 1, 1972."

"We understand the Civic Committee has pledges for these funds, and that their cash commitment will be met. The arrangements Committee has now reached a point where we need the funds to meet our own commitments."

Fire Hits Peace Groups' Quarters

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — The headquarters of two anti-war groups were gutted by an arson fire Wednesday, causing "considerable damage."

A spokesman for the peace groups said at least $4,000 worth of furniture and equipment was lost in the two blazes.

The fire department said flammable liquids were poured on printing material to ignite the fires in the offices of the northern California peace action coalition and the Student Mobilization Committee.

Pamphlet Available On VD Crisis

A vivid green pamphlet entitled "The V.D. Crisis" has been published for public distribution by the Marin County Department of Public Health Services.

Dr. Carolyn B. Albrecht, county health officer, said the pamphlet, available by writing to health educator Natalie Posner in Room 400 of the Civic Center, "contains answers to many questions that people have about VD and what can be done to control the present epidemic of gonorrhea."

Love, Hate Notes Flood Tax Board

SACRAMENTO (UPI) —A strange collection of love and hate notes has inundated the state Franchise Tax Board along with the usual flood of income tax returns this year.

Among the potpourri of taxpayers' messages opened by frenzied state workers Wednesday was a letter from a young woman explaining why she had enclosed signed W-2 forms.

"In case you were wondering, IB did not try to burn my W-2s out of anger," she wrote the board. "I would have liked to.

"I had a slight misfortune with a candle. Trying to be romantic and figure taxes at the same time does not work (Hah!)."

Another taxpayer wrote: "If the state of California slides into the sea, do I get my $64 back?"

"If this is for the war on poverty, where do I surrender?" was one wry remark.

A merchant seaman tried a novel approach through taxes in trying to get a date. He told the board he was 25 years old, 5'10" and 170 pounds.

"I just want to meet a nice girl in this off the-wall way to do it," he wrote. "Please write back if you know somebody who wants to try this."

Other notes were caustic. "Please use this money more wisely than you have been in the past," one taxpaper wrote.

One person enclosed a button with the note: "I would give my shirt but the U. S. federal got it."

But others enclosed good tidings. One taxpayer sent a beautiful Christmas card with a partridge and a pear tree. "Have a Merry Christmas" was crossed out and scribbled in was the salutation: "Have a happy tax season."

A spokesman for the tax board said thus far it had processed 2 1-4 million returns of the 6 million expected this year. The deadline for filing state returns was midnight Monday.

He said about $415 million has been banked by the state thus far of an expected total of about $1.2 billion.

He noted that the state switched to a withholding system this year so next year most of the money will have been collected before income tax return time.

The board spokesman also said some taxpayers this year forgot to claim the 20 per cent forgiveness deduction because of the switch to the withholding system. He said in such cases the tax workers will recompute the return to include the forgiveness and mail the forgetful taxpayer a refund.

Five Girls To Compete For Tile Of Miss Sonoma County

Five Marin and Southern Sonoma girls will be competing for the title of Miss Sonoma County at the 25th annual pageant tomorrow at 8 p.m. at the Santa Rosa Veterans Memorial Auditorium.

Local contestants include Linda Watson of Mill Valley, Susan Dennis and Holly Reynolds of Novato and Patty Blundell and Jill Rath of Rohnert Park.

Other contestants are Carey Moore, Gail Poladian and Joan Goode of Santa Rosa and Sally Christianson of Healdsburg.

Miss Watson, 21, is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. D. Watson of Mill Valley and is a senior dance major at Sonoma State College. She graduated from Tamalpais High School in 1968. Miss Reynolds, 20, is the daughter of James R. Reynolds of San Rafael and Patricia Reynolds of San Francisco. She is a home economics major at Santa Rosa Junior College and graduated from San Marin High School in 1970.

Miss Dennis, 20, is also a 1970 graduate of San Marin and attends Santa Rosa Junior College. She is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George Dennis of Novato.

Miss Blundell, 18, is the daughter of June Blundell of Santa Rosa. She graduated from Rancho Cotate High School, Rohnert Park, in 1971 and is employed by State Farm Insurance. Jill Rath, 23, is a senior at Sonoma State, majoring in sociology. She is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Rath of Sebastopol.

A total of $1,200 will be given in scholarships at the pageant and the winner will go on to compete in the Miss California Pageant at Santa Cruz in June.

Power Cut By Backhoe In Novato

Power was out to about 600 customers in northeast Novato yesterday after a backhoe accidently flipped a private telephone line into the primary power line, according to John Zima, manager of the Novato office of Pacific Gas and Electric Co.

The mishap occurred between Highway 101 and the Northwestern Pacific Railroad Co. tracks, north of Atherton Avenue, shortly before 11:30 a.m. The backhoe, owned by MGM Construction Co., was working on pipeline relocation for the North Marin County Water District in connection with the Highway 101 bypass project.

Zima said it flipped the private telephone line used by PG&E.

Power was restored to 95 per cent of the customers in about 30 minutes, Zima said.

Sausalito Nursery Sets Spring Fair

Sausalito Nursery School will sponsor a spring fair May 6 and 7 in downtown Sausalito, behind the Bank of America branch on Bridgeway from 11 a.m. to 5 p.m. each day.

According to school officials, arts, crafts and flea market booths will be set up in the fund raising event.

Ex-Marin Schools Chief May Leave Berkeley Job

I-J Special Report

BERKELEY — Dr. Richard L. Foster, former Marin County schools superintendent who has resigned as chief of Berkeley schools, held out the possibility yesterday he may recant.

"Closed minds are the mark of narrow people," Foster told the Independent-Journal.

Foster announced his resignation, effective in April 1973, at a board of education meeting Tuesday night, although the five-member board, with two abstentions, voted to reject it.

The superintendent, whose career has been shadowed by controversy, indicated yesterday he was firm in his decision at this time but that the situation could change within the next year.

He said his resignation was due in part to the "administration being treated less than . . . men." He did not elaborate.

Foster added he always has been of the belief that urban school administrators should "stay on for three, five years, get an 'R and R' (rest and recreation), then move on."

Foster was namd to the Berkeley job in 1969, several months after resigning as superintendent of the San Ramon Valley Unified School District bacause of what he termed the "attacks of a highly vocal rightist group."

Foster, long a fighter for desegregation and special educational opportunities for minorities, had widespread support when his term began, but had come under fire within the last year.

Many of Berkeley's teachers game him a "no confidence" vote in a poll conducted in March 1971 by the Berkeley Educators' Association and the Berkeley Federation of Teachers.

Rev. W. Haziah Williams, a black member of the board of education, accused two white board members Tuesday night of undercutting the superintendent.

McCarthy Marin Leader Is Selected

Richmond Young of Corte Madera, a former College of Marin student, has been named coordinator of the Marin McCarthy for President Campaign, supporting former Sen. Eugene J. McCarthy.

Young, 20, is president of the Marin County Young Democrats for Change, Marin County Democratic Central Committee and chairman of the California Democratic Council Youth Caucus.

Two Awarded Scholarships In Teaching

Two students at Dominican College in San Rafael have been awarded $500 scholarships for teacher training by the California Congress of Parents and Teachers.

One of the winners, Delores B. Booker of 26 Mount Whitney Drive, San Rafael, is working for an elementary school credential. She is a graduate of Hampton Institute in Virginia and has been doing teacher's aid and library aid work at Dixie School in Terra Linda and Wolfe Grade School in Kentfield.

The other winner is Mary Johnson of Ukiah, who is working for a credential in special education.

Military Reservists To Have San Rafael Session

About 400 military reserve leaders are scheduled to attend a convention of the California Units of the Reserve Officers Association of the United States in San Rafael May 5-7.

Retired Army Lt. Col. Aaron E. Rucker of Kentfield, convention chairman, said the business session will start at 9 a.m. May 6 at the Holiday Inn with a flag pageant.

Maj. Gen. Rollin B. Moore Jr., commander of the Western Air Force Reserve Region, Hamilton Air Force Base, will be the keynote speaker.

On the afternoon of May 6, leaders will discuss "What's in Store for the Reserve Forces in the Future?" at three separate section meetings.

Maj. Gen. O. A. Leahy, deputy commanding general, Sixth Army, will speak at the Army section; Maj. Gen. Homer I. Lewis, chief of Air Force Reserve, at the Air Force section; and Rear Adm. Edward Wilson of the Naval Reserve, and Capt. Robert M. Pond, deputy chief of staff, 12th Naval District, at the Naval section.

Officers will be elected and installed at a formal military banquet that evening.

The agpipe Band of the Army Reserves' 91st Division and the Marin Chapter of the Sweet Adelines will entertain.

John T. Carlton of Washington, D. C., executive of the Reserve Officers Association of the United States, will be the installing officer.

A GIANT RACKET

Federal Jaws Close Trapping Of 'Gators

By JOHN DILLIN
The Christian Science Monitor
News Service

ATLANTA — Federal jaws have snapped shut on the multi-million-dollar alligator hide racket. Trading has almost halted in the past few weeks, U.S. officials say.

A two-year probe by federal agents has uncovered the names of 460 persons, including just about every man and woman an illegally trading 'gators in the southeastern United States, the officials add.

As many as 112 people may be indicted in the next 12 months.

Alligators are on the list of endangered species in the U.S. and cannot legally be hunted. But prices are high, and thousands of skins are shipped covertly to Japan every year for processing into wallets, belts, handbags, and shoes.

The current federal crackdown bids to blunt what U.S. Attorney John W. Stokes Jr. in Atlanta calls "the greatest slaughter of wildlife since the American buffalo was killed off."

Few people realize how many alligators have been killed in the past two decades and what damage this has done to the natural environment in Florida, Louisiana, and Georgia.

In south Florida's Everglades, for example, Dr. Frank Craighead, Sr., an ecologist, estimated that in 1950 there were two million alligators. Today he estimates that 98 or 99 per cent of these have been killed, mostly by poaching. (Officials in Everglades National Park, which includes only a portion of the Everglades, say from 90 to 95 per cent of the alligators have been killed in the park itself.)

Hundreds of thousands more have been slaughtered in southern Louisiana and southeastern Georgia. Butchering goes on every night in the swamps of central Florida.

Across the southeast there are about 100 poachers, or hunters. Some make as much as $1,000 for a single night's work.

But government prosecutors have chosen to move first in this crackdown against Quince Clayton Plott, an Atlanta businessman who is charged with being a middleman in the alligator racket.

A federal grand jury here returned a 40-count indictment against Mr. Plott and his son, Christopher Joel Plott. They are charged specifically with receiving 6,294 skins from a wide range of persons in Louisiana, Texas, and Florida.

U.S. Attorney Stokes says about 40 persons in several states may eventually be charged under federal laws, and about 80 under state laws. Federal law comes into play only when skins cross state lines.

Federal jurisdiction in this area began in 1969 with passage of the Endangered Species Act. Investigations are carried out by agents of the Bureau of Sport Fisheries and Wildlife, division of management and enforcement, Department of the Interior.

State game officials cooperated in the current probe.

But states have been generally unsuccessful in protecting their alligator populations, despite night patrols and other special efforts. Federal agents, however, were able to work in the other direction when they seized voluminous records applying to the alligator racket.

With these records, agents learned names, dates of sales, prices paid, and other vital information. "Even illegal businesses must keep good records," Mr. Stokes noted.

Records showed that most skins from the United States are going to one firm — Inoue & Fujai — in Tokyo. There are no laws in Japan prohibiting such imports.

Best prices — about $6 a foot — were paid to hunters for 'gator hides in the three-to-five-foot range. The middleman got about $9 a foot once the skins were aboard a ship bound for Japan.

This middleman's price has now leaped to $22 a foot because of the federal crackdown. But few are moving, even at that price, agents assert.

Only unhappy feature of the federal effort was voiced by Frederick A. Williams, regional supervisor of the Bureau of Sports Fisheries and Wildlife in Atlanta.

Williams said that many of those 460 people suspected of trading in skins will escape prosecution because the statue of limitations ran out during the lengthy investigation. All the charges are misdemeanors and — under Florida law, for example — the government has only two years to prosecute.

The probe could have moved much faster — one agent estimated three times faster — if the wildlife agency had been given additional personnel to enforce the Endangered Species Act.

Not one officer has been added, however, in the Southeast region, and it was necessary to build the entire case by taking officers from other duties, such as enforcing migratory bird laws.

Even now, Williams says, he could use "at least a dozen investigators... full time to continue this investigation."

The probe has turned up other significant violations of "a similar nature and significance," but checking into them must be postponed indefinitely for lack of manpower, he says.

Williams says he hopes this case will call attention to what he considers a serious need for both more money and manpower to enforce the growing number of wildlife laws on the books.

CAN SMILE AGAIN — This giant alligator in the Florida swamps has something to smile about. Federal agents have almost shut down illegal trappings of 'gators for their valuable hides.

Serious Crimes Continue Moderate Climb

By PETER C. STUART
The Christian Science Monitor News Service

WASHINGTON — "Slowed down" . . . "tapering off" . . . "actual decrease."

Any American reading these descriptions of the nation's crime — issued by the Department of Justice in 1970, 1971, 1972, respectively — might well conclude that crime is declining.

It isn't. Serious crime actually continues to mount — by 31 per cent during the past three years judging by the department's own figures, albeit at a slackened pace.

The rosy pronouncements, critics say, began appearing not long after the Nixon administration came into office largely on a platform of "law and order."

Traditionally, crime statistics were left to the Federal Bureau of Investigation. The FBI routinely compiled the nation's only reliable figures, then released them to the public.

The results were workmanlike, but — in a period of rising crime rates — normally more chilling than cheery.

But in 1970, when the annual crime reports began reviewing the Nixon years, the Department of Justice started issuing its own interpretation of the FBI figures. A Justice public information officer has conceded that his office rewrites the FBI analyses.

Critics see a "self-fulfilling prophesy" — the President promises to cut crime, then his Justice Department interprets the annual crime statistics to suggest that Nixon is fulfilling his pledge. The administration denies it.

Critics add that the Justice Department was headed, until recently by the same man who ran the President's law and order campaign (Atty. Gen. John N. Mitchell).

Grumbling also has been detected, by some, from the FBI (an arm of the Justice Department) and other professional law enforcement officers.

Here's how the crime increase of the Nixon years have been described by the Justice Department:

In 1969, a 12 per cent increase in serious crime. "The rate of crime slowed down substantially" (from 17 per cent in 1968).

1970, an 11 per cent increase. "The second year in a row that crime statistics showed a tapering off of the sharp upward swing recorded during the mid-1940's."

1971, a 6 per cent increase. "Fifty-three of the nation's major cities reported an actual decrease in serious crime," Justice reported Thursday, March 30. It termed the nationwide rise "the smallest increase in six years."

Crime rates for these past six years show a continuing upward trend, although modifying: 1966, 11 per cent; 1967, 16 per cent; 1968, 17 per cent; 1969, 12 per cent; 1970, 11 per cent; 1971, 6 per cent.

Behind the "things are getting better" optimism of the Justice Department press release, however, last week's 1971 figures offer little comfort for crime-plagued Americans.

Violent crime (murder, rape, robbery, assault) rose at a sharper rate than overall crime — 9 per cent.

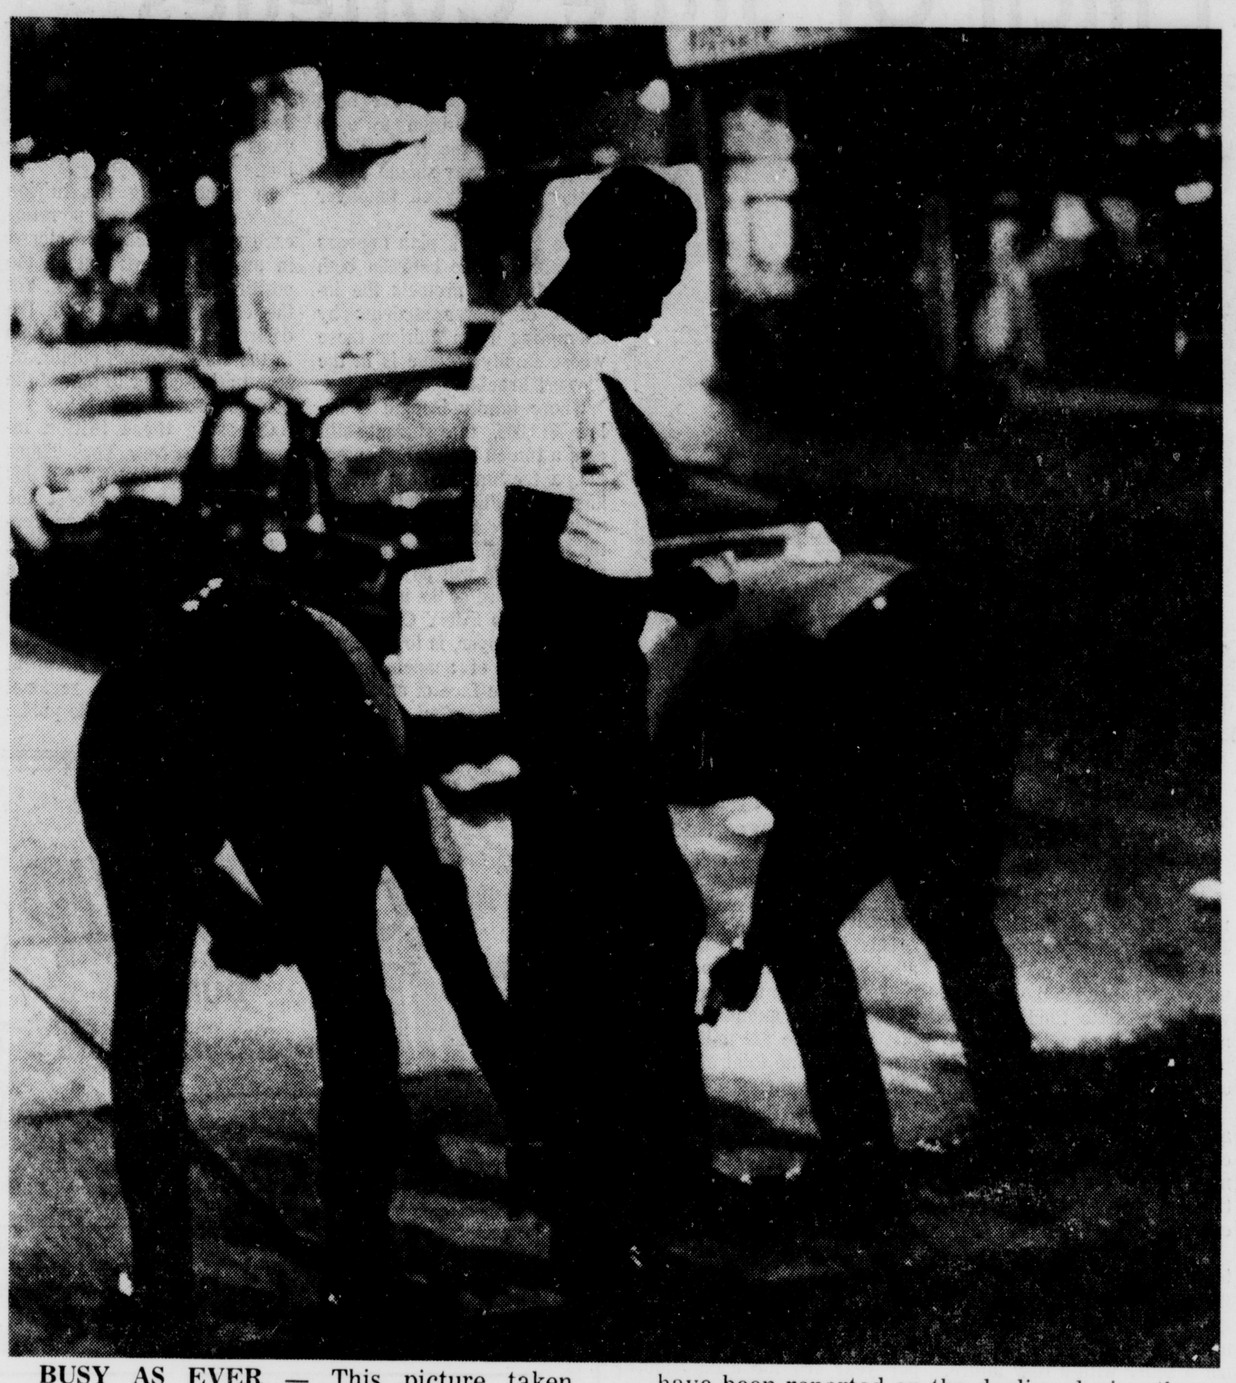
Offsetting that drop in crime in 53 major cities are hefty increases in the once safe suburbs (11 per cent) and rural areas (10 per cent).

The growing crime problem in suburban areas was analyzed about a year ago by then-Attorney General Mitchell in a magazine interview:

"Mainly (it occurs) because of the rapid growth of suburban population. Also . . . it may be partly because the city police departments are becoming so effective that criminals are moving their operations out into the suburbs, where police are not quite so effective."

Even in some cities where the crime wave is ebbing, the new figures left some citizens' fears uncalmed. Here in Washington, for example, overall crime dropped 13 per cent. But the year brought 54 more murders than the preceding year.

©1972 The Christian Science Publishing Society



BUSY AS EVER — This picture taken recently in the nation's capital shows that police are as busy as ever, no matter what crime statistics show. While minor crimes have been reported on the decline during the past three years, major crimes continue to spiral.

Private Schools Feel Pinch Of State Colleges

By KENNETH G. GEHRET
The Christian Science Monitor News Service

In recent months, high-school senior Johnny Smith has spent long hours poring over college catalogs, checking out loan and scholarship opportunities, talking with his school guidance counselor on the pros and cons of various colleges and universities.

Now he has made some decisions and mailed applications to three admissions offices.

Options open to Johnny — quality options — were many. A few decades ago he would have settled on a college within a narrower range. If money were not a pressing problem, he probably would have selected at that early date one of the fine private colleges that abound in the United States.

Or if his family were less affluent, he might well have limited his choice to a public college or university in his state. That would have held expenses down, both on tuition and travel. He might even have commuted, if the distance were not too great.

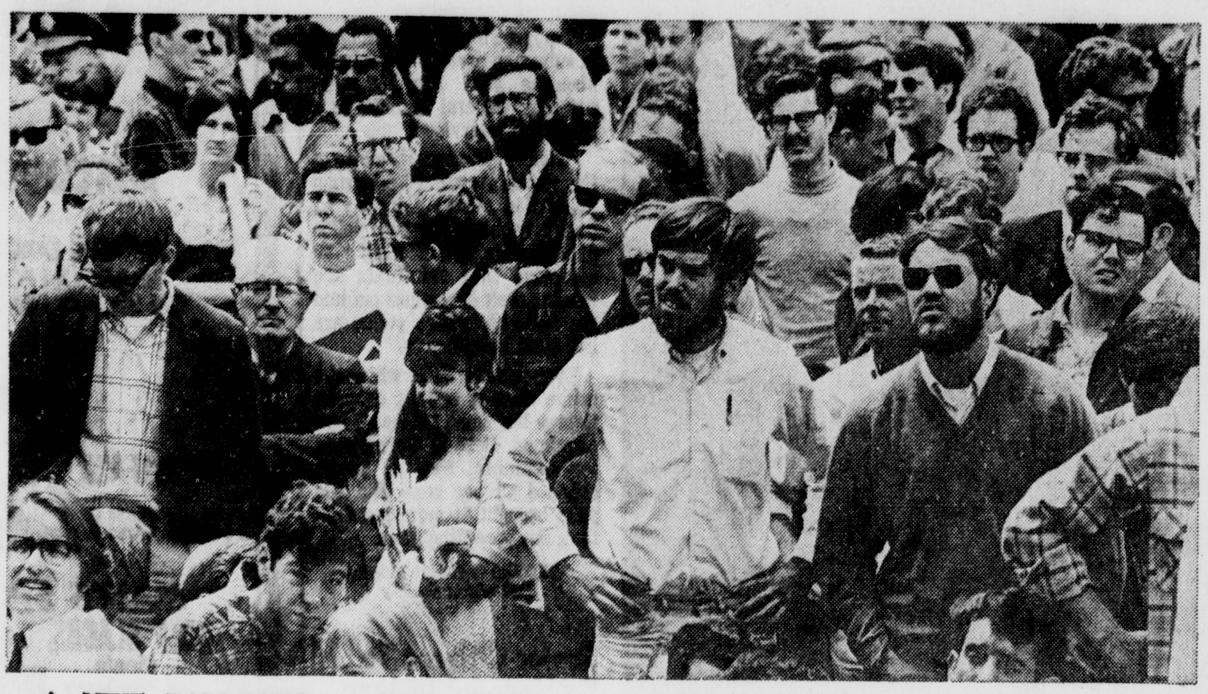
But these savings in cost of a college education would have been realized at a price — a second class education. In those days, many state-run colleges were emerging from agricultural and mechanical institutions and normal schools.

Today, the situation has dramatically changed. Although quality varies among state supported campuses (as it does elsewhere), these institutions as a group have closed the gap considerably. Some of them now rank with the best of private colleges. And their costs remain lower. Also, they often are more accessible.

One result: Johnny and his peers tend to favor publicly supported colleges and universities over private ones. So state campuses now attract five students to private colleges' two, in contrast to a 50-50 division of enrollment until 20 years ago. And the disparity continues to grow.

Feeling the pinch, officials of a number of private institutions are crying "unfair competition." They want state help to put their campuses on a more nearly equal footing with ublic colleges and universities in charges.

They reason this way: By drawing on private funds, independent and church related colleges save the taxpayers money. Burgeoning enrollments in public colleges require vast outlays for new buildings and facilities, while places in many private colleges go unfilled. The state should make use of these available places, thus saving on building costs. It could do this by making attendance at private colleges more attractive — either by a partial tuition subsidy for students choosing to go there, or by raising charges levied at state colleges.



A NEW BALLGAME — Some of these students at a state university might have gone to a private school years ago. But rising tuition costs and just as good schooling are sending more of them to state universities now. And this has resulted in an outcry from some of the nation's top private colleges and universities.

Either way, a fairer balance would be struck between the two types of institutions, proponents contend.

One advocate of state aid is Dr. John R. Silber, president of Boston University. He has said: "There is no logic in driving private universities to the point of bankruptcy in order to duplicate the facilities they now have by creating public colleges. Private universities could educate a lot more students without any additional capital outlays."

Dr. Silber claims that if his institution had been given the funds spent in developing the University of Massachusetts' Boston campus, it could have educated 20,000 students "in perpetuity."

State university officials dispute the educator's logic. But this is the kind of conflict in the area of public vs. private education that is beginning to surface.

The eruption is caused by greater intensity of feeling, because the stakes are now higher. Many private colleges and universities see themselves as approaching the point of fiscal desperation, if not yet of bankruptcy, and are struggling for a way out.

Inflation and declining income (relative or actual) have made a bad situation worse. Earlier efforts to increase income through tuition rises proved counter-productive, encouraging more students to enter state colleges.

Private institutions no doubt prefer subsidy — which is money in their pockets — to higher charges at public colleges as a way of redressing the balance between the two kinds of campuses. Plans have been proposed in several states, whereby private colleges would receive a state payment for each student admitted. The amount, however, would probably be modest, perhaps $100 per student.

General aid is already granted in some states. New York, for example, awards colleges $400 for each bachelor's and master's degree issued, and $2,400 for each doctoral degree.

Although private colleges are unlikely to abandon the effort to win more state funding, they now are lining up behind proposals for higher tuition at state colleges as an equalizer.

Expressing the sentiments of administrators on many private campuses, Dr. Robert W. Hartman of the Brookings Institution said at a recent conference:

"A seller of a service who has to recover his costs from a group of consumers who can get the same thing free — or nearly so — down the block is not a seller with a rosy future. As long as the gap between the tuition charged by the private and public sectors remains as wide as it is, the private sector will be in for a rough time."

Dr. Hartman envisions an arrangement by which students at public colleges and universities pay a reasonable tuition, with some of the money going into scholarships and some into aid for private colleges.

This is essentially the plan advocated by a group of 106 New York State private institutions. Their combined deficits last year were $29 million and are expected to total about the same this year. Private colleges and universities in the state report some 15,000 vacancies, which they attribute to the expansion of the State University of New York (SUNY) and its low-tuition policy.

But this is now about to change. Beginning with this year's summer session, SUNY's tuition will be increased substantially. Instead of a flat $550 per year fee for undergraduates, freshmen and sophomores will be charged $650, and juniors and seniors $800. Graduate students will pay correspondingly more.

Higher fees run counter to the recent emphasis on open admissions or freer access, aimed particularly at minorities and other low income individuals who might otherwise be denied a college education. On the other hand, voices have been raised in opposition to open enrollment on the grounds that those able to pay should do so, rather than rely on taxpayer support.

The New York plan appears to walk the line between both viewpoints. It protects the interest of poorer students by exempting from tuition those whose family income is in the "lowest bracket."

Where family income is below $12,000, the student still gets a tuition break. For example, a freshman whose family has net taxable income of $7,000 now pays $350 ($200 less than the full amount); under the new sechedule, he will pay $450.

The purpose of the increases, according to SUNY Chancellor Ernest L. Boyer, is to preserve the quality of academic programs in the face of an appropriations freeze. Gov. Nelson A. Rockefeller's proposed budget for the new fiscal year recommends that state university spending be held to the previous year's figure of $481 million.

In announcing the tuition hikes, Dr. Boyer made no reference to the action as designed in any way to strengthen the position of private colleges. Yet the effect is in line with the desires of the 109 college group in the state, moving public college tuition closer to that of the private institutions.

Opposing these tuition increases, the New York Times stated editorially: "Even if this maneuver were to boost the private institution's sagging enrollment, which is doubtful, it would do nothing to strengthen their long-term financial position...

"Far more productive... could be Rockefeller's appeal for a statewide and regional cooperation between the public and private sectors."

This theme is being heard more frequently. After hearing a private university president extol the virtures of private institutions over public as a reason for state aid, one Midwestern state university spokesman responded in conversation: "Now's the time to close ranks. Nothing's to be gained by private and public universities fighting for the same dollars. If we aren't careful, education itself will be harmed, and we'll both lose out."

Nodding vigorous agreement is Dr. Robert Wood, president of the University of Massachusetts, a fast growing state institution.

The university's board of trustees has announced a policy of collaboration between the university and the private universities and colleges within the state. It is evident in the cooperative arrangement in the university's "home town" of Amherst, where the university and four nearby private colleges joined forces to organize an experimenting college, and all five make up a viable consortium.

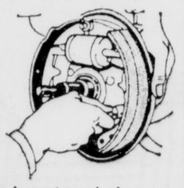
Guaranteed Brake Reline

$39.70 Drum-type Brakes
Fords, Chevys, Plymouths and American Compacts. Other models higher.

We do a lot more than reline your brakes...here's what we do:

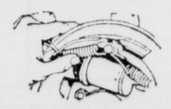
We replace your worn linings with new bonded brake linings on all four wheels.



Inspect your brake drums for contact with the linings.

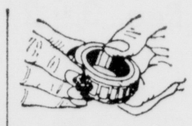
We examine your wheel cylinders and master cylinder for leaks.

Brake shoe return springs are checked for proper tension.



Next, we inspect the brake fluid lines for leaks or weak points.

Because wheel bearings can be badly damaged if the original grease has dried and caked, we clean and repack the outer bearings on both front wheels.



The final step is to add heavy duty brake fluid and road test your car.

As you can see... your money goes a long way at Firestone. It buys you prompt and dependable brake service by expert brake mechanics. Why not give us a try?

GUARANTEED 40,000 MILES OR 4 YEARS

Senkaku Islands Crisis Looms

By ELIZABETH POND
The Christian Science Monitor News Service

TOKYO — A slow-burning crisis may be developing over the technicalities of who really owns the Senkaku islands located to the northeast of Taiwan.

So far the Senkakus issue appears to be an irritant rather than a major bone of contention between Japan and the U.S., diplomatic sources suggest.

American officials are uncertain just where the repeated comments by Foreign Minister Takeo Fukuda are leading, however. Diplomats see a danger of escalation from the momentum either of domestic politics or increasing friction between Tokyo and Washington.

The uninhabited but potentially oil-rich Senkaku islands, located between Okinawa and Taiwan, are claimed concurrently by Japan, Communist China, and the Republic of China. The U.S. has administered these islands since the end of World War II as a part of the Ryukyu islands (Okinawa and its surrounding islands).

The U.S. is returning the Ryukyus (and the Senkakus) to Japanese administration on May 15, but it has reserved its position on the legal ownership of the Senkakus. It says only that it is returning administration of the Senkakus to the country from which it took over in 1945.

Paradoxically, however (as the Japanese are quick to point out), the U.S. will continue to use a bombing range on the islands under its security treaty with Japan.

Japan is unhappy with American neutrality on the subject and would like to have Washing- ton endorse its claims. Fukuda has made several statements to this effect in the past few days. He was reported as saying in the Diet that Tokyo might make a strong protest to Washington if American ambiguity continues.

It is difficult to determine the exact context and meaning of Fukuda's words, however. Earlier, he reportedly told the Diet that he would not ask for American support for Japan's territorial claims, on the grounds that the islands so clearly belong to Japan that, no American endorsement is necessary.

Some foreign diplomats think they detect a coordinated position on the Senkakus that has been thought through in advance by the Foreign Ministry. The ministry, however, has not yet made a formal approach to the U.S., informed sources report.

Fukuda might be making his statements on the Senkakus for the benefit of domestic politics. He is widely considered to be the front-runner to succeed Prime Minister Eisaku Sato this year. However, he has been losing ground recently, both in larnering party votes and on the glamorous China issue. In these areas Fukuda's chief rival within the ruling Liberal Democratic Party, International Trade and Industry Minister Kakuei Tanaka, has been making rapid gains.

The foreign minister has therefore shown himself eager to take modest initiatives that would show he is not totally bound to the pro-Taiwan and pro-American policies of the LDP's right wing, with which Fukuda is associated. Equally, he has shown himself eager to publicize his experience in Tanaka's weak spot, foreign affairs.

In this context Japan's claim to the Senkakus is an ideal popular issue for Fukuda, as it is the one aspect of the China dispute on which practically all Japanese are united. The Communist Party is reserving its position, but the other opposition parties — no matter how strong their pro-Peking impulses — support Japan's territorial claims. So also does the generally pro-Peking press.

An alternative interpretation of Fukuda's statements on the U.S. and the Senkakus might be found in increased friction and non-communication between Japan and the U.S. Ever since the "Nixon shocks" of last year, working contracts between the two countries have deteriorated. Thus, to some Japanese politicians and bureaucrats, Washington has appeared to be bringing deliberate, concerted pressure on Tokyo in the realms of China policy and economic policy.

Moreover, Japan has found the U.S. withholding major and minor information from it (as well as speaking with different tongues in the State Department, Defense Department, and White House). Whether by reflex or by design, Japan has begun to reciprocate and to withhold information from the U.S. that it would have shared freely in the past.

So far the spat has been confined to minor issues, and it may be that the Senkakus fit into this pattern.

Some diplomats, however, fear unintentional escalation of the issue. Whether the dynamics of the Senkakus flurry are to be found in domestic politics or in a Tokyo-Washington tiff, a momentum might develop that would be difficult to stop.

SENKAKU ISLANDS — These islands, located northeast of Taiwan, are the focal point of what may be a slow burning crisis over who really owns them. So far the issue, according to U.S. and Japanese diplomatic sources, is more irritating than major.

LAW IN ACTION

Advantages Of Claims Courts

Since March 1972 the small claims court has been letting people sue for up to $500. The old limit was $300.

Small claims courts have advantages. They're quick, informal, inexpensive. But they have disadvantages too. Before you file, consider what it cannot do for you.

One problem: if you're the one who files the suit, you've only got one shot. If you lose, you can't appeal, you can't get a new trial, and you can't get the court to consider new evidence after the judgment. But if you win, the other fellow may appeal — because he wasn't the one who picked the court in the first place.

Also, you're your own attorney in small claims. Sometimes that's good. You save fees. But you aren't likely to present your case quite as well to the judge.

If you win you have all the remedies of a judgment creditor to enforce your judgment.

But suppose you're the defendant in a small claims court? If you lose, and want to appeal, here's what you do. Post a bond, file a notice of appeal and if you perfect your appeal, you'll be given a trial "de novo" (new trial) in superior court. The court hears the case as if tried for the first time.

You might counter-claim against the plaintiff in the small claims court. Then if you get judgment, the plaintiff can appeal. But his appeal is restricted to the counterclaim.

Small claims cases have to be heard within 60 days after filing. The hearings go fast. Either side may call witnesses to testify. And they can bring in books or records. But neither may have an attorney present the case.

The judge has broad powers over the evidence presented. He many informally make any investigation about the dispute. He can give judgment and make such orders as to time of payment or otherwise may seem to the judge to be right and just.

Balaguer, Bosch Are The Dominican Republic Today

Both Expected To Play Key 1974 Election Roles

SANTA DOMINGO, — From behind a paper-laden, ornately carved desk in his corner office in the Dominican presidential palace, Joaquin Balaguer for six years has been carefully orchestrating the course of events in this island nation. He shows every intention of wanting to continue doing so for years to come.

But only blocks away, Juan Bosch, who once sat briefly in the same office and is something of a folk hero to many Dominicans, waits his opportunity to once again play a more commanding role in Dominican events. He has recently begun to regear his oft-persecuted political movement, te Partido Revolucionario Dominicano (PRD), which remains the island's most cohesive political movement.

In many ways, the story of the Dominican Republic today is the story of these two men and their works and actions.

It is likely to be that way for years to come. Although there are obviously other Dominican politicians businessmen, military leaders, and professionals of prominence, the feeling persists here that it is only Joaquin Balaguer and Juan Bosch who count.

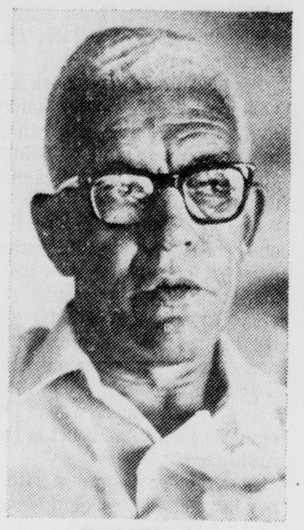
Moreover, much Dominican attention is already focused on the 1974 presidential elections, in which the two are bound to play the key roles.

The campaign actually has begun. To be sure, Balaguer has not said he will seek a third term, nor has Bosch indicated whether he will contest the 1974 vote rather than sitting it out as he did in 1971. But these two very dissimilar men who have so frequently clashed in the past — verbally and politically — are actively involved in the 1974 contest.

President Balaguer and former President Bosch already have registered opposing views on the mixed realities of Dominican life today: economic conditions improving in only some sectors of society; staggeringly high unemployment; a continuing, although somewhat reduced, wave of police inspired terrorism against many of Bosch's followers; and repeated rumors of possible military action against the Balaguer government.

Balaguer is convinced that his six years in office have brought a significant degree of stability and political peace to the much tortured island, and that the result has been a broad based economic growth.

He can cite a roster of impressive economic gains; a seven per cent growth rate last year, with perhaps a percentage point more this year; improved sugar quotas on the United States markets as well as good sugar prices on the international market with a resultant improvement in Dominican exports; impressive new construction, particularly in Santo Domingo, including a new National Theater and a National Library.



JUAN BOSCH
Former president

But on the debit side of the ledger, nagging unemployment clouds the economic bubble and shows no sign of improvement. At least a third of all ablebodied Dominican men are out of work. Even massive government-sponsored, make-work projects — such as beautifying the road leading to Santo Domingo's airport — have failed to make much of a dent in the unemployment problem.

"It simply won't go away," a Dominican labor official close to the Balaguer government admitted, adding that "the more we try to solve it, the more apparent it becomes."

Part of the awareness of the problem is directly due to Bosch, who has made much of the issue in his frequent radio addresses to the nation. An articulate orator, the former president has lost no opportunity to suggest that the Balaguer government has failed to solve the pressing social problems that have long beset Dominican regimes.

Actually, Bosch's radio appearances serve to illustrate the wide gulf that separates the present power structure around Balaguer and the forces around Bosch and the PRD. That gulf is at the heart of the Dominican problem. It springs from the 30-year Trujillo dictatorship, which ended with the assassination in 1961 of Rafael Leonidas Trujillo Molina.

Although the dictator has been gone for 11 years, his legacy of hatreds and rivalries remains. The Trujillo stamp is firmly on Dominican politics, and it is likely to be years before the effects of his personal and often corrupt control of Dominican economic affairs is removed.

In a nation in which the Trujillo legacy looms so large, Joaquin Balaguer has the right credentials for retaining power. He accommodated himself with Trujillo in the dictator's later years, a fact that has made him acceptable to the Dominican power apparatus and in military circles. That he has ably manipulated the power apparatus in no way minimizes the influence which that apparatus possesses in Dominican life.

By contrast, Juan Bosch never had the right credentials. During the Trujillo years, he spoke out from exile. When he returned in the heady days immediately after the Trujillo assassination, his popular reception was more than the power elite could accept. When elected president, he served only seven months before the military ousted him.

Whether the military would now permit him to assume the presidency, if he were to run and win in 1974, is doubtful. But this does not lessen his influence in Dominican politics — a fact which Joaquin Balaguer may well appreciate more than most.

It is widely reported in Santo Domingo that President Balaguer is Bosch's most ardent listener. It is said that the president uses the Bosch broadcasts as a weather vane, to help scent out the political winds. The story may be apocryphal and President Balaguer will not answer questions on it. But there is little doubt that the Bosch broadcasts have an impact on the presidential office.

For example, in mid-1971, a terrorist campaign against PRD supporters was building to new heights with, it was widely believed, official connivance. Police units were said to look the other way when paramilitary elements killed, wounded, or kidnapped PRD supporters.

Bosch on numerous occasions used his oratorical skills to stir massive public opinion against the police and indirectly against the government.

He had good cause. At least 100 PRD militants were assassinated during 1971. The PRD, a moderate leftist political movement, received the brunt of the terrorist campaign.

In September, President Balaguer, reacting to the stories, ousted the police chief, who was widely accused of permitting the campaign to go on. In his place, the President named Gen. Neit R. Novar Seigas. The number of terrorist incidents declined sharply within days, and the Balaguer government has made a determined effort to downplay the violence that seemed so evident nine months ago and which caused widespread public indignation.

But that violence is generally believed to be just below the surface. Both President Balaguer and Bosch say it would not take much to let it spill over. Indeed, the antagonisms that were so much a part of the Dominican civil war of 1965, which was truncated by U.S. intervention, are almost as strong today as they were in 1965.

There is considerable speculation that the coming presidential campaign may prove the most bitter election since the Trujillo assassination.

"Balaguer has worked hard to smooth over the cleavage between the established power on the island and the forces which in many instances support Juan Bosch," a long-time foreign resident of the island commented. "But despite his own tremendous appeal with the masses, he has to realize that gulf . . . is as wide today as it was in the civil war."

Whether such a pessimistic view is valid may be debatable, but it is held by a great many observers — foreigners and Dominicans. The very presence of Joaquin Balaguer and Juan Bosch, moreover, suggests there may be some truth in the view, for these two men who so dominate Dominican politics represent the two forces.

"The more time goes on," a foreign diplomat commented, "the more the events and the cast of characters remains the same."

South Viet Land Reform Program's Success Varies

By DANIEL SOUTHERLAND
The Christian Science Monitor
News Service

SAIGON — The Saigon government's land reform program now has reached an advanced stage, with new land ownership titles issued for more than half of the eligible tenant farmers.

Under this U.S.-supported "land to the tiller" program — now entering its third year — about 2.5 million acres of privately owned riceland are supposed to be transferred free of charge to about a million tenant farmers.

But progress varies from one region to another.

In the central lowlands, for instance, the program has gotten virtually nowhere. Land is scarce, and in numerous cases landlords have intimidated tenant farmers and defrauded them of the benefits of the program.

Another problem is that tradition-bound tenants and sharecroppers, who are deeply mistrustful of the government, hesitate to apply for land titles. The reform program in the central lowlands could eventually prove to be more of a liability than an asset.

In the central highlands, the land reform program for the Montagnards is also beset with problems and has yet to get moving.

But in the Mekong Delta, the statistics indicate that this much heralded program to abolish tenancy and win peasant support is moving along in most provinces, sometimes ahead of schedule.

Because the delta contains most of the country's riceland and most of its tenant farmers, this is the area where the government is most hopeful of using land reform to build political support.

But the statistics tell only part of the story. Interviews by this correspondent with farmers in three delta provinces indicate that the political impact of the land reform program may be minimal, or at least much less dramatic than some U.S. and Vietnamese officials had hoped.

Even in so-called secure areas of the countryside, many farmers seem to cling to their traditional neutrality. Although they make accommodations with the government when forced to, they still withhold any firm commitment to it.

The farmer's suspicion of the government is deep rooted, and it will probably take a great deal more than land reform at this point to gain their allegiance. Other factors, such as a lack of effective government political organization at the village level, also weigh in the balance.

Most important of all, perhaps, many farmers remain to be convinced that the Thieu government is going to last. To them, President Thieu appears to be a dubious creation of the Americans.

In areas which were only recently secured by the government or are still contested by the Viet Cong, the Viet Minh and the Viet Cong broke the landlords' hold years ago. In these areas, the farmers have not been paying rents for many years, and the land reform program appears to some merely to confirm a distribution of land already made by the Communists.

Some farmers criticize the land reform program because it does not give land to the farm laborers in the delta, who are one step lower on the socio-economic scale than the tenant farmers.

Officials say that such truly landless peasants make up less than 10 per cent of the population in the delta. But in view of some farmers, the government's neglect of this group is significant.

If the land-to-the-tiller law is aimed at creating "social justice," they say, then why isn't this rural proletariat being given land? After all, they say, the Viet Minh gave land to the poorest people during the war against the French.

Another neglected group, critics say, are soldiers who were tenant farmers when they got drafted and who may not have any land to go back to when they are released from the army.

Some farmers remain skeptical of land reform because they fear that it may be a prelude to heavy government taxation.

The falsification of documents by landlords, in collusion with local officials, and a pro-landlord bias among judges handling land cases are other factors reducing the impact of the land reform program.

It is difficult to tell how widespread landlord evasion of the law has been, but once farmers feel relaxed with an interviewer, they talk at length about deals being made at the expense of the tenant farmers who are supposed to benefit from the land reform law.

In a number of cases, farmers who have tried to take their complaints to court have been asked to make appearances before a judge month after month, without ever having their cases settled.

If a farmer lives in a village far from the province capital, such trips to court can be expensive and trying.

And farmers are discovering that they have little chance of getting a fair hearing. The courts only accept written depositions, and this is a tremendous barrier to many illiterate farmers.

While the landlord class is not nearly as strong as it once was, the landowners still have great influence in the courts.

The favorite landlord dodge has been to get tenanted land declared as land required to raise funds for annual feasts and other activities in honor of one's ancestors.

Several farmers among those surveyed complained, for instance, that they had suddenly been told that the land they farmed as tenants for many years was "ancestral worship land." Under the law, a landlord can retain five hectares (12.35) acres) of such "worship land."

In some cases, farmers say, the landlords have been getting village officials to issue falsified, predated documents showing that a landlord held worship land. In such cases, the tenant must continue to pay rent on the land and cannot obtain ownership of the land even though he is tilling it.

Another way of dodging the law is this: A landlord claims that the tenant farmers working his land are "day laborers." If a landlord can get the government land service chief to agree to this, then he may be able to retain his land.

American land reform officials are aware of the abuses that are occurring, but they contend that the pros of the land reform program still outweigh the cons.

U.S. land reform officials never considered the land-to-the-tiller program to be a panacea that would "win the war."

But U.S. advisers argue that the program is bound to bring economic benefits to the tenants, who make up the majority of the population in the delta. After all, hundreds of thousands of tenants, who are paying high rents to landlords, now will own the land they are tilling and will no longer have to pay rents.

If nothing else, U.S. officials say, the program should put to rest the claim that the Saigon government is a government of landlords.

"There's a considerable element in the United States who think that land reform is going to win the war," said a U.S. official in the delta.

"Land reform is not going to make or break the government," he said. "But it is an important program that can contribute to the credibility of the government.

"There are many abuses, just as there would be in the United States if you were dealing with real property on such a scale," he said. "By local standards, there is a lot of money involved."

On the compensation side of the program, the cost of paying landlords in cash and in bonds over a 10-year period for the loss of their land is expected to come to more than $500 million. The United States has pledged $40 million in aid funds to offset the inflationary impact resulting from the payment of the compensation funds, and the U.S. Congress has appropriated $25 million of that amount so far.

American officials are convinced that the coming year will be the most critical for land reform. So far, the government has done the easiest part of the job, they say.

Now the government must begin to move into areas where coordination with military forces will be required and into other areas where the landlords are firmly entrenched.

In some areas where the Communists never broke the power of the landlords, such as An Giang province in the delta, landlords have intimidated their tenants and made deals with local officials.

How the government handles such difficult cases will be the real test of its determination to carry through with land reform, U.S. advisers say.

IS IT WORKING? — Peasants, many of whom are skeptical of the South Vietnam land reform program, move along a road west of Saigon. In the Mekong Delta, the program is having its most success.

BUSY DAY

Professor Keeps Constantly On Go

By JEFFREY B. NELSON

The Christian Science Monitor
News Service

FREDONIA, N.Y. — Dr. Peter Steese is in the classroom nine hours a week this semester, and although he frequently teaches his college's normal 12-hour load, the numbers themselves belie his activity.

The English professor at the State University College at Fredonia is rarely stationary because he has professional commitments to teaching, research, campus governance, and community activities.

On a Monday, he arrives on campus at 9 a.m., the usual time, giving himself a few minutes to open mail, check the notes that dot the bulletin board above his desk, and review his class material.

Shortly before 10 he's on his way downstairs to the first section of his undergraduate course, "The Bible as Literature."

He has taught the course for the past 10 years, so it doesn't require much day-to-day work. He spent an hour the night before reviewing his notes —on the evolution of English translations —to add to his substantial and frequent background reading in the area. He also bolstered his knowledge of the subject with a 10-day tour of Israel last fall.

This class is primarily a lecture ("Next time we'll get to the stores," he assures the 40 students), although the lively professor stops to ask questions and listens to comments. "Otherwise the gap between you and the student is too great," he explains.

A Jewish student stays after class for 30 minutes to discuss Hebrew terminology.

The flow of students in and out of Steese's Fenton Hall office is fairly small this morning. Early in the semester not many want counseling on their classwork. A few students who need special permission to enter the already jammed sections plead their cases and increase his enrollment.

Sometime between 11:30 and 12:15 the professor devotes 20 minutes to a senior seminar he will teach later in the day. "Usually I don't count on doing too much at school because I'm interrupted too much," he says with a smile.

At 12:15, as one of the faculty representatives to the United Fund drive, he is in the dorm dining hall for a luncheon meeting.

By 1:30 the dark-haired teacher, who sports a recently grown moustache and longish sideburns, is back in Fenton, although not quite in his office. A fellow professor stops him in the hall to arrange their trip to another state university campus Tuesday for an all-day meeting. Steese has been asked to attend as alternate faculty senator. And a student who serves on the admissions committee (Steese is chairman) talks with him about a coming meeting.

Packing notes and books together, he rushes off to the second section of the Bible course. It's the same material, but he delivers it again with gusto. (He has a resonant voice and sings in the Fredonia Catch Club.)

Questions come up in and after class, ranging from what will be covered on exams to why Adam and Eve put on "aprons" of fig leaves.

Another dash to his office for a quick change of books, and then Steese settles into a chair facing a dozen students for his upper-division seminar on quite a different topic —the age of decadence in British literature. Over the weekend he has spent five hours preparing for this one session, but, he keeps repeating," I should have done more."

The seminar is not quite so enervating as the larger classes, and the experienced teacher is still lively at 4, when he interviews a student who is applying for study in Europe.

At 5:30 p.m., when he usually goes home ("It's a little later this year than others"), he has in his green bookbag a manuscript for a chapter of a rhetoric textbook he is coauthoring.

At home his family takes over, including time for reading to his 9 and 6-year-old daughters. Later he spends two hours reading the book he has assigned for Wednesday's seminar.

A neighbor calls to tell him he has been elected to the community's United Fund board. At 11:30 p.m. the textbook still hasn't been touched.

As he looks back over this one day and his professional activities year round, Steese estimates that he spends 60 per cent of his time on activities relating to teaching, 25 per cent on committee work, and 15 per cent on research. He'd like to lower the committee percentage and increase research.

A scholar of James Boswell, he never has all the time he'd like to study the 18th Century biographer of Samuel Johnson. He did write a paper on the subject for his department's annual symposium (he's on that committee, too), and with a grant last summer he studied Boswell manuscripts at the Yale library.

The English professor's committee work is perhaps heavier than average. "I get on more than I get off of," he offers by way of explanation. But it also reflects his belief, stemming in part from a year as an administrator in the Pennsylvania State University system, that faculty members should participate in college governance.

Steese also serves on several other college committees, as a church elder, has written a textbook on Ecclesiastes and five articles, and participates in the community's Torch Club.

He is helping high schools develop Bible literature courses, and he finds time to rap with students on any topic in any place.

He remains clear about his priorities, nonetheless. "Teaching," he states firmly, "always seems to come first."

ACTIVE — Dr. Peter Steese, a professor of English at State University College at Fredonia, N.Y., fields a student's question. He puts emphasis on being with his students but also has many other activities.

New Seat Belt Law: Traffic Deaths Dip

SYDNEY, Australia (UPI)— A 19 per cent drop in January traffic deaths was attributed by state officials to a new, compulsory seat belt law.

The new law levies an on-the-spot $24 fine on any driver or passenger who police see riding without a seat belt.

Sleeping Through X-Ray Examination

NEW YORK (UPI)—Premature infants may sleep right through an X-ray examination at St. Vincent's Hospital where a radiologist and a radiologic technician modified the incubators—at a cost of $10 each—so that the baby never leaves the environment so necessary to his existance.

Infants with problems requiring the incubator oxygen also may need X-ray studies for diagnosis. Formerly this meant removal from the incubator. Dr. Harriet Wisniewski and technologist James D. White eliminated this by raising the incubator mattress 1½ inches to make room for an X-ray film cassette to slip through a doored slot at its base. A guide track positions the film underneath, close enough to minimize magnification, and the examination is made with a minimum of disturbance.

Lost Timber

NEW YORK (UPI)—Insects and disease destroy 2.4 billion cubic feet of timber a year, it is estimated by the American Forest Institute.

Fish America's Favorite Pets

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — A doggie in the window has great appeal but in the $3 billion annual pet industry fish are outselling them.

"Fish are the No. 1 pet now," said S.E. Herbert, head of Pet Dealers Supply Co., South San Francisco. "It's a tossup, now, whether dogs, kittens come next.

Herbert, whose firm supplies most pet stores in the San Francisco Bay area, is backed up by Pet Supplies Marketing magazine, published in Fond du Lac, Wis., which heads its statistics with "aquaria" in its list of pet "livestock."

Robinson's "House of Pets," one of Herbert's largest customers in the area, also backs up its supplier. The four-generation Robinson firm was founded in 1849 during the gold rush when Ansel W. Robinson dumped a pail of gold fish, newly shipped from China, into a horse trough and set up a hand-letter for-sale sign.

"That was San Francisco's first commercial store," said Jim Umberfield, now its general manager. "I can't explain why gold fish sold except that every person has a yearning for a pet. The gold miners took the fish away in any small glass bowl or container they could lay their hands on."

Fish are still money in the bank today, with shops such as Buker's Pet Store selling red tail guppies for up to $4.95 per pair, red scats at $3.50 apiece and knife fish for $2.50. Ordinary gold fish go for 25 to 35 cents each.

Umberfield thinks he understands the popularity of fish, and he explained: "In a congested city area apartment owners have many restrictions — out. San Francisco is a pet-loving city. There are more dogs and cats registered than people.

He said some apartment dwellers bought hamsters, adding: "They just sneak 'em in because they're quiet. It's just natural for people to have pets."

The pet population in the United States, now three times as large as the people population, bears him out. The Bank of America, in a special study, estimated that the care of this livestock of 600 million animals, fish and birds costs $3 billion in 1971, triple the figure in 1960.

The bank study said in addition to pet sales, the business is comprised of these basic ingredients — prepared foods for which dogs and cats are the main market; accessories and equipment ranging from jeweled collars to elaborate aquarium setups; animal health products including drugs, ointments, shampoos and cosmetics; groomers, pet sitters, veterinarians and boarding kennels.

There are, too, exotic pet shops which specialize in such items as boas, pythons, lizards, crocodiles and other pet exotica, but more conservative pet dealers hold such specialties "interesting but not easy to sell."

Finally comes the time when the "loved one" dies. Outfits such as Pet's Rest Cemetery and Crematory in Colma, a San Francisco suburb, are ready with landscaped grounds, lawn and shrubs.

Flabby Tourists Can Slim Up

TOKYO (UPI) — Flabby tourists with fat wallets today can tread trails in the mighty Himalayas that once were reserved for the world's best mountain climbers.

The Japanese investors have opened a tourist hotel in Nepal near the foot of 29,028-foot high Mt. Everest, the world's highest peak.

A room and two meals a day, at the "Everest View Hotel" costs $39 per person. Thoughtfully, the Japanese have installed an oxygen cylinder in each room for guests who have trouble breathing at the hotel's 12,600-foot elevation.

The hotel sits on a hill overlooking the Nepalese town of Namache Bazaar, traditional jumping off point for Everst climbers. It opened in autumn 1971 and had about 120 guests before winter set in. This year its manager expects more than 2,000. The peak seasons are April and Novemeber when the Himalayan weather is at its best. The hotel makes guides available to help serious climbers.

Table Auctioned

KUALA LUMPUR (UPI) — A table costing $2 U.S. was auctioned here for $1,500. Lai Ban Chai, a goldsmith, won the bid at a fund-raising dinner given by a Chinese school group to finance a new building.

A Reunion Along Suez Canal

By THOMAS CHEATHAM

KANTARA, Suez Canal (UPI) — The only boats plying the quiet waters of the Suez Canal these days carry out the mission of a sort of "marriage counselor" between Egypt and Israel under the flag of the International Red Cross.

The red, black and yellow motorboats chug back and forth across the 200-yard wide waterway an average of twice a month as the result of the only agreement the two warring nations have come to snce the 1967 Middle East War closed the canal.

Four months after Israeli troops had captured the east bank, the Red Cross successfully urged Cairo and Jerusalem to agree to the exchange of civilians and prisoners by boat under the provisions of the 1949 Geneva accords.

Eighty-four times since then, the boats have carried prison- under the provisions of the 1949 Geneva accords.
were separated by the canal after the Israeli conquest of the Sinai Peninsula and the Gaza Strip.

The exchanges have involved the crossing of more than 12,000 persons under the auspices of the Red Cross, whose top man in Israel likens his organization's role in the Middle East conflict to that of a "marriage counselor."

"You try to bring about a reconciliation between the couple, or at least reduce the misery," Frenchman Guy DeLuz said. "Our task is to listen and, if possible, to help—but never to gossip."
recent exchange. It wa: a sunny spring morning and the Red Cross flags were flying on both sides of the canal—the signal that puts the routine into motion each time.

The first trip of the boats is made with only the belongings of the participants—cardboard boxes full of clothes, baskets of oranges, even television sets.

Then, on the Israeli side, out of a bus whose windows have been blacked out to hide Israeli forts enroute to the canal—come 15 Egypt-bound exchangees, including several wide-eyed children. bfor all of them it is a big day, perhaps the biggest in their lives. They soon will be reunited with loved ones they haven't seen in five years.
eyed children. For all of them has replaced the roar of gunfire that marked many of the exchanges prior to the August, 1970, Middle East cease-fire, and it is an entirely happy scene.

A mothe carrying a baby is positively mother An old man, supporting himself with a cane, has to be helped out of the bus. Two boys, about 15, look frightened. mother ened. But suddenly, as the boat young mother disembarks. She dashes back to the bus, disappears inside and emerges again grasping an envelope she had left behind.

"Probably the plans to our whole Suez defense line," comments a grinning Israeli soldier.

Then the motorboat is off again, this time to complete its journey. Soon, it returns, and now it carries 20 persons coming to rejoin their families in the Gaza Strip or Sinai. Among them are six Arab doctors who have completed their studies in Cairo and are returning to practice at home.

The returnees pile into the blacked-out bus. Down come the Red Cross flags, back to its mooring goes the boat. Another exchange has been completed and a little bit of Middle East and a little bit of Middle East anxiety has been relieved.

Dwarfing Disease Defined, Classified

EDMONTON, Alta., Canada (UPI) — Medical investigators have defined and classified the dwarfing disease, pycnodystosis, which plagued French artist Henri de Toulouse-Lautrec during most of his life.

Dr. B.C. Lentle, radiologist at Royal Alexandra Hospital here, discovered pycnodystosis in a native North American Indian child from the Yukon, the first case of the disease to be reported from Canada. In 1967, other investigators were able to collect only 33 cases from the world's medical literature. Lentle reported on X-ray findings in the child in the Journal of the Canadian Association of Radiologists.

Continuing Drama

MANTEO, N.C. (UPI)—The oldest continuing outdoor drama in North Carolina, "The Lost Colony," tells the story of the first English settlement in America. The play, written by Pulitzer Prize winner Paul Green, made its first summer run in 1937.

Family Planning Stamp Is Issued

NEW YORK (UPI)—The nation's first commemorative Family Planning stamp was issued by the U.S. Postal Service March, little more than 50 years after Margaret Sanger was jailed for using the mails to advocate birth control as a basic human right.

The Planned Parenthood Federation of America, an outgrowth of Mrs. Sanger's pioneering efforts, is sponsor of the new stamp markng a half-century of progress in contraceptive methods, services and education. The Federation now has 188 affiliates in this country and is the U.S. member and a major supporter of the International Planned Parenthood Federation. The 8-cent multicolored stamp honoring the movement depicts a small family group.

Scratch One More Controversy

CHICAGO (UPI) — Scratch one more controversy off the list—there's an answer to how much time a checker player has to make a move.

People for centuries have quarreled about taking too long to move from one square to another. But Encyclopaedia Britannica says standard tournament rules now provide that when a move is not made by the end of five minutes, time is called and if a move is not completed in 60 seconds the procrastinating player loses the game.

Hearst Castle Worth The Visit

By MARK JONES

SAN SIMEON, Calif. (UPI)—If you'd like a peek into Europe's ancient past for just $2, without leaving the United States, fall in line; more than 650,000 others will have the same idea this year.

Your destination is the famous Hearst Castle, a glittering $50 million showplace for art and antiquities built with a lavish hand by the late newspaper magnate William Randolph Hearst.

The publisher's legendary zest for art treasures was an auctioneers' dream on two continents. Stone by stone, statue by statue, Hearst created a fascinating chunk of Europe and the Mediterranean for display on his sun-washed 123-acre hilltop.

Undeterred by cost, he carved an airstrip on the slopes of his grand manor, dug a harbor below, cloaked the barren hills with California oaks, installed on the hillsides the world's largest private zoo—all to grace "the most imposing estate on the North American continent." To this day the title stands undisputed.

A French monarch once possessed 1,300 important works of art. But he was an amateur compared to Hearst, who collected more than 200,000 expensive oddments of art, a small portion of which still lies crated in a New York warehouse.

The splendid "ranch" perches atop a toasted brown hill in the Santa Lucia Mountains along central California's coast, overlooking a spectacular sweep of ocean.

The castle became a state monument in 1958 and from that year on more than six million persons have beaten a well-worn path to Hearst's gigantic wrought iron front door.

The oldest pieces inside, fashioned when Rome was in its glory, are wired to the walls against the threat of earthquakes.

Hearst's estate is best symbolized by gleaming white marble cathedral-like towers in the early Spanish Renaissance style of the 15th Century. But the collector's tastes were far-flung and Greco-Roman and Florentine touches are everywhere.

For example, Hearst constructed two vast swimming pools. The indoor pool is a combination of Grecian design coupled with mosaic of Venetian glass sandwiched with 24 carat gold leaf. Hearst's groundsmen and housekeepers swam in it and for a time it was dubbed "the employees' million-dollar pool."

The other pool faces the sea and is a breathless example of a vast Roman bath complete with a bevy of bare-breasted statues reclining in the heated water. A genuine Greek temple facade, shipped crate by crate from Crete and other Greek islands, looms overhead.

Leafy courtyards dotted with palms and fruit trees, broad marble terraces wide enough for a Fred Astaire cakewalk and fountains filled with goldfish and encrusted pennies add to the atmosphere,

Last year nearly 650,000 tourists were bused up the winding, five-mile road, past grazing zebras and exotic mountain sheep. The tourists fall into single-file lines as they're led by competent guides through the greatest collection of art money could buy. One California man has taken the tour 149 times.

Disbelief is a common visitor's reaction to it all. One recent day, standing in Hearst's favorite room, the baronial dining hall, a visitor stopped in astonishment as he looked upon the long, dark table, chest-high silver candlesticks and, overhead, the carved 16th Century ceiling.

"Gee," the man whispered. "Can you imagine eating ham and eggs alone in a room like this?"

San Simeon, home of the castle, was a prosperous whaling and mining village in the 1880s, with the mountains as a rich backdrop. Hearst's wealthy father paid 60 cents an acre for his land and carved out a huge estate from an old Spanish land grant.

On Christmas, 1925, the Hearst family opened the castle and its doors almost never closed over the next three decades, with famous visitors ranging from President Calvin Coolidge to Clark Gable and the "Gone with the Wind" cast; from Winston Churchill and the Shah of Iran to Charles Lindbergh.

The publisher died in 1951 and a few years later his five sons invited then-Gov. Goodwin Knight for a weekend visit and deeded the castle to the state. Only one of the three lavish guest houses, La Cuesta Del Mar, is off-limits to tourists these days. The Hearst family uses the 16-room house usually on Thanksgiving and Christmas.

Running Free

MANILA (UPI)—Of the 20,222 inmates in penal colonies in the Philippines in 1971, a total of 1,378 escaped and only half of them were recaptured, according to statistics reported by a Manila newspaper.

Old Tradition Continues: Correspondence Courses

These are but a few of the 16,000 students, representing 78 countries and all 50 states, currently enrolled in correspondence courses (Independent Study) at the University of California Extension. Some lessons are mailed to addresses behind the Iron Curtain, in Poland and Hungary. American businessmen and diplomats stationed in foreign lands register their high school age children; Armed Forces personnel on lonely bases around the world scan UC Independent Study catalogs and sign up for courses.

The first UC correspondence course was written in 1913 and now, almost 60 years later, the roster of offerings ranks as the best and most comprehensive in the world. Some of the best minds at the University of California have contributed to these courses. Of the 323 credit courses listed in the current catalog, more than 200 are either upper division level or part of University Extension's professional series.

Bertrand Evans, Professor of English Emeritus at UC Berkeley, who wrote and taught several courses, and edited many others, once said, "Treating each student separately, as an individual whose thought on the subject is exposed each time he submits a lesson, I am able to guide, encourage, exhort, bully, demand — and get increasingly fine work as the course progresses."

Correspondence study does not appeal to everyone. About one in three persons who signs up for a course eventually completes it. Some of the reasons students have given for dropping out include "too hard," "missed human contact," "couldn't organize myself."

Director Alice Rowbotham dubs "the true correspondence student" one who finds independent study to his liking and enrolls repeatedly. "For instructors, there is great satisfaction in witnessing and assisting individual achievement of a very high order," she says.

The same instructor who wrote the individual course, reads and evaluates the assignments which are turned in. Many instructors find that the student-faculty relationship is more intimate even though based on corespondence.

Leonard Breger, who conducts a highly successful basic course in drawing, asks his students to send him a word biography and also three preliminary sketches — a "self-protrait," the corner of my room," and "people close to me." He returns highly perceptive and acute comments about his pupils' work. Those students who own recorders are encouraged to put their questions on tape so that a spoken dialogue is set up between student and teacher.

About 80 persons are currently enrolled in a new correspondence course offered by Independent Study this year in cooperation with the School of Environmental Design, UC Berkeley. The program leads to a certificate in city planning. Students in this course include architects, private consultants, Department of Housing and Urban Development personnel and local governmental planning employees.

Institutions which have adapted UC Extension correspondence courses to classroom use include San Francisco State, San Jose State, Houghton College (New York) and Follett (Washington).

WATER LOST THROUGH LEAK

With a dry summer facing Marin, it appears that water at the rate of more than 1 million gallons a year is running out of this leak in a Marin Municipal Water District tunnel which brings water from Alpine Lake. The tunnel, in a valley south of Fairfax, is leaking profusedly at a point where it connects with large district water pipes. A district official said today that repair of the tunnel, reportedly damaged in a landslide several years ago, is to be included in next year's budget.

$83.4 BILLION PROPOSED

Critics Eye Big Military Budget

By PHILIP W. McKINSEY
The Christian Science Monitor News Service

WASHINGTON, D.C. — The administration's $83.4-billion defense budget will be coming out of both Senate and House committees shortly, and critics of military spending are gearing up for another round of hoped-for budget cutting.

This year they are zeroing in on four programs in early stage of development, costing about $2 billion in the current budget but billions more in the years ahead if allowed to proceed.

The four programs are the airborne warning and control system (AWACS), which is a modernization and expansion of the defense system against bombers; a fourth nuclear aircraft carrier; the new F-14 Navy fighter that would operate from carriers; and new missile-launching system for submarines called ULMS (undersea long-range missile system).

The outcome of the battle of the budget will have great significance for the hard-pressed aerospace and electronics industries. The $83.4 billion in obligational authority for fiscal 1973 which begins July 1 (the amount committed to projects, not the amount to be spent this year) is $6 billion more than the current budget.

In the past couple of years Congress has been gentler on defense cuts because of the unemployment problem. But now economic recovery gives the military critics a freer hand to cut the budget without being accused of increasing unemployment.

The attack is being coordinated by Members of Congress for Peace Through Law, a group of 10 senators and 15 congressmen of both parties who teamed up against the ABM, SST, and other programs. Sen. William Proxmire (D) of Wisconsin is heading the group this year.

The debate is fueled by the presidential campaign as well. Sen. George McGovern (D), of South Dakota has called for drastic cuts in military spending and Sen. Edmund S. Muskie (D), of Maine has also become a critic of high budgets.

Early this year Sen. John C. Stennis (D) of Mississippi, chairman of the Senate Armed Srvices Committee and usually a defender of a strong military establishment, warned that Congress will have to scrutinize defense spending extra carefully this year because of the expected deficit of $25.5 billion. He noted that since military manpower costs are sharply on the rise as a result of pay increases designed to attract an all-volunteer army, savings will have to come more than ever out of hardware.

Probably the most vulnerable item in the budget is $299 million to begin building a fourth nuclear carrier. The $735 million to continue development and further production of the F-14 may also be vulnerable, though the extent is not yet clear.

The $474 million budgeted for

HOSPITALS ROOMY IN MARIN: REPORT

Empty Beds Are Reported In Hospitals And Nursing Homes Throughout County

By MARY LEYDECKER

Marin County has too many empty hospital and nursing home beds.

This was the conclusion of an investigating committee in a report adopted yesterday by the Comprehensive Health Planning Council of Marin.

Not only are obstetrical facilities going unused because of a dropping birth rate, but many owners of homes which care for the aged are crying about lack of business as well.

The reasons? Michael L. Ingerman, health planning coordinator for the county and adviser to the council, listed high cost of hospital care, moves by physicians toward more outpatient care, the declining birth rate and overbuilding of nursing homes in the past.

"You would think it would be basic economics," Dr. Michael L. Harris, Novato dentist who is president of the council, said.

However, private developers, left in the past to build hospitals and nursing homes as they saw fit, will now have to have the approval of the council, a government arm set up to bring order into the medical field.

"Any proposed new facility would have to demonstrate (community) need," Harris said, "and also that it is not in conflict with existing facilities."

Marin's "overbedding" situation is not as acute as San Francisco's, Ingerman said, but several hospitals appeared to be in real trouble, according to the statistics in the report.

While a 90 per cent occupancy figure is considered necessary for the efficient operation of a nursing home, the county-wide average was 79 per cent, with one new convalescent hospital only 20.9 per cent filled.

Marin General Hospital among general hospitals had the highest rate of occupancy, for medical-surgical patients, 83.2 per cent in 1971, but 85 per cent is considered the efficient figure.

Ross General Hospital reported a 61.6 per cent occupancy and Novato General, 62.2 per cent, for medical-surgical patients. (Ross has recently converted some beds for treatment of alcoholic problems.)

"The idea of the council is to coordinate health activities, not hinder," Dr. Harris said. "We want to give guidelines."

His committee's report suggests that hospitals and nursing

EOC Agrees To Cut 19 Field Employees

Ties With Head Start Program To Be Severed

By ERIK M. INGRAM

The Marin County Economic Opportunity Council, under federal orders to make sweeping organizational changes, last night agreed to reduce the size of its board, release 19 employees and sever agency ties with the county's Head Start program.

The board's elimination of 12 of its 36 seats remained in question today, however, since the reduction was approved with less than the needed number of directors present.

Under agency regulations, 24 directors must be present to vote on such issues. Last night, the vote came with only 23 directors in attendence — one having left before the vote.

The only protest to the action was voiced by Wallace K. Shepherd, executive director of the Marin County Housing Authority.

Shepherd said he objected to having his agency's EOC seat eliminated since the housing authority serves some 900 poor families in Marin who need a voice in the poverty agency's affairs.

While sympathizing with Sheperd, members of the EOC board noted that the decision to eliminate his agency had been made Tuesday by the board of supervisors. (The board of supervisors has jurisdiction over which county agencies will be represented.)

Further, they said, the poor of Marin hold one-third of the seats on the reconstituted board, representing so-called poverty target areas.

On a motion by Thomas Mason of San Anselmo, the board approved the reduction of directorships with a 22-0 vote, Shepherd abstaining.

About two hours of the board's lengthy meeting, which broke up at 1:30 a.m. today, was spent on a plea from the Marin Head Start for financial independence.

Expansion Of Bus, Ferry Fleet Wins Big Support

By PAUL E. PETERZELL

Overwhelming support for expansion of the Golden Gate Bridge District's ferry and bus fleets was declared last night by 46 labor unions, environmental and civic groups and city and state officials.

The district's pending applications for $13.7 million in federal grants to pay two-thirds of the expansion also were endorsed by 23 private citizens and in a petition signed by 650 persons.

Only three opponents appeared at the hearing asked by the federal government: Harbor Tug and Barge Co., private operator of ferries on the bay; the Marin County Taxpayers Association and Cable Ferries, a group that envisions a system of vessels pulled across the bay on an underwater cable.

Partial support came from the chambers of commerce of Marin and San Francisco. The Marin chamber favored the applications, provided no toll hike will be needed some day to finance transit deficits. The San Francisco chamber and the Marin County Taxpayers Association predicted the ferry operation alone will face an annual deficit of $6 million by 1975, and strain district finances needed for a future long-range rapid transit system.

More than 100 labor union members paraded outside toll plaza offices before the hearing, urging the ferries be built in the Bay Area to relieve unemployment.

The crowd of some 165 persons overflowed the board room and jammed the employee's lunchroom and a hallway to catch testimony relayed throughout the upper floor by loudspeakers. District officials, who had solicited support, said it was the largest crowd ever to attend a hearing at the toll plaza.

The two applications for federal grants are for $1,133,333 to buy 34 additional new buses, expanding the fleet to 168 new buses, and for $12.6 million for three new ferryboats and related facilities. The ferries are scheduled to begin serving a new Larkspur terminal by early 1974.

District officials reported for the first time that six of the 34 new buses will be smaller than the rest of the fleet so they can serve West Marin's narrow roads. They will carry 41 instead of 45 passengers, and be six inches narrower and five feet shorter than the other new buses.

Enthusiastic supporters included Theophus Barron Jr., board chairman of Marin Transit Systems. The private bus company had unsuccessfully opposed the district's first

Nixon Aide Balks At Some ITT Questions

WASHINGTON (UPI) —Presidential aide Peter M. Flanigan balked at answering questions at a Senate hearing today about his contacts with ITT officials or persons acting on ITT's behalf in the out-of-court settlement of a billion dollar antitrust suit against the conglomerate.

Flanigan sai such questions were beyond the scope of an agreement worked out between the Senate Judiciary Committee and the White House on his appearance as a witness.

He appeared at possibly the closing session of an investigation of ITT, the antitrust settlement, a pledge of at least $200,000 to the GOP national convention and the nomination of Richard G. Kleindienst to be attorney general.

Committee chairman James O. Eastland, D-Miss., sustained Flanigan's refusal to answer the questions.

Eastland cited an exchange of letters between the committee and the White House in which it was agreed that Flanigan's testimony would be limited to his knowledge of four subjects.

They included the selection of

Command Ship Trouble Delays Moon Touchdown

BULLETIN

SPACE CENTER, Houston (UPI) —Apollo 16's moon landing astronauts were told today that their descent to the moon was being delayed for hours because of the failure of the command ship to raise its orbit around the moon.

Lunar module pilots John W. Young and Charles M. Duke had been scheduled to land on the moon at 3:42 p.m. EST, after Thomas K. Mattingly was to have raised the orbit of the command ship.

However, when the astronauts returned from a pass around the back side of the moon, Duke advised Mission Control that the command ship maneuver did not occur.

Mission control then advised Young and Duke to anticipate "a wave off" for a landing attempt on the 13th orbit, as originally planned.

The nature of the command ship's problem was not immediately determined.

Radio contact was resumed with Mattingly about 26 minutes after he circled from behind the moon. None of the astronauts was in any immediate danger.

Mission Control reported that the command module's main engine failed to fire because a system called the "thrust vector control" had not operated to specifications.

Free Fishing For Elderly Advanced

SACRAMENTO (UPI) —The Assembly Ways and Means Committee has approved legislation to give free fishing licenses to low-income elderly persons.

On an 18-0 vote Wednesday, the measure by Assemblyman Carlos Bee, D-Hayward, was sent to the floor.

The bill would give the licenses to any woman over 62 and any man over 65 years of age who earns less than $300 per month, compared with the current $140 limit.

The state Fish and Game Department estimated about 30,000 persons would be eligible for the free licenses. It said the proposal would result in a $120,800 annual loss of revenue.

Tank-Led North Viet Troops Back In An Loc

SAIGON (UPI) — Tank-led Communist troops stormed back into An Loc, 60 miles north of Saigon, today in tank-led human wave assaults and then attacked government positions on each side of Lai Khe, 32 miles from Saigon and its last major defense bastion.

The North Vietnamese have vowed to make An Loc the provisional capital of the Viet Cong and set today as the day. All but a handful had been driven out of An Loc by government reinforcements and heavy strikes by U.S. B52s and fighter-bombers, but today they returned.

UPI correspondent Leon Daniel reported from Lai Khe that battles within two miles of that big South Vietnamese base could be seen from the camp. It was the closest major fighting to Saigon since the Communists began their offensive three weeks ago, although skirmishes have been reported 13 miles south of Saigon.

Col. Ross Franklin, senior U.S. adviser to the government soldiers trying to protect Lai Khe, said "it would be highly undesirable for the enemy to get between here and Saigon." The only defense south of Lai Khe was a small defense post at the telephone building six miles north of Saigon.

Although all but a handful of Communists had been reported driven out of An Loc in last week's counter-attack, the Communists were still so strongly entrenched that their antiaircraft guns kept government supply helicopters from landing. On Wednesday they shot down a fifth supply plane.

Two helicopters did manage to land two miles south of An Loc Wednesday night and fly out 46 wounded, described as a "few" of the government victims.

House Demos Denounce Invasion, U.S. Bombings

WASHINGTON (UPI) — House Democrats went on record today denouncing both the Communist invasion of South Vietnam and the retaliatory American bombing of North Vietnam. They ordered that a bill be taken up on the House floor within 30 days to end U.S. military involvement "in and over Indochina."

After approving a resolution that could lead for the first time to congressional passage of end-the-war legislation, the Democratic representatives overwhelmingly voted to add a clause to condemn the North Vietnamese invasion.

By another sizable vote they rejected a strongly worded policy statement that would have attacked North Vietnam and the Soviet Union and endorsed current military actions taken by President Nixon.

By an overwhelming 144-58 vote, the Democrats then gave final approval to a resolution combining the antiwar demands with condemnation of the North Vietnamese invasion.

The key vote came on a surprisingly lopsided 135-66 vote in which members attending a

Chapter Closes For Top Clown

NEW YORK (UPI)—Otto the Clown, a tragic comedian who always tried to help but never was of much help, died in St. Clare's Hospital Wednesday after a brief illness a few days before his 76th birthday.

Otto, born Otto Griebling in Germany, had appeared daily with the Ringling Bros. and Barnum Bailey circus at Madison Square Garden until he entered the hospital 10 days ago with what was thought to be a mild illness.

For 60 years, Griebling had been performing under the big top, first for 10 years as part of a horseback riding act then as a clown. Last year, Life magazine called him "the best American clown."

His best known act was his appearance in the audience with a large block of ice. He would trudge up and down the aisles, trying to deliver it to the person who supposedly ordered it. With each fresh appearance, he would come in with a smaller block until, finally, he came in with an ice cube which melted in his hands.

Once, he tried a variation of this by appearing as a telegraph messenger who progressively grew older and shabbier and still never managed to deliver the ice. That variation stopped when the telegraph company threatened to sue.

Griebling was absent from the circus for only two years after joining it. During his days as an apprentice, when the show was in Madison, Wis., a trainer he feared gave him $5 and told him to buy two loaves of bread and two quarts of milk.

Instead, Griebling took a freight train to the dairy country. For two years, he worked for a farmer. Then, hearing the show was back in Madison, he went there, bought two loaves of bread and two quarts of milk, and gave them to the trainer without offering any explanation.

The trainer simply counted his change, Griebling recalled.

Earlier this year, asked to describe the art of clowning, Griebling said, "If you find yourself able to make people laugh, it is God's gift. You have to do everything from the bottom of your heart."

Indict Troopers In New Jersey Beating

TRENTON (UPI)—Two New Jersey state troopers were indicted by a grand jury Wednesday for allegedly stripping, beating and branding with hot metal a long-haired teenager.

A state grand jury returned the indictments to Superior Court Judge Frank J. Kingfield who then issued bench warrants for the arrest of the two troopers, Thomas Grabowski of Keyport and Dennis Weiglein of Normandy Beach.

They are accused of assaulting Earl Harris Jr., 19, of Bricktown, last Feb.20. Harris told newsmen he was driving a car on Drum Point Road when a trooper pulled in front of him and told him to follow the cruiser to the state police barracks at Laurelton.

Harris said he believed he was being charged with speeding, but a check of municipal records showed no such charge against him.

At the Laurelton barracks, the youth was allegedly stripped, beaten and branded on the buttocks with a triangle formed by paper clips fused together.

Evan W. Jahos, director of the state's Division of Criminal Justice, said state police were also considering disciplinary action against the two indicted troopers and two other unidentified troopers who were suspended with them last March 20 in connection with the incident.

Specifically, the indictment charged the two men with misconduct in office and aiding and abetting. Grabowski was also charged with atrocious assault and battery. There have been other reports of alleged state brutality against longhaired youths and the grand jury is reportedly investigating them.

Muskie To Fight Till End

By U.P. INTERNATIONAL

Sen. Edmund S. Muskie, faced with a surge by Sen. George S. McGovern in Pennsylvania, said Wednesday he will stay in the Democratic presidential race until the nominating convention.

Elsewhere on the political front, Alabama Gov. George C. Wallace indicated he would settle for the No. 2 spot on the ticket.

Sandwiched between precinct caucus victories in Idaho and North Dakota Tuesday and Vermont Wednesday night, a labor public opinion poll in Pennsylvania showed McGovern growing in popularity in the Keystone State, which ballots for 137 convention delegates April 25.

SURPRISES REGULARS

McGovern also surprised Democratic regulars in Missouri's precinct caucuses by reportedly winning enough strength to gain unofficially about half the 73 convention delegates.

McGovern in a Philadelphia interview compared his surge to the one made by the late John F. Kennedy in winning the 1960 Democratic nomination.

"I felt in the very beginning that at some point one or the other of the candidates would take off in these primaries," McGovern said.

Muskie, the frontrunner in public opinion polls until primary balloting began in March, slipped to third behind Sen. Hubert H. Humphrey and McGovern in Pennsylvania after previously falling behind McGovern in Massachusetts.

MUSKIE PLEDGE

But Muskie said in Boston he intended to win in his neighboring state of Massachusetts in Tuesday's primary and to "stay in this fight until I get the nomination for the presidency in July. I intend to stay in until I defeat Richard Nixon."

Wallace, campaigning in LaPorte, Ind., indicated he would accept the vice presidential nomination. "I'm not angling for it," Wallace said, "but it could be."

A third party candidate in the 1968 election, Wallace said he would remain in the Democratic party in 1972 unless he was "thrown out of the convention."

After a stop at Springfield, Mass., today, Muskie was to join Humphrey in Pennsylvania.

Only 24 hours after student jeers at the University of Pennsylvania interrupted his speech against the Vietnam war, Humphrey told a Harrisburg, Pa., news conference that new campus demonstrations will break out unless U.S. bombing is halted.

NEW DEVELOPMENT

In other political developments, Rep. Wilbur D. Mills told the New York State legislature that revenue sharing would pass the U.S. House, Sen. Henry M. Jackson in Bellenfontaine, Ohio, called for increased federal spending for education and a takeover of state welfare programs and Los Angeles. Mayor Sam Yorty predicted he would get some of the "protest vote" in California's June 6 primary.

WORLD NEWS IN BRIEF

Crucial Talks

By U.P. INTERNATIONAL

Egyptian President Anwar Sadat will travel to Moscow later this month or in early May for crucial military and political talks on the Middle East crisis, authoritative political sources said today.

The sources said Sadat will request further weapons and supplies from the Russians during the visit, expected to last three to four days. He will meet with Kremlin leaders before President Nixon's trip to Moscow May 22.

The official Syrian Arab News Agency reported earlier today that Sadat would make the trip for talks of "utmost importance."

West Accused

GENEVA (UPI) — The Soviet Union today accused the West of trying to block the prohibition of chemical weapons by bogging down negotiations in technicalities.

Soviet disarmament negotiator Alexei Roschin said the United States and its allies are evading the "political decision" necessary for such a treaty.

He told the disarmament conference Western demands for technical discussions on verifying a ban and on the different types of chemical weapons would delay progress for "many years."

"The readiness of parties to take a political decision is needed above all," Roschin said.

Suspect Free

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — A man accused of skyjacking a Frontier Airlines 737 from Albuquerque, N. M., to Los Angeles last week was freed on $35,000 bail Wednesday after 13 persons raised the bond.

Some of the contributors, mostly from the Mexican-American community, pledged their homes as security that Ricardo Chavez Ortiz would appear in court to answer the charges.

Chavez allegedly forced the Phoenix, Ariz.-bound plane to land in Los Angeles where he demanded radio and television air time to air his grievances on behalf of Mexican-Americans.

Irish Hair Cut

BELFAST, Northern Ireland (UPI) — Two men cut off the hair of two Roman Catholic girls engaged to British soldiers, then plastered them with paint and feathers today as a cursing crowd of neighborhood women shouted their approval.

Police said two men forced the girls into a hijacked truck at gunpoint in Belfast and drove them to the town square of Coalisland, 20 miles west of Belfast. There they cut off the girls' hair and poured yellow paint and feathers over them.

The men were urged on by women who cursed the girls as traitors to the Catholic community for planning to wed British soldiers.

The girls were hospitalized at Dungannon in a state of shock, police said.

Wreckage Found

JAKARTA (UPI) — A party of Indonesian students exploring 15,000-foot-high Mount Jakarta in Indonesian New Guinea have reported finding the wreckage of a Dakota aircraft and a number of skeletons.

The expedition members reported finding the plane wreckage upon their return to Jakarta this week.

A Dutch Embassy spokesman in Jakarta said the wreckage was almost certainly that of a Dutch Air Force Dakota transport plane with disappeared July 28, 1962, on a flight from Merauke to Biak Island in what was then Dutch New Guinea.

Petitions Hit Another Snag

SACRAMENTO (UPI)—Law enforcement's drive to qualify an initiative restoring the death penalty for the November election struck another snag yesterday.

Officials reported a second batch of petitions is being recalled because of a typographical error and that new ones are being distributed for voter signature.

The word "shall" was misprinted as "small" and Attorney General Evelle Younger's office advised sponsors of the drive to recall the faulty petitions and issue corrected forms.

Test Announced

MERCURY, Nev. (UPI) — The United States detonated its first announced underground nuclear test of the year yesterday.

The Atomic Energy Commission said the test, code named "Longchamps," occurred at a depth of 1,070 feet below the desert floor at the Nevada Test Site, about 65 miles north of Las Vegas.

The blast was "less than 20 kilotons," which put it near the size of the atomic bombs dropped on Japan at the end of World War II. No radiation was released into the atmosphere, according to the AEC.

Tornado Strikes

Davis, Okla. (UPI) — A tornado destroyed a ranchhouse in which eight persons huddled for safety Wednesday night, killing five of them and injuring the other three. Among the dead were three teen-agers.

A dozen other twisters chewed across southern Oklahoma during the night, injuring 12 more persons, none seriously.

At Davis, 100 miles south of Oklahoma City, the tornado did not leave any part of the house standing.

Those killed were two cousins of the Curtis Bairds who were visiting, Sharon Raines, 15, and Larry Raines, 13; two women who stopped at the ranchhouse to get inside for safety, Pearl Taylor and Mrs. Billy Casey; and Eugene Baird, 13.

LBJ's Improved

SAN ANTONIO, Tex. (UPI) — Former President Lyndon B. Johnson has improved so quickly from an irregular heart flutter that his personal doctor was able to return to his home in Atlanta yesterday.

"President Johnson's irregular heart action has improved in a very gratifying manner," a hospital statement said. "He continues to feel well and his progress is quite satisfactory."

Dr. J. Willis Hurst of Atlanta, Johnson's heart specialist, flew to Texas Monday when the 36th President's recuperation from an April 7 heart attack was interrupted by a burst of heartbeats.

Dole Hooted, Jeered During Vietnam Talk

NEW ORLEANS (UPI)— Republican National Chairman Robert Dole, who defended stepped-up U. S. bombing in Vietnam at Tulane University Wednesday night, was booed, hooted, jeered and laughed at until he finally cut his speech short and left.

"Down with Nixon's puppet!" some members of the audience of about 400 yelled when the Kansas senator walked to the podium.

Dole managed to get through the first two pages of a prepared text, but members of the audience jeered and interrupted him when he talked about the war.

Dole's prepared text blasted the U. S. press for "grudgingly" reporting any South Vietnamese victories in the Indochina war.

"We have fought four wars in the 20th Century," he said. "But we never started those wars. We never fought them for the usual reasons of territorial gain or expansion of empire."

Laughs, boos and hoots. One heckler yelled, "I didn't know we had a comedian."

"I wonder, when I hear noises like that, why I spent 32 months in a hospital after the last war. I wonder if it was worth it," Dole said. "I think it was."

Returning to his text, Dole said Nixon's Vietnamization policy was working, although Democrats, and the national press were reluctant to admit it.

More jeers.

He accused the Democrats of starting the war and wanted to know where the war critics in the Senate were in 1964 when the Gulf of Tonkin resolution was signed.

"Where was Humphrey?" he said. "Where was Muskie?"

"Where were you?" the audience shouted back. "Where was 'Tricky Dicky?'"

When Dole said Nixon was bringing combat troops home, someone shouted, "in boxes."

"I think the Nixon policy..." Dole began,"... is to get reelected," a heckler finished.

Dole shouted back:

"We're going to get you out of the war the Democrats got you into, whether you like it or not!"

He skipped over the rest of his prepared text and left. Outside, about 300 demonstrators chanted, shouted and beat on the pavement with cans and bottles. One of them threw a string of firecrackers into the auditorium lobby.

In his prepared text, Dole said the South was winning its share of victories.

"But the dearth of reporting about that aspect of the war gives the clear impression that it is regretted by those who are doing the reporting," the text said.

"I believe the liberal establishment press has found itself for so long predicting the failure of the President's policies —that they have found it to be in their own interests and the interests of the credibility of the defense analysts of their editorial policies that Vietnamization fail."

Dole walked off the stage before he came to this part in his speech.

Mill Valley Votes Being Counted

A recount of ballots for the contested Mill Valley City Council seat won by Gerald J. Hood began today and is expected to continue into tomorrow.

County elections officer Peter C. Meyer said at 11:30 a.m. today that two of Mill Valley's seven precincts have been recounted. He declined to say whether there had been a change in the tally.

Incumbent Jerome C. Hauke, who lost to Hood by six votes during the April 11 municipal election, called for the recount Tuesday.

closed caucus approved a resolution that would:

Characterize the new bombing as "a dangerous escalation of our role in the Indochina war and a direct contradiction of the administration's stated policy of 'winding down' the war."

Declare it to be in the national interest promptly to "set a date to terminate all U.S. military involvement in and over Indochina," subject only to release of U.S. prisoners and an accounting of missing GIs.

Direct Democratic members of the once hawkish Foreign Affairs Committee "to prepare and report within 30 days legislation designed to accomplish these specific objectives."

San Diego as the site of the Republican convention and matters which occurred in his presence at meetings in the office of former Attorney General John N. Mitchell last April concerning a number of brokerage houses going bankrupt because of the falling stock market.

They also included his involvement with former Assistant Attorney General Richard W. McLaren, who made the out-of-court settlement, and details of a meeting with ITT President Harold S. Geneen.

The impasse arose when Sen. Philip A. Hart, D-Mich., asked Flanigan if other than at two meetings in the attorney general's office, Felix Rohatyn "or anyone else on behalf of ITT expressed concern to you about the effect of a Hartford (Fire Insurance Co.) divestiture?"

"I regret that under the limitations voted by the committee I am not permitted to answer that question," Flanigan answered.

Judge Allows Angela Letters As Evidence

SAN JOSE (UPI) —Judge Richard E. Arnason today refused to bar Angela Davis' love letters to George Jackson from evidence in her murder-kidnap trial.

Arnason said five letters from the 28-year-old militant and Communist to the slain black revolutionary, along with an 18-page "diary" found in Jackson's cell after he was killed at San Quentin Prison, could be used by the prosecution as evidence.

The judge barred from evidence, however, two-pages of sample text secretly typed by a sheriff's deputy on Miss Davis' typewriter, presumably in order to prove the 18-page document was done on the same machine.

Arnason said the deputy, who got the typewriter from Miss Davis' workroom cell at the Marin County Jail, acted improperly in not securing a warrant.

The letters involve a key part of the state's charges that Miss Davis helped plot and furnished guns for the Aug. 7, 1970, Marin County Courthouse kidnapings which resulted in four deaths.

Prosecutor Albert W. Harris Jr. has said she was in love with Jackson, one of the three "Soledad Brothers" accused of killing a guard at Soledad State Prison, and plotted the kidnaping to try to force his release.

The defense had charged that the letters, taken from Miss Davis' Los Angeles apartment during a nationwide search following the shootout, were seized without the proper warrant, and that the "attorney-client relationship" had been violated when another letter from Miss Davis was taken by Soledad State Prison officials from an envelope addressed to Jackson by his attorney.

The 18-page document, described as a "kind of a diary" but not signed, was found in Jackson's bloody cell after he was killed at San Quentin following a violent rampage last August in which three guards and two trusties were beaten and stabbed to death in the cellblock.

The defense said the document was Jackson's property and officials had no right to take it without a warrant.

Arnason said the motion to suppress the Los Angeles letters had been "extensively argued" during pretrial hearings and turned down them.

"The prior order is sustained," he said. "The warrant was legal. The motion to suppress is denied."

The defense had also complained that two of the letters were photostatic copies, when it had been assumed they were originals. Arnason said he hight "with reluctance" grant defense attorneys more time to prepare their arguments on this if they wanted it.

On the letter seized at Soledad Prison, Arnason said, "it is established that inmates have no rights of privacy to invade. The violation of the attorney-client privilege is not applicable because the privilege belongs to the client and not the attorney. And it does not relate to Miss Davis."

Free Seniors Parking Proposed At Parks

The Marin County Parks and Recreation Commission recommended yesterday that senior citizens be allowed to park free at three county parks.

The recommendation, proposed by Edward T. Ryken, executive director of the Marin Senior Coordinating Council, will be considered later this month by county supervisors.

"If there's any group that's discriminated against around here it is the seniors," said commissioner Leroy M. Gerner, urging support for the proposal.

If approved by county supervisors, Marin residents over 65 years of age will be given a car sticker allowing them to park at McNear's Beach, Stafford Lake and Paradise Beach.

Commissioner Merritt A. Robinson proposed that the 50-cent parking fee be lifted for all Marin County taxpayers since it amounts to double taxation for use of the parks.

His proposal was referred to committee, however, after Pierre W. Joske, director of the parks department, complained that such action would encourage use of automobiles. He said the parking fee is aimed at discouraging cars at the parks.

(Persons who enter the parks on foot or bicycle pay no fee.)

The commission also referred to the county counsel's office a proposal by Robinson that state lelislation be enacted to give property tax exemptions to homeowners groups providing park and recreation services.

homes can change their uses to meet changing needs.

The fight for the elderly patients is expected to surface tomorrow night when the Community Church of Mill Valley will ask the council for approval of 58 beds to be used for patients at the 300-unit retirement center now under construction in Mill Valley.

The council is not interested in the living units, intended for persons of low and moderate income levels; only the medical facility and its beds.

Protests from owners of neighboring nursing homes are expected, because the retirement home plans to allow outsiders to use the medical facility until its own residents take up all the space.

Many nursing homes were built on expectations of Medical and Medicare aid which did not materialize, Ingerman said.

At the other end of the spectrum is the young mother.

Not only is she having fewer babies, she, in many instances, wants her child born at home, Ingerman said.

High costs of hospitalization and a resentment toward institutionalized medicine were offered as suggested reasons.

One physician in West Marin is delivering between 15 and 20 babies a month in homes, Ingerman said.

Marion C. Ibach, longtime member of the Marin Hospital District board and a member of the committee which drew up the report, was optimistic, however, about the hospital situation.

"We'll have to reevaluate our thinking," she said, adding that additional out-patient facilities, better emergency room care and more home care can provide good alternatives for hospitalization.

In the meantime, those who seek approval of the council, necessary for receiving Medicare and Medical funds, and, in part, for licenses, seem to be in for tough sledding if they plan to add traditional beds to the overcrowded hospital situation.

AWACS, the airborne bomber defense system, will cause heated debate. The program is designed to move ground-based radar systems into the air where they could spot aircraft coming in at low levels under the present radar screen.

Critics charge that this year's budgeted amount is only the down payment on a program that will run $5.5 billion. And they argue that it is futile to spend that much money to protect cities against bombers when there is no defense anyway against missile attacks which would be far more devastating.

They argue that the Soviet bomber threat is overblown. The administration argues that the bomber threat is real and that a modernized air-alert system would be effective at least against bombers.

What a go-ahead on the program would mean can be seen from a look at one company, Boeing, which at present has 700 people employed on initial research on a portion of AWACS and would add 3,000 more next year if it got a contract.

The submarine missile-launching system is budgeted for $977 million. The critics are in an awkward position opposing it, because in the past they have fought against land-based missiles on the grounds that the real defense of the future would be missiles hidden under the sea.

Now they say they are willing to go ahead with $330 million earmarked for development of a new type missile, but oppose the $647 million for new type submarines.

They would hold that to $50 million for research. Research is not yet far enough along, they argue, to justify a full-scale go-ahead on ULMS, which they say would eventually cost $30 billion. Costly mistakes would be made, they assert.

Meanwhile, the existing Polar submarines can be used as launching pads for the new missiels, and Polaris will not be outdated before the 1985-90 period. They argue that the United States does not need to match the Soviet submarine buildup (42 ballistic missile submarines) because the U.S. has multiple warheads the Soviet Union does not.

Underlying the defense debate this year is the hope that President Nixon will sign a strategic arms limitation agreement with the Soviets when he goes to Moscow next montn, obviating the need for the kind of military buildup the administration has budgeted.

Ecumenical Housing Now Corporation

The Ecumenical Association for Housing in Marin last night completed formation of a limited-dividend corporation and became its sole stockholder, according to William Parnow, association president.

Attorney Douglas P. Ferguson explained that the corporation could obtain certain Housing and Urban Development funds more easily than a nonprofit corporation, and also could finance the ecumenical association after its present grant from the San Francisco Foundation expires next year.

The new corporation's officers will include Henry Arian of Mill Valley, president; Parnow of San Rafael, vice president; Thomas Zeller of San Anselmo, secretary, and Hazen Goddard of Terra Linda, treasurer.

The ecumenical association directors voted to spend $300 to buy the new corporation's initial stock issue.

Two loans were approved — $1,600 to Interfaith Housing Foundation, sponsors of the Shelter Hill housing project in Mill Valley, and $5,000 to the Catholic Social Services of Marin, sponsors of the Priory housing project in Kentfield.

The Mill Valley loan will be needed unless the federal department of Housing and Urban Development waives its requirement for a feasibility study application fee equalling 1 per cent of the total mortgage sought from the federal agency.

The loan to the Catholic Social Services will pay part of the fees of architect James McDonald if the HUD seed money loan fails to win approval, for the conversion of the church property in Kentfield to moderate-income housing.

program and an outspoken critic of the EOC's past administration, said his agency could only be hindered by continued association with the EOC.

(The EOC has acted as a funding source for Heard Start by making application for and disbursing federal funds. It never has been invovolved in the operation of Head Start. Problems arose earlier this year when it was disclosed that the EOC had used for its own programs between $5,000 and $20,000 of federal funds earmarked for Heard Start.)

Torczyner said under new federal legislation his agency can become an independent agency with power to apply for its own funding.

After discussion of Head Start's financial responsibility — a discussion question by director William J. Bielser who said the EOC was the last agency to question someone else's financial responsibility — the board approved the separation.

"The only thing I can see that we would do for them is drag them down with us," director Gerald J. Hood said in making the motion to approve Head Start's request. It was approved on a 20-2 vote with one abstension.

In other action, the board approved a recommendation from management consultant Ben Young of Belvedere, who is acting as interim executive director, to release 19 employees and close offices in Marin City, Novato and one in San Rafael where the main office on C Street will remain open.

Under his recommendation, the agency will keep seven employees to reorganize programs under the reduced budget imposed by the federal government.

The release of employees was highlighted by a letter from one threatening suit if she didn't receive about $2,000 she said was "promised her by former executive director W. Robert Lomax Jr.

Collie Gaines, a community worker in Marin City, said she had been promised a 20 per cent raise two years ago by Lomax but never received it.

The board took no action on the letter.

Spring Festival Set Saturday

The San Ramon Parent Faculty Club will conduct its fourth annual spring festival at the school ground, 45 San Ramon Way, from 11 a.m. to 3 p.m. Saturday.

The event will include a flea market with items made by children, game booths, relay games and races, a cakewalk and cake deocration contest.

A treasure hunt for preschool age children will be held at 11:30 a.m.

Proceeds from the festival will be used to purchase sports equipment for the playground and school.

federal grant of $6.2 million for the initial bus fleet.

Endorsing the bridge district's applications for the federal grants were San Francisco Mayor Joseph L. Alioto, the Metropolitan Transportation Commission, Marin County Transit District, Marin Council for Civic Affairs, Golden Gate Commuters Club, Irate Taxpayers of Marin, Bay Cities Metal Trades Council, Maritime Trades Council, People for a Golden Gate National Recreation Area, International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers Local 6, League of Women Voters of Central Marin, Boiler Makers Union Local 6, Inland Boatman's Union, Sierra Club, Masters, Mates and Pilots, San Francisco Building and Construction Trades Council and Save San Francisco Bay Association.

Support also came from the city councils of San Rafael, Tiburon, Novato, San Anselmo, Sausalito, Larkspur, Mill Valley, Rohnert Park and Cotati.

Labor's strong support was summed up by Thomas A. Rotell, executive secretary-treasurer of the Bay Cities Metal Trades Council: "we need the jobs," especially in shipyards to build the ferries. But he added that "we are not opposed to the buses; we believe in integration."

Rotell assured the bridge board that "we know where to get the dough, and we know where to pull strings to get it done here."

Alioto, especially enthusiastic about the ferries, said "this is one of those rare instances in public life where the romantic and nostalgic clearly coincide with rational, hard-headed and efficiency-oriented decisions as to the expenditure of public money." He cited district figures showing that the operating deficit per passenger on the Sausalito ferry has been only about half of the deficit for the buses, "clearly refuting those who would claim that a ferry system is uneconomic."

Margaret Azevedo, speaking for the Marin Council for Civic Affairs, challenged the handful of critics of the joint system to consider the "spectacular costs" of new highways that would be needed, "if we do not support a bus-ferry system adequate to do the job." A new bridge and about 400 lane-miles of highway between San Francisco and Sonoma would cost over $1 billion, "not to speak of an immeasurable cost to our physical environment," she said.

The strongest opposition to the grant applications came from Harbor Tug, whose president, Albert D. Elledge, charged the district with seeking federal funds to drive his private enterprise out of business. "You are not operating a bona fide commute service, but you are operating a sightseeing service, for which you are not entitled to a federal grant," he declared.

Elledge's attorney, James W. Halley, objected that in addition to competing unfairly with the private company, the bridge district had ignored the company's offer to handle expansion of ferry service.

Halley also reported that a survey of 589 persons taking the district's Sausalito ferry showed that almost three-quarters of them rode the ferry only for sightseeing and tourist purposes. The bridge district's attorney, Thomas M. Jenkins, later rebutted that many of these pleasure riders otherwise would have gone to Sausalito via the bridge, and that the ferry system was designed to relieve traffic on the bridge regardless of whether it is tourist or commuter traffic.

The bridge district's environmental impact statement that accompanied its ferry grant application was challenged by a consultant hired by Elledge, Hans Feibusch. He suggested that dredging necessary for the Larkspur ferry terminal would violate the bay plan of the Bay Conservation and Development Commission.

District officials, however, noted that the executive director of the commission, Joseph E. Bodovitz, had endorsed the grant application as "fully in accord with bay plan policies and findings."

Feibusch predicted few commuters would ride the expanded ferry system, but at the same time predicted massive traffic congestion caused by commuters at the ferry terminals.

Corte Madera Driver Hurt In Petaluma

Judith Sinclair, 31, of 21 Key Largo Court, Corte Madera, was treated at Hillcrest Hospital for leg cuts suffered in an accident at 2 a.m. today on Highway 101, north of Washington Street, Petaluma.

The California Highway Patrol said Mrs. Sinclair apparently dozed at the wheel. The car drifted off the right side of the road.

OBITUARIES

Concetta Barsotti Dies At 74

Concetta M. Barsotti, a longtime resident of San Anselmo, died yesterday in a local hospital after a long illness. She was 74.

Mrs. Barsotti was a native of San Francisco who had lived in San Anselmo since 1927.

Her late husband, Aladino Barsotti, was the owner of a San Francisco auto body repair shop. He died in 1952.

Mrs. Barsotti was a member of the Italian Catholic Federation, Sons of Italy, Club Italia, the Senior Citizens of Fairfax and a Portuguese fraternal organization, S.P.R.S.I., Council 29 of Sausalito.

Survivors are a daughter, Elva Camiccia of Fairfax; a son, Aldo Barsotti of San Rafael; two sisters, Norma Baldocci of San Francisco and Fulvia Mennucci of San Anselmo; a brother, Mario Franchini of San Francisco, and three grandchildren.

Mass of Requiem will be offered at 9:30 a.m. Saturday at St. Anselm's Church, San Anselmo. Burial will be private. Rosary will be recited at 8 p.m. tomorrow at the Chapel of the Hills, San Anselmo.

MRS. McLACHLIN

Funeral for Isabella (Belle) D. McLachlin of Santa Venetia will be held at 10 a.m. tomorrow in Westminster Presbyterian Church, Long Beach.

Mrs. McLachlin was the mother of William W. McLachlin, owner of a San Rafael insurance agency. She died April 13 in a local hospital after a brief illness. She was a native of Michigan and lived in Canada before moving to Southern California in 1919.

She was a member of the Gay 70s senior citizens group in Santa Venetia.

She also is survived by another son, John H. McLachlin of Saratoga, 15 grandchildren and 39 great-grandchildren.

Burial will be in Sunnyside Cemetery, Long Beach.

servations of the distinctive volcanic lava flows that appeared to have formed the lofty highlands between 3.6 billion and 4 billion years ago.

Traveling on foot and aboard their battery-driven four-wheeled lunar rover over more than 15 miles in three seven-hour excursions, the astronauts will explore the rims of bright-rayed centers and drive up the lower slopes of Stone Mountain to the south of the landing site.

Besides bringing back a record 195-pound haul of moon rock and soil samples, Young and Duke hope to complete a variety of scientific experiments, including temperature readings in the lunar subsoil, re-exposure of an Apollo 12 rock sample to the moon's magnetic field, and ultraviolet photography of distant stars, galaxies and gas clouds with a $2 million electronic camera.

Four metallic panels on the side of the Orion landing craft will measure cosmic rays from deep space as Young and Duke go about their tasks of describing the rugged features of the Descartes region, just south of the lunar equator, for clues to the still incomplete picture of the moon's evolution.

The astronauts, once awake Thursday morning, reported they were "charging hard."

BERT JOHNS

Funeral was held today in Vallejo for Bert Johns, 67, of Point Reyes Station, retired civilian maintenance engineer with the Army.

Johns collapsed at his home on Sir Francis Drake Boulevard Sunday after a short hike. He was pronounced dead at Marin General Hospital. Death was attributed to natural causes by the Marin coroner's office.

Johns moved to Marin after retiring from the Army in the Midwest. He had lived in Point Reyes Station four years.

Survivors are his wife, Josephine; two daughters, Mabelle Darby of Trevose, Pa., and Patricia Goodrich of Vallejo; two sons, James Johns of Chester, Plumas County, and Wes Johns of Vallejo, and his mother, Sarah Johns of Canton, Ohio.

Burial was in Sunrise Memorial Cemetery, Vallejo.

ETTA NAVTANOVICH

Etta Navtanovich, 88, a resident of San Rafael for 10 years, died yesterday in a Chico hospital after a short illness.

A native of Chita, Russia, she came to this country 35 years ago, and lived in San Rafael for 10 years. She moved to Chico to be near her daughter, Rachael Gorb.

She was a former member of B'nai Brith.

She is survived by her daughters, Mrs. Gorb and Paulette Poliak of San Francisco. She is also survived by two grandchildren and four great-grandchildren.

Funeral will be at 11:30 a.m. Friday at Sinai Memorial Chapel, Divisadero at Geary Street, San Francisco. Interment will follow at the Eternal Home Cemetery in Colma.

Recess Bill Is Opposed By GOP

SACRAMENTO (UPI) — Republicans on the Senate Rules Committee have balked at approving a Democratic plan to recess the legislature on June 30 until after the November election with one lawmaker warning the proposal would cause a "big mess."

Senate Democratic leader George Moscone of San Francisco, author of the proposal, suggested the legislature recess its current session on June 30, return Nov. 8, a day after the election, and adjourn the regular session Dec. 1.

He submitted the plan in the form of an amendment to a resolution which previously proposed adjourning the legislature June 30. The committee approved the amendment Wednesday but delayed a vote on the measure itself until Republican leaders are consulted.

"We'd end up like we did last year in a big mess," observed Sen. Robert Lagomarsino, R-Ojai. "It's better to stay here and get the work done."

Lagomarsino noted that the 1971 legislature met for almost an entire year and never came to grips with reapportionment.

Moscone predicted that an "overwhelming majority" of members of both parties will attend the national conventions during the summer and leave the legislature with only a few members on hand.

Chairman James R. Mills, D-San Diego, said, however, that for the legislature to return after the election "perhaps it will be a little easier to do something with respect to reapportionment."

"After the election when the air clears, everybody will know where he stands," Mills said.

Assembly Speaker Bob Moretti, D-Van Nuys, said he favors the Moscone plan, adding, "We arrived at that mutually."

Assembly Approves Dam Moratorium Bill

SACRAMENTO (UPI) —Over the objections of some conservationists who favored a stronger measure, the Assembly has passed a bill imposing a five-year moratorium on construction of dams on four north coast rivers.

The bill by Assemblyman Frank P. Belotti, R-Eureka, would bar construction of dams or reservoirs on the Eel, Smith, Trinity and Klamath rivers until 1977 while a study of them is being made by the Resources Agency.

It was sent to the Senate Wednesday on a 48-12 vote.

Assemblyman Edwin L. Z'berg, D-Sacramento, argued that the bill "goes nowhere near solving the problem" of the rivers.

He opposed it on the grounds that it was a substitute for stronger measures designed to preserve the streams as "wild rivers." The legislation by Sen. Randolph Coller, D-Yreka, Sen. Peter H. Behr, R-San Rafael, is pending in the Senate Finance Committee.

Assemblyman Ray Johnson, R-Chico, said Belotti's proposal "makes sense ... that we won't do anything in the way on construction until we make a study."

Marin Judge Sues Neighbors

Marin Superior Court Judge Samuel W. Gardiner and his wife have filed suit against all the neighbors of land they own in Napa County in an effort to win a right-of-way to a road.

In the suit filed Tuesday in both Marin and Napa Superior Courts, the judge and his wife, Barbara, claim there was an implied easement when they bought a 120-acre parcel of land near Moskowitz reservoir. The lot is surrounded by private land.

Named as defendants in the suit are J. Roy, Ella, Donald, Clinton R. and Marilyn Pridmore, J. H. Langford Inc., Circle Oaks Investments Inc., Irene W. Haynes, Nancy Lee and East Sierra Development Associates.

Interest Down

WASHINGTON (UPI)—The Federal Home Loan Bank Board reports that interest rates on new mortgages during March averaged 7.52 per cent.

Two Have Pot Charges Dismissed

A Marin Municipal Court judge has dismissed charges of growing marijuana and having narcotics paraphernalia against two San Anselmo men, but a third was bound over to superior court on the marijuana charge.

Judge Robert W. Smallman said there was insufficient evidence to prosecute Marvin Joe Shuck, 25, and Fred Joseph St. Arnault, 19, but ruled enough evidence was presented to try 28-year-old Charles Galbraith Carmalt.

He was ordered to appear for arraignment in superior court May 3.

The three were charged with the felony cultivation charge and the misdemeanor paraphernalia count last month after San Anselmo police said they saw marijuana plants growing inside a window of their house at 135 Redwood Road.

Police allegedly found 10 marijuana plants growing there plus several pipes, three hypodermic needles, a plastic container of marijuana seeds and cigarette papers.

Bill To Kill Utility Advertising Killed

SACRAMENTO (UPI) —The Senate has killed a bill to prohibit public utilities from doing any advertising that would encourage the increased consumption of light, heat or power.

After a brief floor debate Wednesday in which opponents denounced the bill as a "back-door" approach to conservation of energy and natural resources, the measure by Sen. Alfred E. Alquist, D-San Jose, was defeated on a 16-18 vote.

Tablets, Cash Taken

Dr. Lawrence Saunders told Petaluma police yesterday his office at 148 Keller Street had been burgled with 50 seconal tablets and an undetermined amount of cash taken.

Greener grass ...and a guarantee!

With Park 100 Lawn Seed—blended especially for Bay Area growing conditions—you get a greener lawn and a money-back guarantee. If Park 100 doesn't perform to your expectations, Northrup King will refund the full purchase price.

What makes Park 100 work is a combination of grasses: two improved narrow-leafed ryegrasses, Pelo and NK 100, plus Park Kentucky Bluegrass and creeping red fescue. They're precisely blended for even appearance, rich green color and controlled growth (less mowing!). Other benefits are summarized by Bay Area residents who've used Park 100:

"It mows very easily—there is no browning of the leaf tips." "Park 100 is the most uniform grass I've seen for establishing a lawn from the seedling stage." "It just filled in so good that we haven't had any weed problems." Buy Northrup King's Park 100 Lawn Seed, and have a greener lawn this year.

Meany In Attack On Profits

WASHINGTON (UPI) —AFL-CIO President George Meany used the government's own statistics today to try to prove his claim that President Nixon's wage-price controls are holding down pay increases while allowing prices to skyrocket.

In testimony prepared for a hearing by the Joint Economic Committee of Congress, Meany asked the lawmakers to take the issue away from Nixon, revise the control machinery and impose a tax on "excess profits."

"The administration has proven its incompetence in these areas," Meany said. "It is up to the Congress to restore the confidence of the American people in the American economy."

ECONOMIC STATISTICS

Citing economic statistics produced by the government, Meany said the system established by Nixon in mid-November to contain both price and wage increases has demonstrated a bias against working people.

He said the figures show:

In December, January and February, the consumer price index rose at an annual rate of 4.9 per cent—exactly equal to its performance from May through July, before Nixon froze prices and wages on Aug. 15.

Wholesale prices rose at a 5.1 per cent annual rate in the first three months of this year, compared to an annual rate of 5.3 per cent before Nixon's August actions.

From December through March, according to a wage index which "tends to overstate increases in wage rates," wages rose at a yearly rate of 6 per cent.

PROFITS ATTACKED

Since productivity—output per manhour—has been rising rapidly, as it always does in a recovery period, Meany said, industries are reaping undeserved profits. Instead of raising prices, he said, they should be keeping them stable.

Consequently, he said, after-tax corporate profits were up 19 per cent in the second half of 1971 and profits of the nation's 100 largest corporations rose 76 per cent in all of last year.

All of this, he said, proves both the ineffectiveness of the administration's anti-inflation program and "its favoritism to business, against the interests of the consumer and worker."

"Look at the record of these past 39 months," Meany said. "Unemployment, tax bonanzas to business, persistent economic slack and continuing, huge budget deficits have been added to inflation, which still plagues the American people."

Pain Killer Ads Called Misleading

WASHINGTON (UPI) —The Federal Trade Commission (FTC) says 36 cents of every dollar consumers spend for 10 leading headache medicines is used for advertising which in turn deceives the buyer with unproven or misleading claims.

To purge the public mind of this alleged deception, the FTC envisions Anacin, Bufferin and Excedrin commercials devoted exclusively to confessions that the products haven't been proven any better than aspirin, and Bayer commercials acknowledging that other aspirins may be just as good.

"Over the years these companies, through intensive advertising efforts, have given consumers the misleading impression that there are significant therapeutic differences among these products," Robert Pitofsky, director of the FTC's Bureau of Consumer Protection, told a news conference Wednesday.

As a result, Pitofsky said, "consumers pay significantly more" to get the advertised brands. Much of the money, he said, is pumped into more deceptive advertising which has garnered two-third of the $330 million analgesic market for three companies which make the 10 products.

Pitofsky said $80 million was spent to advertise the 10 products in 1970—36 per cent of their total sales.

The companies and their respective products are American Home Products (Anacin and Arthritis Pain Formula); Bristol-Myers (Bufferin, Excedrin and Excedrin PM); and Sterling Drug (Bayer Aspirin, Bayer Children's Aspirin, Cope, Vanquish and Midol).

Pitofsky said all 10 products are based on aspirin and there is no proof the other ingredients do much good, if any.

Sterling Drug and Bristol-Myers issued statements strongly contesting the FTC allegations and indicating they would fight the case in court. If they do, the allegedly misleading ads can continue until the case is settled, perhaps years from now, by the Supreme Court.

Novato Schools Set Pre-Registration

Pre-registration of kindergarten pupils for the coming school year will be held from 9:30 a.m. to noon Tuesday at all elementary schools in the Novato Unified School District office, the district office announced today.

Children must be 5 years of age on or before Dec. 2, 1972, to be eligible. Parents must bring a birth certificate or affadavit of birth.

Reagan Setback On Trustee Nominations

SACRAMENTO (UPI) —The Senate Rules committee has handed Gov. Ronald Reagan an unexpected setback by holding up the appointment of two Republicans to the State College Board of Trustees.

Opponents asserted the nominees, attorney Frank Adams of Piedmont and construction executive Roy Brophy of Sacramento, would "perpetuate" what they called the board's failure to adequately represent minorities, women, youth and the poor.

"The issue of representation of the board is a legitimate issue," Rules chairman James R. Mills, D-San Diego, told Brophy and Adams Wednesday after 13 witnesses trooped forward during a two-hour hearing to recommend against Senate confirmation of the pair.

Usually, the committee grants routine approval for confirmation of gubernatorial appointees. But on a voice vote without dissent, the three Democrats and two Republicans agreed to take no action on Adams and Brophy.

The committee indicated, however, it would take another look at them next week when two other nominees, Mrs. Jeanette Ritchie of Menlo Park and Robert Beaver of Fullerton, are scheduled to appear. All are Republicans.

Mills told Brophy and Adams, a former president of the California Republican Assembly, that he intends to vote against their appointment. But Sen. Stephen P. Teale, D-Rail Road Flat, announced he plans to recommend confirmation of Brophy.

It takes 27 favorable Senate votes to confirm a trustee. Democrats currently outnumber Republicans 21 to 18.

Witness after witness, including state college student body presidents, said they had no personal quarrel with either nominee but asserted they reflected the board's currently mostly white, Republican and over-50 composition.

Art Bierman, president of the United Professors of California, a union, told the committee that the board "in no way" can be said to be "representative of the people of California."

"The trustees are and therefore represent white, older, male Republican professionals or business managers," he said. "The views and values of this narrow and unrepresentative group prevail in the consideration of trustee business."

James Hirabayashi, dean of ethnic studies at San Francisco State, said approval of Brophy and Adams would "confirm" a generally held belief among minorities that the "educational system is unresponsive" to them.

Sen. Robert Stevens, R-Los Angeles, challenged the accuracy of some opponents' assertions, noting that in the past six years under Reagan the trustees have approved such innovative projects as the Economic Opportunity Program for economically disadvantaged students.

He declared it was "intellectually dishonest" to suggest as did Robert Smith, a San Francisco State professor, that Republicans would vote as a "bloc" on any single issue.

But Robert Arellanes, coordinator of ethnic studies at Sacramento State, insisted that the "board is shot through with political appointments and people of particular political persuasions."

Joe Hay, lobbyist for state college students, urged the committee to impose a "moratorium" on approval of Reagan's nominees to the board "until a more representative group of the people of California is presented by the governor."

Police Arrest San Rafaelan

Lanny Irvin Johnson, 19, of San Rafael was arraigned yesterday in Marin Municipal Court on a charge of burglarizing a van in San Rafael Feb. 11.

Johnson was arrested Tuesday by San Rafael police on a warrant after fingerprints lifted from the broken wing window of the vehicle were matched with Johnson's.

Johnson was seen sitting on his car next to the van at the county club bowling alley when the owner returned to find his vehicle had been broken into.

$812,494 — Top Salary During 1971

NEW YORK (UPI)—ITT Chairman Harold S. Geneen's salary last year was $812,494, making him the highest paid U.S. executive, according to the Gallagher Presidents' Report.

Henry Ford II was the second highest paid executive, earning $689,000, followed by Ford President Lee Iacocca, $675,000.

The top executives of America's 47 top companies got pay boosts averaging 14.4 per cent in 1971, increasing the average compensation of chairmen to $346,744, of presidents to $288,423 and of top vice presidents to $242,208, Gallagher's said.

Some top executives had their pay doubled or more during the year. Among these, Gallagher listed Charles Branch, president of Dow Chemical, raised 196 per cent to $305,089; President Ed Cole of General Motors, raised 121 per cent to $497,534, and Chairman A. P. Fontaine of Bendix, raised 130 per cent to $280,664.

Some salaries were reduced. Chairman Neil McElroy of Procter & Gamble was reduced 22.5 per cent to $258,333; Chairman John Harper of Alcoa 14.2 per cent to $256,500 and Continental Oil President John McLean 16.6 per cent to $258,701.

MOVING RIGHT ALONG

Renovations to Fairfax's 46-year-old city hall continued yesterday with City Administrator Robert E. Crowe predicting the work will be done "in about a month." Next phase of the two-year civic center project will be construction of a new fire station, then demolition of the old station, leaving portions of the present building for added police department space.

Panelists Agree On Vets' Jobs

By JEFF GREER

A Vietnam veteran, an employer and three government spokesmen all agreed today that returning veterans should be given preference in hiring.

Nevertheless, one official told the Radio KTIM "Sounding Board" audience that the unemployment rate among returning veterans is higher than the national average and that there are 9,000 jobless Vietnam veterans in the Bay Area. The broadcast apparently found at least one veteran a job.

The speakers were Philip Parker of San Anselmo, a job-seeking veteran; employer Harold B. Wilde, president of Harver Industries in San Rafael; Robert R. Souza, Northern California veterans representative with the Human Resources Development Agency; Robert C. Beebe, veterans employment representative with the state Human Resources office in San Rafael, and Robert G. Waldman, assistant veterans services officer for Marin County.

California veterans have a 7.2 per cent unemployment rate compared with a 5.8 per cent rate for all state residents, Souza noted. He said stepped-up efforts had reduced the veterans' jobless rate from 9.8 per cent a year ago. Returning veterans range from 20 to 29 years old, with the average age of 23, but the younger ones show a disproportionately high jobless rate, particularly if a minority member, Souza said.

Parker reported that despite four years of military experience in hospital administration and finance, he found potential employers were wary of his disability — a heart condition — and often tended to hire women rather than men as bookkeepers.

He urged the employers "give veterans a chance to prove themselves" instead of hiring others with more formal job qualifications.

Panel moderator Kitty Oppenheimer reported that after the program Parker was offered a job as a trainee bookkeeper at $500 a month.

Businessman Wilde said that employers often believe that men having to support a family would require higher pay than women filling the same job, and that men more often switch jobs after being trained by the company. Disabled job-seekers often cannot pass physcial examinations for the insurance employers must carry, he added. But Wilde agreed with the idea, dating back to George Washington's day, that the veteran was entitled to hiring preference.

The government officials outlined a broad list of services available to veterans and employers. They described unemployment compensation, on-the-job training programs in which the state pays part of the veterans' wages, G.I. educational programs and intensive placement programs. Information is available from the county veterans service office at the Civic Center, from state Human Resources Development offices in San Rafael and San Francisco, from the Veterans Administration and other agencies, they said.

The program will be rebroadcast at 10:05 a.m. Sunday.

Stolen Property Count Dismissed

A Marin Municipal Court judge has dismissed a charge of possessig stolen property against Darrell William Drennan, 51, of El Cerrito.

Judge Peter Allen Smith refused to hold Drennan on the charge bacause he felt evidence against him was improperly gathered.

In granting a defense motion to suppress the evidence, Smith said police should have obtained a search warrant before raiding the San Rafael motel room where Drennan was staying.

From the room police seized a television set with its serial numbers scratched out, a tape recorder and a projector believed stolen in a school burglary in Modesto.

Drennan was charged with possessing stolen property and a misdemeanor count of having property with the serial number removed following the January arrest.

Housing Group Plans Meeting

The annual general meeting and election of officers of the Alto-Sutton Manor Association will by May 24 at 8 p.m. in the Alto firehouse, according to association member Sara Ruffner.

The association's annual picnic will be held June 3 at Boyle Park beginning at 1 p.m., she said.

At last night's meeting, she said the association's board endorsed a regional park proposed to the board of supervisors, but asked that the issue be put on the November ballot.

Senate Advances State Welfare Takeover Bill

SACRAMENTO (UPI) — A Senate committee has approved legislation requiring the state to assume full financing and administration of welfare after supporters said it would remove a $450 million tax burden from home owners.

On identical 8-2 votes Wednesday, the Senate Health and Welfare Committee passed and sent to the Finance Committee two measures by Sen. Alfred Alquist, D-San Jose, that would effect the changeover. One would do it by statute and the other through a constitutional amendment.

Sen. Ralph Dills, D-Gardena, told his colleagues, "We've talked about property tax relief for a long time and done nothing, so let's do it now by picking up this tab."

The "no" votes on both measures were cast by Sens. Peter Behr, R-San Rafael, and Jack Schrade, R-San Diego.

Boas Attacks New Photostating Policy

Democratic congressional candidate Roger Boas yesterday attacked as "incredible" a new Treasury Department regulation requiring all banks to keep photostatic records of their customers' personal checks.

"This is carrying big brotherism too far," the San Francisco supervisor declared. "Government encroachment on our private lives must be stopped and the trend reversed," he declared.

"It strikes me as just incredible that the government plans to go sneaking about, peeking into our private, personal checking accounts," Boas declared. "I hope we don't have to wait for years of litigation in the courts to resolve this issue — Congress should take immediate steps to prevent this newest governmental scheme to invade our privacy," he said.

Boas is seeking the Siyth Congressional District seat held by Republican William S. Mailliard. The incumbent congressman voted for the Bank Secrecy Act, which authorized the new regulations, and has endorsed its provisions as necessary to control criminal activity.

A Bank of America official confirmed Tuesday that the regulations will go into effect July 1, and will extend as well to dealings in securities, certain credit usage and travelers' check purchases. Federal officials can subpoena the records for criminal and tax investigation.

Muir Beach New Director Is Selected

A director of the Muir Beach Community Services District resigned last night under fire from county officials because her husband is employed by the district as general manager.

Mary Mosteller resigned her position, but the board reappointed her husband, Gordon, to his $500-per-month job, according to board chairman Bruce E. Harlow.

Appointed to take her place was Doris Clark, of 50 Starbuck Drive, Muir Beach, wife of San Francisco surgeon Edward W. Clark.

Also, Director Gerald N. Pearlman missed a third consecutive meeting last night, and will be replaced at the district's May 17 meeting, said Harlow.

County auditor-controller Michael Mitchell, the man who first pointed out the possible conflict of interest in a letter to the board early this month, said today Mrs. Mosteller resigned "in the absence of any state legislation to allow family operation" of a community services district.

After Mitchell's letter to the district, members of the Muir Beach Improvement Association had voted to support the Mostellers, and asked county officials to find some method by which both could be retained in their jobs.

The district's water rates were raised at last night's meeting from $5 for the first 1,000 cubic feet to $5 for the first 500 cubic feet and one cent for each cubic foot after 500 and 1.5 cents for each cubic foot after 1,000 feet, according to district secretary Hazel Melo.

She said the new rates would take effect May 1.

The district also agreed to buy a used fire truck for $375 under terms of an agreement worked out by the county attorney.

How to get the most out of a dishwasher:

Hold dirty dishes in it until there's a full load, instead of frequent washing, and you'll save water, detergent and heat.

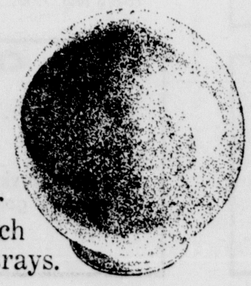
Let it clean pots and pans. New machines have a special cycle to remove heavy accumulations of grease and food.

Sanitize baby bottles, dishes, pots and silverware in it, since it uses hotter water than your hands can stand (because it dries, too, there are no dirty dishtowels).

Store dirty dishes in it—out of sight—instead of in your sink.

Use the "dry" or "warm" setting to warm dishes.

Clean house with it. A dishwasher can take over miscellaneous chores such as cleaning light fixtures and ashtrays.



Women who work outside the home in particular rely on a dishwasher to help keep house. The cost of about three cents a day to run one is a bargain. PG and E

Tam High Teacher Facing New Charges

The Tamalpais Union High School District board voted unanimously today to add charges of immoral conduct against English teacher Kenneth A. Anderson, and suspend him immediately.

Supt. Wilber D. Hawkins said the charge evolved from evidence in Anderson's depositions and that of a high school student Hawkins refused to identify.

According to Hawkins, the immoral conduct charge carries with it the provision of immediate suspension. He said that if Anderson does not ask for a hearing within 30 days on the immoral conduct charge he will be automatically fired.

Hawkins said the hearing does not actually have to take place with the 30-day period, but must be requested.

The superintendent said Anderson attended the 7:30 a.m. breakfast meeting of the board at a Greenbrae restaurant, and was handed notice of suspension. Hawkins said Anderson took the notice and left, without a word.

Anderson had been working at Tamalpais High School in a nonteaching position, doing curriculum work in freshman English, since September.

Anderson was not available for comment this morning. He had not reported to Tamalpais High School by 10 a.m.

Anderson's attorney, Carl B. Shapiro, was in court, and also unavailable for comment. William O. Weissich, hired March 20 by the board to help Asst. County Counsel Richard V. Godino with the firing, refused to comment on the case.

The immoral conduct charge is the third general one lodged against Anderson by the board, the others being unfitness for service and persistent violation of or refusal to obey prescribed school rules, according to Hawkins.

The board initially voted May 13, 1971, to fire the 31-year-old teacher, and has been attempting to do so ever since. Because he is a tenured teacher, the board cannot fire him without a trial.

March 16 attorneys for the district questioned Anderson about the three southern Marin bombings last year. Four days later they hired Weissich.

Hawkins said he expects all the necessary depositions to be completed in the next two weeks, and then the case will go to trial. He made no estimate when the trial would actually begin.

Oil Company Phasing Out Its Billboards

LOS ANGELES (UPI)—Atlantic Richfield, one of the nation's major oil companies, announced Wednesday it was "phasing out" use of about 1,000 advertising billboards in 36 states in the interest of highway beautification.

Company president Thornton Bradshaw said the action went further than requirements of the National Highway Beautification Act.

"We as a company are fully in accord with the aims of the act," Bradshaw said. "While many of those billboards may not be illegal under the act, we feel strongly that we must make this contribution toward improving the attractiveness of the natural scenery along streets and roads across the country."

Land Proposed For Hospital In Petaluma

The Petaluma Hospital District board yesterday heard land on North McDowell Boulevard proposed as the site for the new hospital.

District administrator Joseph E. Horner said architects Stone, Maracini and Patterson recommended the board accept the offer of Qantas Development Corp. for free land on North McDowell adjacent to Lucchesi Park.

Horner said the architects advised that other free land on Adobe Road offered by Land Investors Research would not be as practical because of the proximity of the Skyranch Airport and proposed golf courses. The McDowell site was recommended for its better access to Highway 101 and availability of water and sewer services.

Horner said the board delayed site selection until soil testing reports are complete on both sites. A decision is expected on May 2.

College Trustees Given A Bleak Funding Report

Marin Community College District trustees last night glumly listened to a prediction that the district will be facing a $1.5 million annual deficit in five years unless costs are cut or new sources of income found.

In a report which gave budget predictions for the next five years, Business Manager Norman Bird said, "The 1976-77 year has a disastrous ending with a $1.5 million deficit."

Bird had worked out his predictions at the request of the board, which now has set workshop sessions to find ways of avoiding future financial disaster.

Although Bird predicted that the college district will run in the black through 1975-76, reserves will be much less than earlier estimated, he said.

A 25-cent tax override approved by the voters in 1970 which became effective this year will be sufficient to keep the district in the black for four years if part of the money is put into reserves for two or three years, he said.

However, after the new Indian Valley Colleges in Novato, slated to open in the fall of 1974, go into operation, increased operating costs are expected to cause financial trouble for the district, which now operates only College of Marin.

Byrd explained today that inflation, both in material and personnel, as well as additional staff positions for the two campuses would make it impossible for the college district to operate in five years on the income expected.

He said he based his predictions on assumptions about income and expenditures, all of which could change or turn out to be inaccurate.

Major changes in assumptions used in making the latest predictions, as compared to those made in 1971, he said, include opening of Indian Valley Colleges classes at other locations prior to 1974 and an enlarged staff for the district because of a new district organization plan.

Trustees will wrestle with the problems predicted by Byrd in a workshop at 8 p.m. Wednesday in the college board room.

The Marin Community College District board also:

CLASSES — Approved two classes — conversational Spanish and creative writing — to be given by Indian Valley Colleges at Novato High School this summer.

FEDERAL — Accepted a grant of $23,413 in federal funds for a "systems approach to community development" project and agreed to spend matching funds from district money.

LEAVE — Granted the request of instructor Judy Dunlop for a leave during the 1972-73 academic year.

SABBATICAL — Approved a sabbatical leave for spring semester, 1973, for professor Cornelius Weber.

BUSES — Learned from student body President Gregory Fearon that it seemed likely that the Golden Gate Bridge District will provide additional busing service to the College of Marin.

A New No-Fault Bill Is Offered

SACRAMENTO (UPI) —A Democratic Senator has proposed a no-fault automobile insurance plan under which a driver's own insurance plan would pay his benefits regardless of who caused an accident.

Sen. Alfred H. Song, D-Monterey Park, told a news conference Wednesday his proposal would reduce premiums and unclog the courts. He said the plan has been amended into a Senate measure already introduced.

The legislature is considering several no-fault insurance proposals this year.

Under Song's proposal, up to $5,000 in compensation will be provided for medical expenses, loss of wages, loss of services, survivor benefits and funeral expenses.

FIRE CALLS

YESTERDAY:

7:57 a.m., Novato — Fire in television set at home of Lois J. Cannon, 1305 Denlyn Street, apparently caused by a short circuit; out on arrival of firemen.

9:13 a.m., Larkspur — Fire damaged redwood trees and a fence at the Hiven Nursery, 2 Ward Street; cause unknown.

12:12 p.m., San Rafael — Fire which started in a garbage enclosure under the home of Steve Sommers of 15 Miraflores Avenue, destroyed the house; damage estimated at $35,000 to building and $10,000 to contents.

2:50 p.m., Belvedere — A fallen power line at 214 Bayview Avenue started a small fire in a tree; out on arrival of firemen.

Median Prices Range Is Wide On Marin Homes

The median prices of homes in Marin range from a low of $24,400 in Fairfax to a high of $50,000 plus in Belvedere, Ross and Tiburon.

The figures were compiled by the Marin County Chamber of Commerce and Visitors Bureau on owner-occupied, single family homes on the basis of the 1970 United States Census on housing.

Median prices of homes in the 11 cities and in the unincorporated areas of the county are as follows:

Belvedere $50,000 plus; Corte Madera $31,900; Fairfax $24,400; Larkspur $41,900; Mill Valley $36,200; Novato $28,800; Ross $50,000 plus; San Anselmo $28,500; San Rafael $38,000; Sausalito $48,300; Tiburon $50,000 plus; and unincorporated areas of Marin $33,900.

Bound Over On Felony Charge

Carlos John Flores, 35, of San Francisco has been bound over to superior court on charges of felony drunken driving and marijuana stemming from a crash on the Golden Gate Bridge.

During the accident, Dec. 12, Julia May Langville, 52, of Guerneville was killed and a Larkspur man and wife were injured.

The California Highway Patrol said the wreck occurred when a car driven by Flores crossed the center line and crashed into three northbound cars.

Deepening Split Seen In U.S.-Japan Ties

WASHINGTON (UPI) —A leading China scholar predicted today that U.S.-Japanese relations would continue to deteriorate as the United States moves to improve relations with China.

A. Doak Barnett, a senior fellow at the Brookings Institution in Washington, discussed China's foreign relations policies with a group of other panelists during the second day of a three-day convention of the American Society of Newspaper Editors (ASNE).

Barnett said: "I think we should continue to show originality and effort in continuing our relations with China. We should try to open up various subjects with them including basic arms control and disarmament issues."

Barnett said he was "cautiously optimistic" on the future of U.S.-China relations. He said however, he thought "we can expect deteriorating relations with Japan over this. I think we should give high priority to repairing various grievances. We can't allow a U.S.-Japan split to occur."

There have been increasing tensions in recent months between Japan and the United States over trade relations and a feeling by the Japanese that President Nixon hasn't consulted them sufficiently on various Asian diplomatic moves.

The panel was moderated by Robert Keatley of the Wall Street Journal. Also speaking to the editors was Prof. Paul T. K. Lin director of the Center for East Asian Studies at McGill University in Toronto; Prof. Robert A. Scalapino of the University of California at Berkeley, and Marshall Green assistant secretary of State for Far Eastern affairs.

Lin reviewed a history of U.S.-Chinse relations, observing that "trends in China are being set not by Chairman Mao himself but by hundreds of millions of people with a memory of the past."

Scalapino said China's Prime Minister Chou En-lai, has asserted that in our new relationship there can be and there need be no abandonment of principles and no desertion of allies by the United States. The acid test of this doctrine will be our willingness to maintain our military protection against external threats and our economic interaction with the people of Taiwan if events should unfold in such a fashion as to cause this state to evolve toward legal as well as de facto independence."

The discussion was to be followed by appearances by Democratic presidential candidates Sens. Henry M. Jackson of Washington, George S. McGovern of South Dakota and Gov. George C. Wallace of Alabama. Sen. Hubert H. Humphrey, campaigning in Pennsylvania, cancelled his appearance.

During a panel discussion Wednesday on press rights vs. press responsibilities, the editors continued a day-long discussion which was sparked by publication in 1971 of the controversial Pentagon Papers and disclosures by columnist Jack Anderson of the administration's position on the India-Pakistan conflict plus a current investigation of acting Attorney General Richard G. Kleindienst.

Anderson told the group he felt that too many government documents have been kept secret when it would have been in the national interest to make them public. He added that people he has talked to say that 95 to 98 per cent of secret government documents should be declassified.

"It's not national security, it's political security," Anderson said. "We're not supposed to be engaged in a conspiracy with the government to cover up their blunders."

Prison Term To Marinite In Pot Case

I-J Special Report

SAN FRANCISCO — Attorney Harry J. Kreamer of Bolinas was sentenced yesterday to a maximum of six years in federal prison in connection with confiscation of large amounts of marijuana in Marin County.

Kreamer, sentenced in U.S. District Court, had pleaded guilty to felony conspiracy to possess 800 pounds of marijuana seized last Oct. 17 in San Rafael's Northgate Industrial Park.

Kreamer, former law clerk to U.S. District Judge Stanley A. Weigel, also had pleaded guilty to a misdemeanor charge of carrying about 20 pounds of pot in his car in Novato on Aug. 16.

In the Northgate case, the huge pot haul was found in a truck. Agents said at the time the marijuana had been flown into Oakland International Airport from Miami.

District Court Judge William M. Byrne, visiting from Los Angeles, yesterday ordered Kreamer to undergo 90 days of psychiatric observation after which he will be returned for possible modification of sentence.

Car Equipment Gone From Novato Cars

Auto equipment valued at more than $335 was taken in a series of auto burglaries near apartments on Posada Del Sol and Alameda Del Prado late Tuesday or early yesterday, Novato police reported.

Nine cars were entered and equipment taken from seven, officers said. The losses included auto stereos, tire and rim, tachometer and tools.

House Blaze Does $45,500 In Damages

A fire which started under the deck of a house at 15 Miraflores Avenue in San Rafael destroyed the residence and sent billowing smoke and flames over the horizon before it was extinguished.

A neighbor, of the house occuped by Steve Sommers and his wife, first spotted the blaze at 12:12 p.m. and attempted to put it out with a garden hose while his wife called the fire department.

Emil Bernauer said he thought he had the fire, which started in a garbage enclosure area, extinguished when it seemed to explode.

By the time two fire trucks and 15 firemen made it up the narrow winding road to the house, the residence was completely engulfed in flames.

Fire Marshall Kenneth Mazza said today that Sommers told him he had cleaned out his fireplace yesterday and placed the ashes in a box which he had put in the garbage area. Near the garbage enclosure was a gas meter, Mazza said.

Neither Sommers nor his wife was home when the fire broke out, but firemen found a dead dog inside the house. Another family dog was missing, they said.

Firemen spent more than two hours mopping up the fire.

Damage was estimated at $35,000 to the house and $10,000 to the contents, Mazza said.

I-J In Error

The Independent-Journal erred yesterday, in reporting that Minnie Dinucci, nominated for Marin's senior citizen of the year from San Anselmo, devoted volunteer service to Ross General Hospital. She has worked at Center Medical Hospital in Kentfield.

CAMERA FANS
By Ken Reichard
METER MAGIC

These days of built-in exposure meters have a tendency to let the magic meter do all our thinking for us. But the truth is that no exposure meter, inside or outside the camera, of the reflected light or incident light type, can provide all the answers for the creative photographer.

The exposure just reads; it doesn't think. It takes a reading of the average of light which it measures, and automatically tells you what exposure to use for that average light level (or automatically sets the camera).

But there are many occasions when you don't want just an average reading. Maybe you want to concentrate on a figure, not the background, or you are faced with strong contrasts in which case you have to choose to read either the deep shadows or the highlights. In such circumstances, you have to take your reading from flesh tones, or from the area you want to emphasize.

Whether you want a camera that does just about everything for you, or a precision instrument for your own creative improvising, you'll find the right selection of cameras and accessories in our big display. Come in ... for everything photographic.

More Money Sought For Petaluma

The Petaluma Recreation, Music and Parks Commission last night agreed to ask for an additional $64,000 from Sonoma County to develop a park adjacent to the boat launching ramp.

The Sonoma County Board of Supervisors rejected plans for the county to build an athletic complex of baseball diamonds and a soccer field at the county park, saying it would serve mainly city residents rather than the entire district.

Commissioner Raymond Boccaleoni gained commission support to go back to the supervisors to get at least another $64,000 for park development. The county has already allocated $25,000 for grading, but refused any other money commitments.

Boccaleoni said he believed the county should at least pay for road access, restrooms, landscaping and fencing estimated at $64,000. He said the city and sports organizations could then do the remainder of the work.

Boccaleoni said he would remind the supervisors that the Petaluma district is the second largest tax contributor in the county, but has not received its share of county park plans.

San Anselmo Man Accused Of Threat

A 33-year-old San Anselmo man arrested Tuesday after allegedly threatening a police officer with a butcher knife has been arraigned in Marin Municipal Court. He is scheduled to plead Wednesday.

Everett Americo Cirio of 211 San Anselmo Avenue was arrested when police answered a report of a family squabble at his home at 2:45 a.m. Police said they had calmed the couple when Cirio suddenly grabbed the knife. He dropped it when the officer drew his gun.

Woman Candidate Is Top Novato Spender

Dorothy P. Young, lone woman candidate, was the top spender among the three winners in the Novato City Council election last week, according to campaign expenditure statements filed at Novato City Hall.

Mrs. Young listed contributions totaling, $1,990, including $1,290 from Novato Citizens for Responsible Government and $250 from the Century Club of Marin.

Her expenditures were listed at $2,727.

Fred F. Ruegg, the top vote getter in the election, listed both expenditures and contributions at $2,700, with the largest contributions $800 from the Century Club of Marin and $650 from Novato Citizens for Responsible Government.

David Price Jones listed contributions at $1,045, coming from a large number of small contributors, and expenses at $1,442.

The eight losing candidates have until May 16 to file their campaign statements, according to the city manager's office.

Marin Court Jury Trial Progresses

Jury selection continued today in Marin Superior Court in the murder trial of Russell Gilbert Wonnacott, who is accused of shooting his estranged wife's boyfriend.

The 48-year-old Eureka man is charged with the killing of Charles Patrick Ely, 37, of San Rafael.

The shooting happened in Wonnacott's room at the Holiday Inn in San Rafael after Wonnacott, his wife and their two children had dinner with Ely at the hotel.

According to police, the couple and Ely were discussing finances and a divorce when Wonnacott pulled a gun from a desk drawer and fired six shots into Ely after a struggle for the weapon.

Wives Protest To Liberation At One Plant

NEW ORLEANS (UPI)—Avondale Shipyard officials say equal rights for women include sharing toilet facilities with men at the yard, but the male workers' wifes say that's carrying women's liberation too far.

"My interpretation of the law is that women are equal and they should use the same facilities," said Walter Barrios, Avondale personnel manager. He has ordered male workers to share the toilet and dressing room facilities with two female welders.

But Barrios said Tuesday a welder's wife called and complained and said all the other wives were upset too.

"That's the way it goes," Barrios said. "We're not causing any undue hardship."

He said none of the men had complained.

Rock Concert At Stafford Park Booted

The Marin County Parks and Recreation Commission rejected a request yesterday to use the new Stafford Lake Park facilities for a rock music concert next month.

According to Michael Whitehoffer, who made the request, a rock concert is being planned to raise money for the Marin County Jail Prisoners Fund.

Commissioners agreed with member Leroy M. Gerner that the park is too new to risk the damage which could result from a rock concert.

He suggested the promoters of the affair approach the board of supervisors for use of the Civic Center fairgrounds near the lagoon.

(A spokesman for the inmates' welfare fund said today he hadn't heard of the rock concert and added that the prisoners' fund is financially healthy. It is financed by profits from a small store at the jail.)

Report Drug Deaths

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI)—The American Social Health Association reported today 1,726 persons died from narcotics overdoses last year in 14 major cities, more than half of them in New York.

Woman, Boy Cited For Civic Duties

A Petaluma woman and a 12-year-old Sonoma boy were honored with public service awards last night at the 66th Petaluma Chamber of Commerce annual dinner.

Irene Sasso received the "woman of the year" award for her community activities serving schools and families in need. Mrs. Sasso annually leads the Christmas Cheer Program which delivers food, clothing and toys to needy families.

Ace Felder, a sixth grade student, received the "young man of the year" award for his efforts in collecting Betty Crocker coupons. Felder collected 800,000 coupons to buy a kidney machine for Sonoma County and distributed more than a million coupons to other cities in the Bay Area.

New chamber officers were formally installed at the dinner and outgoing president Arthur L. Lafranchi received a plaque. Kent Brandley, Petaluma Argus-Courier reporter, received the honest reporting award for 1971.

China's Table Tennis Stars Put On Show

UNITED NATIONS (UPI)—Suits and ties made way for sneakers, shorts and T-shirts at the United Nations Wednesday night when China's touring table tennis stars put on exhibition matches before 500 persons crowded into the Trusteeship Council chambers.

The unprecedented event brought cheers and applause from spectators who paid from $5 to $50 per ticket to watch the matches. The audience, crowded around a makeshift stage that prompted mild complaints from one of the Chinese players, included U.S. Ambassador and Mrs. George Bush, Chinese Ambassador Huang Hua, U. N. Secretary General Kurt Waldheim and other U.N. diplomats and staff members.

The Chinese, whose national sport is table tennis, are the world champions and it was no surprise that they won both individual matches. Lon Hsiuying defeated Marguerite Burnett of Guyana, a member of the U.N. team, 21-14 in the ladies' match. George Braithwaite, star of the U.N. team who works in the conference services publishing division was beaten 21-18 by Ho Tsu-pin.

It was the Chinese playing each other that brought the most applause. Several spectators leapt from their seats in shouts of admiration during exhibitions by championship women's doubles players and two men's singles matches.

The entire performance, with the visitors in red T-shirts and dark shorts and the U.N. team dressed in blue, lasted only about an hour.

During a preliminary tour of the building, one of the players talked briefly through an interpreter to C. V. Narasimhan, U.N. undersecretary general. Narasimhan said later: "He said the court was too small. I told him it was the best we could do. He was willing to make the best of the situation."

President Of Stanford Fires Off Viet Letter

STANFORD (UPI) —Stanford University president Richard W. Lyman has sent a letter to President Nixon protesting the bombing of North Vietnam.

Lyman, speaking as a private citizen, said Wednesday that "the most charitable explanation of the return to bombing of North Vietnam is fear for the safety of American soldiers in the south in the event of South Vietnamese collapse.

"The only way that we are going to bring such fear to an end is to withdraw those troops immediately. At present, they constitute hostages for the safety of the Thieu regime."

Lyman, a historian, said history shows that massive bombing "does not provide a conclusive weapon militarily, and it tends to reinforce the will-to-win of the enemy against whom it is practiced.

Truck Missing From Larkspur

Larkspur police have reported the theft of a rental truck by a San Rafael man.

According to reports, Robert Melvel Hawkins of 420 Canal Street, San Rafael, rented a 16-foot van April 11 from Ken's U-Haul at 2060 Redwood Highway, Larkspur, saying he would return it the 14th.

After waiting five extra days, Kenneth S. Garrick, manager of the rental agency, reported the truck stolen to police yesterday. A check of Hawkins' address revealed he had moved, and the business where he said he worked was closed, police said.

Pumping Station Nearly Complete

The new pumping station on Francisco Boulevard will be completed "within two weeks," the San Rafael Sanitation District board was told last night.

District Administrator Norris M. Rawles told the board the facility, located near Grand Avenue, "is 99 per cent complete." The $496,000 project was begun in February 1971 when a contract was awarded Clearwater Hydromech Corp. of Burlingame.

The new station is to replace another which was displaced by work on Highway 101.

The board also directed Rawles to prepare plans for architectural improvements of the Loch Lomond pump station on South San Pedro Road near the Loch Lomond subdivision, Rawles reported.

WORD-A-DAY

German Club Pans Benefit Car Wash

The event will run from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m.

New Antismog Devices Standards Are Adopted

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI)— The California Air Resources Board today adopted minimum standards for new antismog devices which motorists will be required to install on 1966-1970 cars by February of 1974.

The devices, which are not yet on the market, will reduce the emission of oxides of nitrogen—one of the two components of photochemical smog—by at least 20 per cent in small cars and 30 per cent in large ones.

Four manufacturers indicated they would submit applications for approval of devices meeting the smog reduction standards and a $35 installed-cost limit. Representatives of the big four auto makers said they were not going to submit proposals.

When the devices are finally approved by the board after testing, the owners of five million 1966-70 vehicles will be required to have them installed prior to registration in 1974.

Dr. A. J. Haagen-Smit, Air Resources Board chairman, said the reductions were aimed at getting emissions of nitrogen oxides back to the level of pre-1966 cars without smog-control devices.

"The 1966-70 cars already have systems which control hydrocarbons and carbon monoxide," he said. "Auto manufacturers accomplished this by leaning the air-fuel ration and improving combustion within the engine.

"Consequently, the oxides of nitrogen emissions were increased by approximately 50 per cent.

He noted that emissions of hydrocarbons and of oxides of nitrogen are the two pollutants which cause photochemical smog.

Haagen-Smit wanted higher control standards set than those approved by the board. He said nitrogen oxide emissions averaged 1,020 parts per million in pre-1966 cars and rose to 1,500 parts per million in 1966-70 models. Controls went into effect with 1971 models.

Spokesmen for General Motors and Air Quality Products, the two firms with anti-nitrogen oxide devices approved for 1955-65 cars, said they were not submitting applications for devices on 1966-70 models. Both warned that some of the proposed devices could result in exhaust valve burning and urged tests of that possibility.

In opening remarks to the board, Haagen-Smit said smog control devices for used cars were approved with mixed feelings.

"Although the control systems will be beneficial in decreasing smog, they probably will be the subject of considerable complaint from motorists, both for real and imagined reasons," he said.

PIO Assistant Will Give College Talk

Paul Brand, assistant public information officer of the Bay Area Air Pollution Control District, will speak on methods of reducing air pollutants at 4 p.m. Monday in Darwin Hall at Sonoma State College.

Brand will appear as part of the college's "What Physicists Do" series. He has been with the district since 1962 and will discuss job opportunities for scientists in the air pollution control field.

BEAUTICIAN JIMIDENE Randall of San Rafael applies semipermanent false eyelashes on Susan Sanders of Terra Linda. With the customer in a reclining position the false lashes can be applied in less than a hour's time and will last three to four weeks, depending on the life of the real lash to which they are attached.

Eyelash Implant Painless

By JOAN LISETOR

Pity the men who suffer the agonies described by Sen. William Proxmire, who is undergoing treatment for hair transplants. For women with hirsute vanities there are semipermanent false eyelashes, that can be applied painlessly in less than an hour.

Jimidene Randall, a Marin County beautician, trained to apply the lashes, said they last from three to four weeks.

"They are permanently attached to your lashes by a hypo-allergenic adhesive," she explained. "The reason they do not last forever is that your own lashes fall out, which most people do not realize."

MRS. RANDALL said she can apply the lashes in less than an hour's time if the customer is cooperative.

"With one customer it took me much longer because she asked me to hand her the mirror with every other lash," she said. Another customer falls asleep with her eyes open which speeds up the application considerably.

Time is also determined by the number of lashes desired. Mrs. Randall recommends between 30 and 60, depending on how thick the customer wants them.

"We can alternate between short and long, light and dark and give either a very natural or an artificial look," she said. "I prefer them to sets of false eyelashes because they can give a custom look, which depends on the shape of the eye."

AFTER THE original set is applied fill-ins are available when necessary, the beautician said. As for price, she said, it is less expensive than buying good false eyelashes when figured over a year's time.

And isn't it nice not to have to leave your false eyelashes on the nightstand overnight?

PREPARING TO SPIN

Ginny Lancaster of Santa Rosa (right) demonstrated the ancient art of spinning yarn by hand Tuesday at the San Rafael Library. She guided 5-year-old Jeffrey Anderson as he placed the wool, which was sheared from the lamb, washed and picked, on a carder. The carder makes the wool uniform so that when it is put on the shaft of a spinner, as the one in Miss Lancaster's left hand, it can be spun into yarn. Today Miss Lancaster demonstrated the art of Japanese ink painting for children as a part of the library's observance of National Library Week.

Drive To Improve Animal Care Can Be Helped By Teen-Ager

DEAR HELEN AND SUE:

I went to our animal shelter to look for a missing dog that belonged to a friend. He wasn't there, so I thought I'd take her home a pretty, friendly puppy. The lady in charge said, "That will be $7.00 plus $4.00 for distemper shots."

I then asked her how much it would cost if my friend found her own dog at the shelter and wanted him back. Only a few dollars less!

This dog got out of her back yard because the electric meter man left the gate open, which is the city's fault. Yet the city pound is charging her for another dog — or maybe her own, if they catch him!

I pointed this out and said I could go as high as $1.50 (all I had) for the puppy, but the lady turned me down. So maybe that poor puppy was gassed, because a lot of people don't have $11.00 to spend for a pet.

Sure, the city has to raise money for food and shelter (and the dog-catcher's salary and the gas chamber), but if they'd charge less, maybe they could make more because more people would buy (or reclaim) pets.

Another thing I learned: if you want a cat from the shelter, it has to be "fixed" first and that costs up to $20 for a female. This, with the shot for distemper makes it an awfully expensive animal. I just cried, seeing all those animals waiting to die.

But what can a teen-ager do about it? — SOFT-HEARTED AND SLIM-PURSED

DEAR SHASP:

Your pound has higher-than-average fees. And a teen-ager CAN do something about it, if she gets enough adults and young people interested. A good start is a letter-to-the-editor of your local newspaper. Once published, it will bring many supporters —and perhaps a campaign to divert more tax money toward animal care. — HELEN

P.S. But don't expect EVERYONE on your side. People who vote down school improvements in fear of higher taxes won't, for example, favor more tax money "going to the dogs." — H.

DEAR SOFT HEARTED:

I'm with you. If homeless animals could be "bought" cheap, and "fixed" for maybe half price, a lot of them might live —and it wouldn't cost the taxpayers enough to hurt.

Also, it's kind of like asking ransom when the pound truck picks up an animal, then charges the owner for his return, especially when a city employee leaves the gate open!

Maybe you should mention "dognaping" in your letter-to-the-editor. After all, police don't hold lost kids for a payoff. — SUE

NOTE FROM HELEN:. . .But if a child constantly turns up "lost," police can charge parents with neglect. How about giving animal owners one free "warning," then fining them if their pets are picked up again? — H.

DEAR RAP:

You are so right: a child these days isn't crushed when he discovers he had "premature parents." So why do parents make such a big thing about their wedding date?

I came across my parents' (hidden) wedding license when I was 16. They were married when I was four months old. I wasn't shocked. In fact, I'd heard little hints from relatives. But I wish my folks had told me. It's kind of rough, having to tell THEM you know what they think is a "shameful" secret; and then trying to show them you don't think it is.

They were afraid that if I found out I might put myself down for being illegitimate — or follow in their footsteps. Don't they realize I'M ME, with my own standards — and I'm very proud of THEM? — NO BIG THING

Be our guest in the White House

You will know as much as anyone about what goes on in the White House and in the Presidency by the simple act of reading the I-J. (Only the President and intimates will know more).

UPI
A TEAM REPORT

For the I-J, through its United Press International reporters, is virtually "in residence" as much as the President. Which makes you our welcome guest to the White House.

Our reporters are constantly alert to staff and cabinet meetings, to affairs of international import, to the diplomatic front, to the comings and goings which make the White House a world center of significant news. The job is sensitive. It requires a sixth sense to know when news of major concern is about to break. And concern in how to "break" it accurately and without bias.

Be our guest and stay as long as you like. Our columns lead right to the White House.

This is Eugene V. Risher, another member of the UPI team assigned to cover President Nixon. You'll be hearing from him.

Parents of the bride are Mr. and Mrs. Chester K. Wood of San Rafael, and the bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Casassa, also of San Rafael.

Matron of honor for her sister was Mrs. Keith Stothers of San Jose, and the bridegroom's sister, Donna Casassa; Dianne Lee; and Vicki Sturiale, all of San Rafael, were the bridesmaids.

Gary Casassa was his brother's best man, and guests were ushered to their seats by Clyde Faus of Santa Rosa and Wayne Magliulo anld Louis Gazzoli, both of San Rafael.

The newlyweds will live in San Rafael following a wedding trip to Acapulco, Mexico.

The bride was graduated from San Rafael High School and attended College of Marin. She is employed by California Blue Shield in Fairfax. Chester K. Wood III of Walnut Creek is her brother.

The bridegroom was also graduated from San Rafael High School and also attended College of Marin. He is employed by Marin Cleaners in San Rafael. Lucille Brown of San Rafael is his grandmother.

BIRTHDAY QUIZ

By GORDON B. GREB

Try this quiz on the April 20 58th birthday of Lionel Hampton (1914), jazz musician.

T F 1. Born at Louisville, Kentucky, Lionel grew up in Chicago, where he started out as a drummer in a small amateur band.

T F 2. Graduating to name outfits (like Les Hite and Paul Howard), he took up the vibraphone and started fronting his own band in the early 30's.

T F 3. Spike Jones heard him running a stick across a washboard in Los Angeles and immediately signed him up to play "Der Fuehrer's Face."

T F 4. The first musician to play genuine jazz as a vibraharpist, Lionel Hampton still gets night club engagements for his Big Band sound despite trends to other music.

ANSWERS

1. TRUE — Lionel first played with the "Chicago Defender" Boys' Band.
2. TRUE He was one of the first to jive with Louis Armstrong.
3. FALSE — Benny Goodman heard him and signed him up.
4. TRUE — Hampton records on his own label with his wife, Gladys.

HOW TO PLAY

WINNING BRIDGE

By ALFRED SHEINWOLD

Deliberate Overbid Often Pays As Experienced Player Knows

As an experienced player, you know that it often pays to overbid deliberately. Even if the opponents double, you may lose fewer points by going down than the opponents would score by playing the hand themselves. The deliberate overbid, or sacrifice bid is most useful when you anticipate what the opponents are going to bid and make the sacrifice in advance.

Opening lead — ♠ 4

NO COMPLAINTS

South has no complaints about the final contract. He would rather play five clubs doubled than allow East to play four spades. At five clubs, South is down one. He must lose one spade, one heart and one diamond.

At four spades East would lose one heart and two diamonds. East would be better off making the game and rubber than collecting a mere 100 points from South.

SHOULD NOT WAIT

North should bid five clubs without waiting to be pushed there. South's bid of four clubs announces a very long club suit and no defense against the opponents. North should be doubtful about his ace of clubs and can hardly expect to win more than one diamond trick.

North knows that he will sacrifice at five clubs if he is forced to do so — and it is a cinch that four clubs will not be the final contract. Therefore nothing is gained by passing at four clubs.

EAST TOO HIGH

If North bids five clubs, East must bid five hearts. West has to show a preference for spades, and now East is too high. If North has the nerve to pass five hearts (as he should), he will wind up with a plus score instead of a minus.

Here is a good rule for sacrifice bidding: When you know in advance how high you are willing to bid as a sacrifice, bid it as soon as possible. Make the opponents guess before they have exchanged enough information to know their best course.

Court Orders Secret Papers

LOS ANGELES (UPI) —The government will have to supply the defense with copies of secret documents it intends to use in the trial of Daniel Ellsberg in the Pentagon Papers case.

U.S. District Court Judge William M. Byrne ruled Tuesday that the documents must be turned over to attorneys for Ellsberg and his codefendant, Anthony J. Russo.

However, Byrne set strict rules to protect the classified nature of the documents and ordered the defense to keep a list of those seeing the material.

Book On Recycling Is All Recycled

EAST LANSING, Mich. (UPI) — A new book on ecology — "Environmental Quality: Now or Never" — advised its readers to recycle waste materials. It practices what it preaches.

The book is the first text in the nation to be published on 100 per cent recycled paper, says its editor, Dr. Charles L. San Clemente, professor of microbiology and public health at Michigan State University. The 320-page paperback is a collection of lectures by various persons on the general topic of the environment.

Sierra Club To Continue Disney Fight

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI)—Sierra Club attorneys, interpreting the Supreme Court's rejection of the club's fight to prevent Mineral King Valley in tha Sierras from becoming a $35 million "Alpine Disneyland" as an invitation to try again, today looked for new approaches.

The conservationist group's three-year legal battle to block development of the old mining area near Sequoia National Park ended with "shock and dismay" Wednesday when the U.S. Supreme Court barred the club from further litigation.

A Disney spokesman said work would resume "in a year, perhaps longer" on the recreational development expected to draw a million visitors annually.

Sierra Club President Raymond J. Sherwin, a Solano County Superior Court Judge, labelled the Supreme Court decision a "grievous blow to Democracy."

"I'm sure this decision won't be the end of this matter," Sherwin said.

The 4-3 ruling held that the club was not entitled to continue federal court action because it did not show that the club itself would suffer economic or other injury from the Mineral King project.

Sierra Club executive secretary Michael McCloskey called the decision "muddled" and "confusing" and said attorneys for the club would meet in a special session to discuss further action.

McCloskey said the decision against the 78,000-member club was "by no means the end of the line."

The wording of the court opinion, he said, "virtually gives us an invitation to refile our pleadings after amending them to prove that our aesthetic interest in Mineral King would indeed suffer if Disney is allowed to build its resort complex with the bulldozing, blasting and general destruction that would inevitably follow."

The Disney development would turn the high mountain valley into one of the largest skiing and recreation areas in the West.

Disney Enterprises was granted a permit to prepare a master plan for the area by the U.S. Forest Service in 1965. The Sierra Club began its opposition to the project at public hearings and finally filed a federal court suit in June, 1969.

Douglas R. Leisz, a U.S. Forest Service official, said, "The Forest Service believes that development of this area for year-long family-type recreation will meet a very urgent need in an outstanding setting."

Disney developers said the area could be opened for all to enjoy without harm to the natural environment. Tulare County residents view the project as a windfall for jobs.

Theater Patrons To Meet Tonight

Movie Goers of Marin, a newly organized group of theater patrons, will hold its first public meeting at 7:30 p.m. today in the Corte Madera Library, according to Chris Clemens, MGM spokesman.

He said the group will report the results of its just-completed survey of movie patrons' attitudes about the films offered and box office process in Marin. "Preliminary results show great dissatisfaction," Clemens said.

Attending film fans will be served popcorn and other theater refreshments, he added.

First Victory For Wage Control Policy

BALTIMORE (UPI)—President Nixon's wage control system won its first court test Wednesday.

U.S. District Judge C. Stanley Blair ruled Wednesday that the A&P supermarkets and a Baltimore meatcutters local must abide by a federal pay board ruling and cut wage increases back to the 7 per cent approved by the board.

Following a nine-day strike beginning Nov. 14, the day the wage-price freeze ended, A&P and the Amalgamated Meatcutters and Butchers Workmen of North America, AFL-CIO, agreed to a 16 month contract for 77 workers in the company's plant here.

The contract called for a 22 per cent pay increase for the butchers. The pay board reduced the figure to 7 per cent, slightly higher than the 5.5 per cent increase ceiling set for pay hikes.

Blair ruled that though 7 per cent was above the limit, the pay board ruling is binding and "must be adhered to."

The judge, in an 18-page opinion, also imposed the maximum $2,500 fine on tha union and the company for violating the pay board ruling. Blair said the two were "equally at fault" in not observing the ruling.

"This is the first decision and we consider it of extra importance," said U.S. attorney George Beall, who prosecuted the case.

Blair, a longtime political associate of Vice President Spiro T. Agnew, ran unsuccessfully for governor of Maryland in 1970 on the Republican ticket before his appointment to the bench. He served as Maryland secretary of state while Agnew was governor.

Drake High Festival Set Tomorrow

Sir Francis Drake High School's annual creative arts festival — featuring art, music, drama, food and crafts — will be held tomorrow, Saturday and Sunday.

Art work, sculpture and jewelry will be displayed in the school's music building on Sir Francis Drake Boulevard beginning at 7 p.m. tomorrow and Saturday and 1:30 p.m. Sunday.

The music and drama schedule is:

Tomorrow: beginning at 8 p.m., Drake Jazz Band, directed by J. Perry Smith; "Theater Games," directed by Dorothy Desrosiers; and "I'm Hubert," a one-act play directed by Priscilla Guastavino.

Saturday: beginning at 8 p.m., Drake Concert Band, directed by Smith; Drake A Cappella Choir, directed by Darrell Parker; "La Sache Bleue," an original dance-mime directed by Wendy Rice, and "Hear the Sound of My Feet Walking, Drown the Sound of My Voice Talking," a play based on the comic strip, "Odd Bodkins," directed by Michael Faw.

Sunday: beginning at 2:30 p.m., Drake Jazz Band, and "Hear the Sound of My Feet Walking, Drown the Sound of My Voice Talking."

Washington Crime Halved, Nixon Says

WASHINGTON (UPI) —President Nixon says the crime rate in Washington D. C. has been cut in half during the last three years, making it "one of the safest cities in the country."

Nixon made the comment Wednesday in a ceremony congratulating Police Chief Jerry V. Wilson. Wilson in turn said the credit belongs to Nixon for his backing and to other steps, including brighter street lights, court reorganization and doubling the number of prosecutors.

First Lady Dons Bonnet For Tobacco Land Outing

ROBERSONVILLE, N.C (UPI)—Pat Nixon, wearing a bright bonnet and accompanied by sheepish Secret Service agents in stovepipe hats, rode down tobacco road Wednesday and straight into the hearts of the gingham and overall set.

Two high school bands played slightly off key as America's first lady entered the small town as gust of honor of its centennial celebration

Everybody for miles around the tobacco flatlands—upwards of 8,000 persons—lined the two-block long downtown area for the occasion

The street was draped with bunting. Small children waved American flags.

"To come down a flag-lined street like that makes one proud to be an American," said the President's wife in her response to the greeting.

The crowd broke into cheers, whistles and applause. And that was the reaction to just about every statement Mrs. Nixon made after that.

But she kept her remarks away from such things as elections and controversial issues. She was out to build good will for a Republican president in traditionally Democratic country. Not even the Democrats would deny the success of her venture.

Robersonville, a crossroads community whose main street ends in a row of tobacco warehouses and whose business district is bisected by a lone pair of railroad tracks and whose environs include miles and miles of flat peanut fields, had never seen so many people at one time.

The effect of the packed throng, which had sweltered for several hours under a scorching sun and windless sky before the guest of honor arrived, could be seen in several places.

It was impossible to find a soft drink machine that hadn't sold out by late afternoon and the lone pay telephone near the downtown area, besieged by a horde of newsmen that included a team from the French television network, had finally given up.

All it would emit was the plaintive bleep-bleep of a busy signal—before a call could be placed

Many townsfolk, proudly admiring polaroid prints of them shaking hands with the President's wife, felt that it had all been worth it

Mrs. Nixon did too

'I wouldn't have missed all the fun for anything,' she said

Navy Plans Air Pollution Aid

ALAMEDA (UPI) — The Alameda Naval Air Station Monday announced plans for construction of a $2.9 million industrial waste treatment system to avoid pollution of San Francisco Bay.

The Navy said construction of the plant was expected to begin in about two months and was scheduled for completion by mid-1973.

The Navy said it would attempt to award a contract for the first phase of construction to a qualified small business from a minority or disadvantaged group.

Mrs. Kennedy: Race Too Risky

NEW YORK (UPI)—Mrs. Joseph P. Kennedy believes it would be too risky for her son, Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass., to seek the 1972 presidential nomination.

"I think there's too much risk now...If he wants to, it would be much better to run a little later," she said in an article of May's Ladies' Home Journal.

"I'm sure it is Teddy's present intention not to run. I think it is a wise intention," she said.

The mother of the late President John F. Kennedy and Sen. Robert F. Kennedy, said her surviving son has "certain obligations to Ethel's (Mrs. Robert Kennedy) children and, of course, to his own children."

Guaraldi Benefit Tomorrow Night

A benefit piano concert by Vincent A. Guaraldi, composer of the music for the Charlie Brown television series and "Cast Your Fate To the Wind" will be given at 8 p.m. tomorrow at the Golden Semi Siminary in Strawberry.

Proceeds of the concert will be used for sending the sixth grade class of Donald A. Kline, nicknamed "Super Strawberries" to Yosemite National Park for an ecology study trip on May 24.

Art Exhibit

Oils and acrylics by George R. Johansen, Fairfax artist of the Impressionist Realism School, are on display now at Patrick Brothers art store at 500 San Anselmo Avenue, San Anselmo. The show will continue for about a month.

There Oughta Be Law — But Not This One

One of the most popular cartoons on the Independent-Journal's comic page takes its name from the famliar remark, "There oughta be a law."

We have all said it, when something annoyed us, "There oughta be a law." Usually we don't intend anyone to take this literally; it is said in jest.

THERE ARE SOME people, however, who believe that "there oughta be a law" to prohibit anything with which they disagree, to curb anything they find annoying — and, conversely, to legalize anything they happen to like. All too often, these single-minded folk get up a campaign, influence some legislators, and get their pet phobias put into the law books.

An example of this is Proposition 9, which will be on the June primary ballot, titled "Environment Initiative."

Proposition 9 would write into state law a host of restrictions on things its sponsors believe pollute the air, water and land — especially the air.

It would, in addition, provide that the Legislature could not change any of the rules it enacted, except to make them tougher.

PROPOSITION 9 — like many of the laws that get on the books — is intended for a very worthwile purpose. It is, as its title suggests, intended to preserve the environment.

But — again like many laws that get on the books — it is poorly thought out and might very well have the opposite effect from that intended.

Its restrictions on what may be emitted into the atmosphere, for instance, are based on data that may be found misleading — for the very good reason that the study of air pollution is making rapid strides and what were deemed the most objectionable pollutants a few years ago (such as smoke from that backyard bonfire) have been found to be of little importance. Other development certainly will follow by the Jan. 1, 1975, effective date of the proposed new law. Some of them may run counter to the provisions of Proposition 9.

Again, Proposition 9 would impose a five-year ban on construction of nuclear power plants. But there will be need for more electric power. Some other types of plants produce more air and water pollution than do nuclear plants, so instead of protecting the environment, this restriction might result in greater pollution.

The proposition also goes clear beyond reason in its "conflict of interest" provisions, which could be interpreted as barring anyone who invested in mutual funds that might include some public utility stock from working for a pollution control board or serving on any such board.

THE FACT of the matter is that there are very tough laws about pollution on books in California right now. Some of them need to be more strictly enforced. But Proposition 9 would do nothing about that.

Maybe "there oughta be a law" against initiative measures that gum up the legislative process.

Walk Shows Youth Willing, Casts Doubt On Organizers

By EARL G. WATERS

In what was hailed as a pilgrimage to demonstrate concern for the needy, more than 12,000 youngsters traipsed the capital city on a recent Saturday in a 29-mile hike.

The event was termed a "Walk for Development" and was sponsored by local organizations and the American Freedom From Hunger Foundation. Funds raised were to be apportioned to some local do-good efforts and to programs to feed persons in foreign lands.

The basis for collecting the money was by having youngsters solicit adults as sponsors. These sponsors agreed to donate so much for each mile the sponsored child hiked. Upon completion of the hike or a portion thereof, the walker must return to his sponsore to collect.

The same type of program has been and will be undertaken in other communities.

THE PARTICIPATION in this event by so huge a turnout of school children speaks well of the kids. In fact it was an amazing exhibition of the selflessness and willingness of today's youth to participate in something that will benefit others.

But it does raise a question as to the wisdom of the elders who dreamed up this method of endeavor to achieve a purpose. And it points up the lack of constructive work opportunities open to school children today.

Those of another era sold newspapers, mowed lawns, and did a variety of odd jobs in the neighborhood to earn money for themselves or for a cause and to generally keep occupied.

ALL THIS has changed. Laws, generated by school officials who seem to have come to the view that they know more about what is good for Johnny than the parents, have been enacted to prevent the school kids from working. The schoolagers cannot work unless they obtain work permits from the school authorities. Laws are so restrictive those who could give the children odd jobs don't want to be bothered with the red tape.

The youthful enterprisers find obstacles at every turn and become discouraged from trying. The elders sit back and complain about the youth of today while the young bend to mischief.

That these energies can be turned to good was clearly shown by the march. But the question remains as to why those charged with giving the young direction could not channel such tremendous effort to things more constructive and productive than an aimless walk.

THERE PROBABLY isn't a householder in the community who would not have been willing to find some odd job about the house or yard for the kids to do. The money so raised would have been earned, not donated. It would have had the added benefit of making the children feel they were doing something productive.

And other efforts such as collecting bottles, cans and other substances for recycling would have brought earned dollars. They would also not only have accomplished the benefit of raising money for the hungry but would have made the additional contribution to the betterment of society by assisting in a general community clean-up.

Demonstrations have become a plague while the idea of hard work to produce a result gets less and less encouragement.

'Jawboning' Advocated To End Vietnam War

When I was a small boy, dad would read one chapter of the Bible every night before bedtime. One chapter told of a fellow that killed 1,500 guys with the jawbone of an ass. Now with all the asses in the government there's enough jawbones to arm all of South Vietnam and get this assinine thing over with in 48 hours.

Terwilliger Trips Charming Experiences

Our young family has been "Tripping With Terwilliger" on Saturday mornings for the first time since our arrival in Marin just one short year ago.

What a charming, enlightening experience these Saturdays have been! We loved Marin so much we moved ourselves here from Birmingham, Mich. — but now we're hooked for life to the causes of preserving and giving back to Marin all the love it has given us.

Mrs. Terwilliger's charm and knowledge should be made a prerequisite for entering Marin even on a visit — then perhaps this beautiful county will stay this way for the years and generations to come.

No one would ever try to fill a salt water marsh for apartments again — their eyes would be opened to the beauty of this one piece of land left on Canal Street's bay end. One would gaze on our state parks and forest as gifts to be cherished and enjoyed.

Mrs. Terwilliger can't do it alone, but her love is "catching" and I can't help but encourage everyone that can to be open for this great happening in Marin available through the Boyd Museum.

Fulltime Supervisor Held Not Necessary

I question the validity of the battle cry being used in the second supervisorial district; if we need a full-time representative, let's vote on that issue separately.

Mr. Peter Arrigoni has been on the job beyond the call of duty and always responsive to suggestions and differences on opinions brought to him by his constituents. I speak from experience in commending him on his initiative and good sense in handling the tasks of amelioration of catastrophes which stemmed from the previous office holder. I hope we will not seek chance carelessly when we already have a devoted public servant in our ranks. Crisis politics grows up from a field of weeds; constituent input guarantees representative government; instead of a full-time supervisor, let us look forward to capable constituents with constructive concern. Supervisor Arrigoni will listen.

No, Des Moines Didn't Go Down The River

I was concerned to read on your Editorial Page of April 13 that 20 years ago the whole of Iowa must have been inundated by the Mississippi as its flood crest moved across Iowa to Omaha, Neb.

I was especially concerned to learn of this since I was in Des Moines at the time and wasn't aware that we were underwater.

Could you tell me — did Des Moines wash down the Des Moines or Racoon River? I'd like to know where I ended up.

Only Thing Unnecessary Is An Apology

To the reporter who covered the recent shooting in San Rafael ("Readers," Apr. 18), I'm sure "many people" feel the only thing "unnecessary" is an apology! The writer was responsible for doing his job, not for the facts and events that led Don Oliver to shoot a police officer. The bullet that hit Lieutenant Green could have been a fatal shot and then the story of his life would have appeared in the paper along with a picture of him lying dead in the street.

The article told of the tragedy that often results from drug use and the public should be made aware of this whenever possible. This story and picture may have been offensive to some but crime and the killing of policemen and all innocent victims is offensive to us all.

Significant Errors In IRS Scrutiny Story

In your article (April 18) on the far-reaching prying into private bank transactions by the IRS, to start July 1, there were two misprints that were significant and they were so accurately spelled I am wondering about how accidental they were. The first referred to "out of county" transactions. Surely this meant "out of country." The second was about credit card use in foreign companies." Again I'm sure this meant "foreign countries."

One of the major reasons for this new set of restrictions is, ultimately, to restrict private citizens from transferring their assets out of this country when they are afraid of the monetary stability of the country. The above two errors mask this facet of the story pretty well.

Of course the rules don't apply to big business. Subsequent study, reported in the Wall Street Journal and other financial paper, showed that the majority of the "speculators" Nixon blamed for pressure on the dollar last August when he devalued the dollar) were not sly sharpies but the big international American companies who were shifting their assets to foreign currencies to protect their assets.

Perhaps there's nothing the little guy can do about itt. We'll end up like many foreign nationals who can't take a holiday outside their country because their government won't allow them but a tiny amount of their money to be spent outside their country. Traveling Englishmen are pretty smart — most have an outside bank account (by foresight or other) from which they can draw when traveling outside England. Perhaps, before it is too late, we should all set up a savings account or similar fund in a Canadian or English bank to use when the same happens here — as seems to be the direction of things.

Believer In Truth, Constitution Battles 'Executive Privilege'

WASHINGTON — As the foremost constitutional lawyer in the Senate, Sam Ervin of North Carolina is a good man to have on your side. It follows, as the inquiry into Richard Kleindienst and ITT is demonstrating, that he is a formidable adversary.

Ervin says that unless the White House relents and allows Peter Flanigan to testify on the role he played in the ITT antitrust settlement, he will block Kleindienst's confirmation to be attorney general. If the judiciary committee simply closes the hearings with no resolution of the Flanigan matter, he will carry the fight to the Senate floor. And there he seems to be rapidly gaining recruits.

THE CRAGGY, stern-voiced North Carolinian has gone before the Supreme Court to challenge the administration on another constitutional issue. He believes beyond mere lip service, profoundly and without equivocation, in the freedoms guaranteed by the Constitution and in the independence of the three separate and coordinate branches of government.

Ervin spoke for a committee of senators, both Republicans and Democrats, as friend of the court in the case of Sen. Mike Gravel of Alaska. While the administration holds to the right to keep an executive agent (Flanigan) from speaking out, the Department of Justice tried to force a Gravel aide to talk to a federal grand jury on the charge that the senator had violated national security by releasing and bringing about the publication of a greatly amplified version of the Pentagon Papers.

A federal district court and later a court of appeals upheld the right of both Gravel and his aide to refuse to testify. The appeal to the Supreme Court is on the publication of the papers as read by Gravel into the record of his subcommittee.

In a brief filed with the Supreme Court, Ervin cited Article I, Section 6, of the Constitution, which declares that "for any speech or debate in either house, they (members of Congress) shall not be questioned in any other place." While making it plain that they have no brief for Gravel, the senators intend to protect the independence of the Senate. If any discipline is due Gravel for reading the secret papers into the record, the Senate itself must administer that discipline.

THAT ERVIN should be a Daniel come to judgment in the Kleindienst-ITT affair is hardly surprising. Along with his respect for the Constitution goes a healthy regard for the common or garden variety of honesty. The mishmash of half-truths, lies skirting on perjury and just plain obfuscation developed during the hearings persuaded a normally conservative southerner that something was very wrong and only the testimony of Flanigan as to his part in the settlement could sort truth from falsehood.

The performance of ITT's executives has shocked not only conservative in the Senate but the business community. W. R. Merriam, head of the company's Washington office, appeared to be openly contemptuous of the judiciary committee in the course of his meandering testimony covering when he would lie and when he would not. The company's chief executive, Harold Geneen, came off rather better, but only because he pleaded ignorance of much of what had gone on.

Corporate executives are privately wringing their hands over the damage they believe the ITT affair has done to the corporate image. The maladroit way the company's public relations have been handled — above all, the buffoonery surrounding the hapless Dita Beard — seemed an invitation to committee wrath. All the old prejudice against the business giants out of the early New Deal days has been aroused, countering the long campaign of propaganda aimed at picturing the beneficence of the free enterprise system.

Nomination Of Kennedy Not Wanted, Yet Looms Likely

A lot of people are doing their utmost to head off another Nixon-Kennedy confrontation in an American presidential election including certainly one and probably both of the men most concerned.

Edward M. Kennedy is the Democrat Richard M. Nixon is least eager to run against —for obvious reasons. Any Kennedy runs a tough campaign. Kennedys always play to win. And they play hard.

As for the senator from Massachusetts. Why run in 1972 against another man who plays to win, and also plays hard and has the enormous advantage of being able to run from the White House as incumbent President, when all this kind of opposition would disappear in another four years?

The only rational reason why the senator would prefer a bruising campaign with uncertain outcome in 1972 against an easy campaign against some unknown in 1976 would be if he really likes a political fight all that much. Would he choose the hardest possible effort? True the Irish are sometimes like that. But considering the changes that four years can make to his advantage it seems reasonable to think that Senator Kennedy actually would prefer to wait another four years, as he consistently insists he does to all who sound him out on the subject.

THEN THERE ARE all the official Democratic Party candidates, from Edmund S. Muskie to George C. Wallace, every one of whom is earnestly and diligently working through the various primaries to get the chance to run against Mr. Nixon.

Just why they want that chance so much is sometimes difficult to understand. No one runs against Mr. Nixon (or a Kennedy) without getting scratched in the process. And the chance that any one of the Democrats in the lineup from Muskie to Wallace could beat Mr. Nixon is not, at least at this phase of the campaign, exciting.

True, it could happen. But it's not something you would put down right now on a list of probabilities.

Nevertheless there is a whole covey of Democrats out there on the hustings reaching for a chance to get into the decisive finals with Mr. Nixon. And who knows? One of them just might make it and thus spare Mr. Kennedy the ordeal of having the Democratic convention virtually force the nomination on him.

WITH MR. NIXON, Mr. Kennedy, and all the other Democrats bent on avoiding if possible a Kennedy draft, one would almost think that so much effort would be rewarded by success. Yet somehow there is a glacier-like quality about the way the political pattern seems to be setting toward precisely what all of these men are trying so diligently to avoid.

Just the latest item which contributes to this movement is a Harris Poll showing Mr. Nixon leading Mr. Muskie by 50-to-37 per cent. Last January the poll showed these two men at 42-42.

IF THE IDEA once gets around among the lower level politicians of the Democratic Party that they are going to lose in 1972 behind anyone but Edward Kennedy, they will stampede for Edward Kennedy. And then he would be in a position of having to accept or look like a man trying to avoid a fight. And that would not be an image easy for a Kennedy to wear.

It may not be inevitable. There are a horde of reasons why the United States would be better without a Nixon-Kennedy contest. But no politician can any longer overlook the steady slide of events in that direction.

Sewer Project Exposes Some Strange Strata In Fifth Avenue

Travelers in the West often pause to gaze with interest on strata exposed by the forces of nature. On mountainsides are seen striations of different kinds of rock, sometimes tipped at odd angles, which silently tell of tremendous earth tremors in bygone ages. At other places, the receding waters of lake or river have left a series of bench marks on the shore which tell their own story of climatic changes over many centuries.

Workers for Kirkwood-Bly, Santa Rosa contractor, have exposed some man-made strata as they cut open Fifth Avenue in San Rafael for replacement of a sewer line.

The City of San Rafael every few years had overlaid the street as cracks and pot-holes showed up in the paving. Each overlay is about two inches thick. But the vertical cuts made for the new sewer line went through about a foot of them.

They're not all alike, either, attesting to different paving materials used at different periods.

LOOKING AT the cuts sent me into a little flight of fancy.

Suppose that at some far future date, a major earth upheaval wipes out the existing surface features of San Rafael (as one almost certainly will do some day).

Suppose that long after that, excavators for whatever kind of structures mankind is using in that day turn up the strange but very regular layers of what is now street overlay.

Can't you just imagine geologists of that far future time puzzling over how the earth's surface got into that strange strata 'way back in the 20th Century A.D.?

They'll probably make a very good circumstantial case for an explanation that is far wide of the mark, too —just as today's scientists probably do when they attempt to explain things far back in geologic time.

GETTING BACK to today, and the sewer projects on Fifth Avenue:

This is part of the $1.5 million sewer replacement project, financed by a bond issue and federal funds, which along with the new pumping station installed last year should mean fewer backups, less flooding, and less pollution entering the Bay in the future.

The whole project, except for sealing and testing, should be completed sometime in October, according to City Engineer Ely Caillouette. The present portion is replacement of an assortment of old sewer lines, some 6-inch and some 4-inch, on Fifth Avenue and F Street with a new, straighter 8-inch line.

Monday (or possibly Friday), the crew will move to another section due for replacement, on Greenfield Avenue at Santa Margarita. That will mean another detour for traffic for a few days.

Doing the work in sections has so far avoided much traffic congestion —though when the work moves to Lincoln Avenue a little later, we can expect plenty. Even that, however, will be more than compensated if the job means there will be no more manhole covers lifted off by bubbling sewage during winter rains.

Paulsen Out Of President Race

The television comedian who insisted he was a serious candidate said he has notified Rhode Island Secretary of State August P. LaFrance that he would be "unable" to run in that state's May 23 primary because of "The restrictions put upon my career and my employment by the Federal Communications Commission throughout the past four months."

Paulsen said the FCC's "equal time" provision kept him from working because television stations would have to make available free time to other candidates.

ART BUCHWALD

Justice's Lawyers Wouldn't Lie —But What Terrible Memories!

WASHINGTON — A 10-year-old boy named Virgil has just written me a letter.

He says: "dear Sir, I notice in the newspapers that several Justice Department attorneys have testified in the ITT case. Sometimes one Justice attorney says one thing and then another Justice attorney says another. Suppose they're lying? Who prosecutes the prosecutors?"

DEAR VIRGIL,

Yours is a very impertinent question which really doesn't deserve an answer. To assume that someone in the Justice Department would tell an untruth makes you no better than a Barrigan brother.

A Justice Department attorney takes an oath that he will never tell a lie — on a Bible. This Bible belongs to the Attorney general, who has taken an oath on a Bible that belongs to the chief justice of the Supreme Court, who has taken an oath on a Bible that belongs to the President of the United States. You can readily see the trouble a Justice Department attorney would be in if he perjured himself on that many Bibles.

What you are confusing is perjury and loss of memory. Several of the Justice Department attorneys have suffered from an inability to remember facts pertinent to the ITT investigation. This is understandable when you realize that most Justice Department attorneys are trained to ask questions, but are very rarely called upon to answer them.

IF YOU SPENT all your life asking, "Where were you on the night of Feb. 12, 1961?" you would be in a heck of a jam if someone suddenly asked you that question.

It is for this reason that under our system Justice Department attorneys in congressional hearings are permitted to "correct" their testimony and "refresh" their memories.

The fact that a Justice Department attorney says one thing in the morning does not preclude him from saying the opposite in the afternoon. And just because one Justice Department attorney says one thing and another Justice Department attorney says another thing does not mean either one of them is lying. It just means they're getting at the truth from opposite directions.

LET ME GIVE you an example. Justice Department attorney Wishbone tells a Senate committee that he's never talked to anyone in the Zigzag Monopoly Co. He goes home that night and his wife reminds him that his brother-in-law is president of the Zigzag Monopoly Co. So he goes back to the committee and says he's just remembered that his brother-in-law is president of the company, but he hasn't seen him in 10 years.

Then he takes a recess break and his secretary tells him he's had 20 meetings with his brother-in-law in the past three months.

So he goes back to the committee and says he would like to correct the record; he did see his brother-in-law, but they never really talked business. That night his brother-in-law calls him and says he's in trouble with the IRS because he's put Wishbone down for 20 business lunches.

So Wishbone goes back to the committee the next day and says he talked business with his brother-in-law, but he did nothing to affect Zigzag Monopoly Co.'s case.

THAT, VIRGIL, is not called perjury — it's called amnesia.

I can assure you that your question about who prosecutes the prosecutors has no validity in Washington. There is no reason to prosecute anyone in the ITT case because everyone is telling the truth; and if you keep writing troublemaking letters like this, I won't be surprised if, when you grow a little older, someone down here doesn't start tapping your phone.

Talk Will Center On Area's Indians

Earl F. Couey, history professor at Sonoma State College, will speak on Indians of Marin and Sonoma County before the Marin County Historical Society at 8 p.m. May 3 at the San Rafael Improvement Club, Fifth and H Streets, San Rafael.

Couey is of mixed Caucasian and American Indian ancestry and his wife is a Mishewal Indian from Sonoma County.

Camps Will Be Explained On Saturday

Free T-shirts and a search for helium-filled balloons will highlight the Young Men's Christian Association summer camp sign-up from 10 a.m. to 1 p.m. Saturday at the headquarters at 241 North San Pedro Road, San Rafael.

Potential campers and parents will be able to get advice from counselors on various camp programs. Each registrant will receive a camp T-shirt, the YMCA has announced.

In addition, 300 balloons will be released. The boy or girl finding the one the farthest away from the headquarters and still in Marin County will receive a free week at a camp.

The program includes 10 weeks of day camp for which buses will pick up the boys and girls 5 to 11 years old and take them to camp headquarters.

Other camp programs available include backpacking for boys 9 to 12 years old on the Stanislaus River; mountain camps for boys and girls 9 to 14 years of age at Camp Loma Mar in the Santa Cruz mountains and at High Sierra Camp Redwoods on Lake Sequoia. Also scheduled are camping trips for junior and senior high school students, including 40 days in Europe to six days on the Smith River.

Further information may be obtained from the headquarters.

School Registration Bill Before Assembly

SACRAMENTO (UPI) —The Assembly Elections and Reapportionment Committee has approved a bill to permit the registration of voters on high school campuses.

The measure by Assemblyman John Vasconcellos, D-San Jose, was sent to the floor Wednesday on an 8-0 vote.

Foster Home Subsidy Increases Supported

The Marin County Juvenile Delinquency Prevention Commission has recommended the county increase its subsidy to foster homes.

According to L. Charles Smith, the commission's executive officer, the commission agreed Tuesday to support such a request next wek by foster parents to the board of supervisors.

Smith said foster parents are not receiving enough to cover costs of rearing their boarders. For example, he said, foster parents of a teen-age boy receive about $130 per month but the actual cost of caring for the youth may be more than $200. per month.

He said the disparity between income and cost may be keeping many families from opening their homes to foster children.

On other matters, Smith said the commission is seeking parents to help run the teen center at Dominican College in San Rafael.

The center, which operates Thursday evenings, was created by the commission at the request of Dominican area residents.

He said the commission also has set May 16 at 4 p.m. for interviewing applicants for two vacant seats on the commission. Those interested in serving may contact Smith at the county probation department.

County Chamber Endorses Sale

The Marin County Chamber of Commerce and Visitors Bureau has endorsed the sale of the San Rafael courthouse square to McKeon Construction Co., of Sacramento, at a reduced price.

McKeon has bid $650,000 for the block, $100,000 below the county's asking price.

In taking the action, the chamber and bureau joins the San Rafael Chamber of Commerce, which has already urged negotiation of the sale "without delay".

Both groups cite esthetic and practical considerations in their statements, noting that the area would be reestablished as a focal point for the downtown area and taxes could be reaped from the property.

ISOLATION BOOTHS?

Less talk, more work seemed to be the message as Corte Madera clerk typist Nancy Urbani found herself walled off yesterday from other town employees by new partitions. Not so, according to Town Mgr. Ronald E. Bartels, who said the idea was to separate department heads from the distraction of the front desk.

Free Rides On BART Suggested

SAN FRAMCISCO (UPI)—A Lafayette business counselor suggests giving everybody free rides on Bay Area Rapid Transit District trains.

He suggested Wednesday that the district would lose money otherwise when it starts operating trains on a 75-mile rail network now under construction in San Francisco, Alameda and Contra Costa counties.

But he said that it could be operated without fares if a half-cent retail sales tax is continued in the district and if revenue is used from new gasoline sales taxes.

Operating free, the system would attract patrons, reduce vehicular congestion and air pollution, he held.

B.R. Stokes, BART's general manager, said the idea would appeal to a great number of persons.

Court Delays Drug Plea Until Monday

Gregory Gerald Nelson, 25, of no known address was arraigned today in Marin Superior Court on a felony charge of possessing a dangerous drug, but a plea was put off until Monday.

Nelson was stopped March 30 bz Mill Valley police, who discovered he was wanted on a traffic warrant. During a search, a substance believed to be amphetamine was found.

Pilot Missing As Barges Hit Dam

CANNELTON, Ind. (UPI)—A string of barges struck an Ohio River dam under construction in a fog and burst into flames early today.

Two of the three barges were loaded with gasoline and diesel fuel. One sank and the other floated downstream.

The pilot, identified as R.W. Griffin, was missing and presumed dead, either from an explosion which may have blown him off the boat pushing the barges, or from drowning.

Three crewmen were injured.

Indications were that strong current from the flooded stream contributed to the accident.

A U.S. Army Corps of Engineers construction inspector on duty at the "Cannelton locks and dam said the boat piloted by Griffin and the three barges were preparing to lock through the dam from the upriver side when the current swept them into the mainstream and into a construction area of the dam.

The barges hit a pier at the dam and broke away from the boat. One barge was empty.

One of the burning barges was lodged against a dam pier. Spokesmen said it may burn for two days. A second burning barge sank near Hawesville, Ky., across the river from Cannelton. The third barge, empty, also was afire and was floating downstream toward Troy.

Three-Faucet City Chucks One Away

COALINGA (UPI) —The three-faucet era officially comes to an end today in this west San Joaquin Valley city which has had to truck in its drinking water for years.

For as long as most residents can remember, every kitchen sink had three water faucets, one for hot water, one for cold and one for drinking water.

The reason was that the area's ground water contains a heavy concentration of minerals —harmless enough to drink but not too tasty.

Thus drinking water was trucked in and run through a separate system resulting in the third spigot.

But thanks to the California-Water Project, the city now has a brand new system utilizing water from the San Luis Dam.

The Chamber of Commerce is commemorating the occasion with a three-day water festival beginning today and running through Saturday.

Guided tours will be conducted to the new water plant 12 miles east of here by means of shuttle bus runs departing every hour throughout the day.

a parade Saturday morning will precede the official dedication which is set for noon.

Tape Deck Stolen

A tape deck valued at $70 was stolen last night from the 1964 sedan ok Robert J. Morris of 24 Seminole Avenue, Corte Madera, while the car was parked in the lot at Greenbrae Lanes, 101 Sir Francis Drake Boulevard, Larkspur police said today.

Melvin Maddocks

Columnist-at-large, Christian Science Monitor News Service

Melvin Maddocks doesn't fit into a neat category. The Monitor knew him first as a copyboy who wrote editorials, then as a literature loving sportswriter.

Topic hopping began early in life. He studied six years of Latin and four years of Greek, then went on to major in American history and literature at Harvard.

After sports, he did his turn as television columnist, part-time music reviewer, and theater and film critic both in Boston and New York. He served for seven years as the Monitor's book editor.

Today all these roles play their parts within his role as columnist-at-large for whom variety is practically the motif. Nor will his writing fit a category. Read it closely and what looked like a sharp dagger turns out to be no more than a feather — a carefully directed feather. There is a philosophy under the wit.

What distinguishes Maddocks as a columnist? An awareness of the latest trends and fads. A feeling for what the next wave will be. But also a distrust of too sudden enthusiasms. He wants to alert us before we swallow the fly in the ointment.

Mr. Maddocks' column is supplied exclusively to the Independent-Journal by The Christian Science News Service.

Read him carefully - too good to miss!

GIANT OUT — San Francisco Giant Ken Henderson (15) was tagged out at second base by San Diego's Derrel Thomas on an attempted steal in the third inning last night at San Diego. San Diego's Enzo Hernandez backed up the play. The Giants lost, 4-3.

Giants Mauled By Jeter

San Diego (UPI)—John Jeter is hurting the San Francisco Giants—in more ways than one.

The new center fielder of the San Diego Padres was involved in a collision with Willie McCovey Tuesday night that left the Giant first baseman with a broken arm.

Wednesday night the 27-year-old Jeter, acquired in a trade late last season from the Pittsburgh Pirates, cracked a two-run homer with one out in the ninth inning for a 4-3 Padre win over Juan Marichal and the Giants.

Derrel Thomas, another new Padre, was aboard on a single when Jeter delivered his 360-foot blast over the left field fence.

The teams meet again tonight with Steve Arlin, 0-1, going for San Diego against Sudden Sam McDowell, 1-0.

Nate Colbert accounted for the Padres' other runs with his 90th big league homer and first four-bagger of the year. It came with Jeter on in the fourth with a single.

Ironically, Jeter broke his left arm Dec. 27 while riding a horse in Venezuela. The accident happened while he was in South America to play winter baseball.

Jeter missed most of spring training because his arm was in a cast seven weeks.

"I feel 97 per cent back," he reported after San Diego's last-inning victory.

"There was no way in the world that I was looking for the homer in the ninth. I just wanted to make contact.

"Marichal's one of the best pitchers in baseball. If I hit him, that makes me pretty good, too."

Jeter said he was "very sorry" about the collision that will cost the Giants the services of the 34-year-old McCovey from two to three months.

"McCovey's such a great guy," he remarked. "It's a shame this had to happen. I know he worked so hard this spring."

Holtzman, Rudi Trigger A's Twin Bill Sweep Of Royals

OAKLAND (UPI)—The Oakland A's have played five games thus far and Joe Rudi and Ken Holtzman are the early start heroes today.

Rudi, finally rid of his military commitments and free to concentrate on playing ball every day, initiated two rallies Tuesday and Holtzman pitches a shutout as the A's defeated the Kansas City Royals, 4-0, and 3-1.

For Hotlzman, who held the Royals to five scattered hits it was his second straight fine performance. He gave up only three hits in eight innings of the season opener but did not figure in the decision.

Wednesday night, the hard-throwing left hander didn't walk a single batter but struck out only one. Still, he said that was just fine with him.

"I'm primarily a control pitcher," he said. "Any time I don't walk a man that's a good game for me."

Rudi got the first of five straight singles in he fourth inning of the first game and before the frame was over the A's scored four times off Dick Drago to wrap things up in a hurry.

In the nightcap, it took them into the eighth inning before they finally solved Bruce Dal Canton, and again it was Rudi who got things rolling. With two out, Rudi lined a triple to left center and Reggie Jackson followed with a broken bat single to right to snap a 1-1 tie. After Sal Bando walked, Mike Epstein, who drove in Oakland's first run with a sacrifice fly, singled off reliever Tom Burgmeier for an insurance run.

"I took some extra batting practice said Rudi, "and I started seeing the ball real good for the first time."

Rudi had a single and double in Wednesday's first game and a double and triple in the nightcap. In the five games played thus far he has a triple, three doubles and two singles.

Nicklaus Golf Pick At La Costa

RANCHO LA COSTA (UPI) — Jack Nicklaus is on the spot once again today in the first round of the $165,000 72-hole Mony Tournament of Champions but he doesn't seem to mind.

Fresh from his fourth triumph in the masters, Nicklaus was rated a 4-1 favorite in the elite field of 26 champions at La Costa country club's par-72 layout.

He is defending champion, having won last year by eight strokes. He is the No. 1 money-winner of the year by far on the PGA tour with $134,473. George Archer is No. 2 with $101,473.

Archer, Arnold Palmer, and other veterans are unbothered by Nicklaus, on the surface anyway, and each of them has his own incentive to win.

There are seven in the field over 40 who know the odds are against them. Palmer at 42 leads this contingent which includes Billy Casper, Bob Roseburg, Paul Harney, Miller Barber, Gardner Dickinson and Bob Goalby.

Palmer is not about to give Nicklaus any psychological edge and says, "I like to beat Nicklaus and I'll try to beat him any time I get the chance. But I'd like to be 32 . . ."

First time entrants who qualifiej by winning a major PGA event in the preceding 12 months number nine — Grier Jones, Johnny Miller, Jerry Heard, Hale Irwin, Hubert Green, Bobby Mitchell, Dewitt Weaver, Dave Eichelberger and Labron Harris Jr.

Others, all of whom have had a crack at the T of C before, are Lee Trevino, Dave Stockton, Frank Beard, Tom Weiskopf, Homero Blancas, Tony Jacklin, Bruce Crampton and Dave Hill.

Hill was the last man to qualify, winning the Monsanto Open last Sunday.

Trevino quit the Monsanto after a first round 74, saying he was exhausted and wanted to rest up for the T of C which he has never won.

The couse is long — over 7,000 yards — but it is not as tight on the fairways as it was in previous years.

Resident pro Tommy Jacobs explained, "The rough is not as rough. There is a shorter collar along the fairways before you get into the deep rough. And the fairways have been widened — some of them from 25 yards to a width of 35 yards."

HATS OFF TO PITCHING

Tom Van Der Meersche of Everett High School delivered a "blinding" fastball as his hat fell off against Meadowdale High in Everett Wash. yesterday. Despite the temporary loss of face, he struck out nine in pitching Everett to a 12-2 victory. (UPI Telephoto)

SPORT NOTES

It's Almost Time For REAL Baseball

By RALPH CHATOIAN

Time is fast approaching for the start of the REAL baseball season. The season for the bubble gum set, not the tobacco chewers.

Little Leaguers throughout the world will start their annual campaigns these next two Saturdays. Managers have picked their major league teams and have sent other players down to the minors "for more seasoning." Really. Little League is just like the big time —farm systems and everything.

It's not like my kiddie days in Sacramento when a bunch of us got together and picked a team, found a sponsor to buy us a couple of bats and a few balls and joined a summer recreation league. Like everything else in the USA, kids' baseball has been refined.

IN MARIN COUNTY, Little League got its start in San Rafael and Angelo Colombo, former San Rafael High School athletic director and dean and now coordinator of physical education for San Rafael's city schools, was first president of that league, 20 years ago. Ang is still working with kids, this year with the newly-formed San Rafael Senior League for boys 13 through 15.

The San Rafael Little League has grown and split into two leagues during its two decades of existence, American and National. So don't think expansion has been confined to the professional leagues. There are now approximately 700 youngsters involved in both leagues. James L. Placak is president of the San Rafael National Little League and George Burton is president of the San Rafael American. Highway 101 is the boundary line. Boys who live on the east side of the highway are in the National League and those on the west side the American.

THE TWO LEAGUES will be working together more this year, according to Placak. On Saturday, April 29, they'll be getting together for a pancake breakfast at 7:30 a.m. at the San Rafael High School cafeteria to kickoff the season and celebrate their 20 years of baseball. Army reservists from Santa Rosa will do the cooking. After the breakfast there will be a huge parade, beginning at 10:30 a.m., from Fifth Avenue and B Street to Albert Field's baseball diamond.

After the usual ceremonies by the older folk, the kids will take the spotlight for two exhibition games —one senior and one little — between players of the two leagues.

The American League uses Albert Park as its home base, while the Nationals have been playing inside the walls of San Quentin Prison for the past six years. With the recent announcement that San Quentin is going to be phased out of existence, a question of where the National League will play future games is raised.

Looking into this problem is a new group called Community Recreational Development Committee. The committee hopes to buy and develop facilities for all recreational activities, including Little League baseball.

SHORT HOPS — Third baseman Tom Corder of Novato did his share in helping Bakersfield outscore Visalia, 9-8, last night by hitting a home run. . .Frank Reberger, also Novato, pitched eight innings for Phoenix yesterday in the Giants' 5-4 loss to Albuquerque, but didn't get the defeat — Shigeyuki Takahashi, who pitched less than an inning, did.

Rangers, Chicago Tonight

By U.P. INTERNATIONAL

While the Boston Bruin's 6-1 romp over the St. Louis Blues Tuesday night surprised no one, the New York Rangers' second straight triumph over the Chicago Black Hawks has got all National Hockey League observers taking notice.

The Rangers have not won a Stanley Cup since 1940-41. Thus, even when the Broadway Blueshirts disposed of the defending cup champ Montreal Canadiens in six games in the first round this year, the general attitude was "wait and see what happens in Chicago."

But now the Rangers hold a commanding 2-0 lead as the series shifts back to New York tonight and they also have three of the remaining five (if necessary) games left on home ice.

"What we've done so far means nothing so far," Rangers' head coach Emile Francis said Wednesday. "What we do from now on depends how hard we work at it. There's no simple formula in this business."

Meanwhile, as far as the Bruins are concerned, Tuesday's opening win over St. Louis was "business as usual." The Blues made a great showing in upsetting Minnesota in the quarterfinals but it will be a surprise to many if they take even one game from the tough Bruins who posted the best overall won-lost record in the NHL during the regular season.

Ailing McCovey Resting

PALO ALTO (UPI)—Slugging first baseman Willie McCovey of the San Francisco Giants is resting today at Stanford Medical Center with his broken right arm in a full cast.

The 34-year-old infielder had the broken limb set Wednesday by Dr. Fred Behling. He placed a pin in the bone to hold the broken pieces together.

McCovey, who broke the arm Tuesday night in a collision with John Jeter of the San Diego Padres along the first-base line, will be hospitalized until Friday. He is expected to be out of the lineup eight to 12 weeks.

"Willie will be in a long-arm (above the elbow to the fingers) cast for two weeks and then wear a shorter one for four weeks," said Behling. "Everything went just fine. The bone is in excellent position." Once the cast is removed sometime around the first of June, Behling said the first baseman can begin exercises to strengthen his arm muscles.

"The exercises will be governed by the amount of soreness he experiences," said the doctor.

Manager Charlie Fox of the Giants doesn't plan to bring up anyone to take McCovey's place on the roster.

Fox said Dave Kingman would move from third base to first to replace McCovey and Alan Gallagher would play third base.

Bobby Bonds will move up from fifth to fourth in the batting order and Kingman will hit fifth. Gallagher will bat sixth.

SURGERY SET ON WARRIOR RUSSELL

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) Forward Cazzie Russell of the Golden State Warriors was scheduled to undergo corrective surgery today on his ailing back.

Russell, 27, is expected to be hospitalized several weeks following the operation at St. Mary's Hospital to relieve the pressure of a bone on a nerve.

During the past National Basketball Association season, the 6-6 forward averaged 21.4 points a game and was the only Warrior named to the All Star game at midseason. He came to the Warriors from the New York Knicks May 7, 1971 in a trade for Jerry Lucas.

Sonoma State Golf Team Splits Pair

The host Sonoma State golf team divided a pair of recent non league golf matches.

The Cossacks lost yesterday to the University of Pacific, 21-6 at Bennett Valley Golf Course after defeating St. Mary's College of Moraga, 16-11, last Wednesday at Rohnert Park.

49er Hoskins Moves From Tackle To End

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI)—Coach Dick Nolan of the San Francisco 49ers says he will switch 6-2, 235-pound Bob Hoskins from defensive tackle to defensive end for the 1972 season.

"For a man his size, he's fairly agile and should help shore up our defensive end spot," said Nolan. Hoskins will fill in for Cedrik Hardman who will miss part of the season suffered in an off-season basketball game.

Suburban Slams Gonzales In Softball, 10-0

Suburban Auto slammed Gonzales 10-0 in San Rafael League softball action last night on Albert Field.

In the other San Rafael contest, Brandon Tire shut out Jacobsen Auto, 5-0.

Suburban, the Golden Gate League division leaders 4-2, scored three in the first inning, two in the second and five in the fourth to win easily.

Cowens Scores 23 In Celtic Victory

BOSTON (UPI)—Dave Cowens slumped down on a bench in a corner of the Boston Celtic dressing room. Most of his teammates were gone.

Less than an hour earlier, Wednesday night, the 6-foot-9 center from Florida State led the Celtics to a 115-109 win over the New York Knicks for Boston's first triumph in the best-of-seven series for the National Basketball Association's Eastern conference championship. The Knicks won the first two games in the series that resumes Friday night in New York.

Saturday afternoon, the Los Angeles Lakers, who lead their series 3-2, will try to wrap up the NBA's Western Conference title at Milwaukee against the Bucks.

Cowens, who averaged 18.9 points a game in the regular season but could muster only a total of 21 points in the first two games against New York, poured in 23 points and grabbed 16 rebounds in leading Boston Wednesday night.

THE PERILS OF SPRING SKIING

Tam Errors Help San Marin Win

San Marin High School stole eight bases and Tamalpais committee four passed balls yesterday, enabling the Mustangs to eke out a 7-5 Marin County Athletic League baseball victory despite getting only two hits.

The victory at San Marin left the Novatans tied for second at 3-2 with Drake and Novato High, two full games behind Redwood. Tam is last at 0-5.

San Marin broke a 5-5 tie in the fourth inning as winning pitcher Ken Siler reached base on an error, and pinch-runner Steve Pratt stole second, went to third on an infield out and tallied on a passed ball. The Mustangs struck again in the fifth when two walks, a passed ball and two steals put men on secone and third, and a catcher's throwing error brought the man on third in.

Tam led off the game with four straight singles, with those by Clifford Hall and Donald Parker plating runs. Tim Nowell singled home the third tally of the inning. Nowell was the unlucky losing pitcher.

San Marin came back with four in the bottom half of the first inning on a bases-loaded walk, a two-run error and a double steal. Tam went back ahead with two in the third on run-scoring singles by Hall and Carl Freeman, but San Marin tied it on a walk, stolen base, infield out and passed ball.

Pirate Win Triggered By Robertson

By U.P. INTERNATIONAL

Bob Robertson didn't expect the bunt signal Wednesday night but he couldn't help looking for it.

Robertson, the slugging first baseman for Pittsburgh, came up with a runner on first and none out in the eighth inning and the Pirates trailing the Chicago Cubs 2-1.

Robertson, who missed a sign from Manager Danny Murtagh in the seventh inning of the third game of last year's World Series and then slammed a homer, was given the go-ahead sign by new Manager Bill Virdon.

Robertson, batting fourth in place of Willie Stargell, who was being given a day's rest, worked the count to 3-2 and fouled tipped a pitch that catcher Randy Hundley couldn't hold. He then lined a two-run homer that started the Pirates on to a 5-2 victory.

In the other National League games, Philadelphia blanked St. Louis 1-0, Los Angeles topped Atlanta 4-0, Houston edged Cincinnati 7-5, San Diego nipped San Francisco 4-3 and the New York at Montreal game was rained out.

In the American League, Cleveland edged Boston 3-1, New York beat Milwaukee 3-2, Chicago topped Texas 2-1, Baltimore edged Detroit 5-2, Minnesota routed California 12-3 and Oakland swept Kansas City 4-0 and 3-1.

Cesar Cedeno collected two doubles and a single as the Astros scored seven runs in the first three innings and held on to beat Cincinnati. Newly-acquired Jerry Reuss allowed nine hits in six innings but got credit for the victory. Former Astro Jack Billingham was tagged for six runs and took the loss.

OVER SAN RAFAEL

Redwood '9' Victorious

Mark Ruggles pitched his second consecutive shutout and Redwood High School scored the only run of the game on a passed ball in the first inning as the Giants defeated San Rafael High yesterday, 1-0.

The victory at Albert Park in San Rafael gave Redwood an undefeated 5-0 Marin County Athletic League record and a commanding two-game hold on first place. San Rafael slumped to 2-3.

San Rafael senior right-hander Steve Rohrs pitched well in his pressure assignment, allowing two hits, none after the second inning. Ruggles was touched for four safeties as he became the MCAL's winningest pitcher at 3-0.

Redwood's Jeff Vogel hit the game's first pitch over the left fielder's head for a double. He moved to third as San Rafael catcher Rick Klarkowski committed a passed ball, and came home on another passed ball while Mike Connor was batting.

Redwood threatened in the second when Jamie Williams doubled but was thrown out going for third, and again in the third frame when runners advanced to second and third with two out.

San Rafael threatened in the third when Dirk Gansloser doubled with one out, and after an intentional walk to Mike Farris, both advanced on a fielder's choice, but the next man struck out.

Petaluma Swimmers Defeated

Petaluma High School won only one event yesterday as it lost a North Bay-Sonoma County League swim meet to Napa High, 63-26.

In other Southern Sonoma County swimming action, Rancho Cotate of Rohnert Park was beaten, 56-33, by the NBL-SCL leader Piner of Santa Rosa.

Mike Caldwell was the sole winner for Petaluma, taking the 100-yard backstroke in 1:05.2. The Trojans dropped to 7-10 in league with the loss.

go in winning in the National League West last year, took a 3-2 lead in the eighth inning when Ken Henderson singled in Tito Fuentes from second.

Fuentes jarred the ball loose in a home plate collision with San Diego catcher Bob Barton.

Bobby Bonds singled home Willie Mays in the first inning and scored the Giants' second run in the fourth on Fran Healy's single.

3 Early Choices In California Derby At Albany

ALBANY (UPI)—Royal Owl, Solar Salute and Quack are among the early favorites for Saturday's running of the $100,000 added California Derby at Golden Gate Fields.

Eddie Belmonte, Bill Shoemaker and Laffit Pincay Jr. are among the notable jockeys who will have mounts for the 57th running of the mile-and-an-eighth. Belmonte will guide Royal Owl, Shoemaker will be aboard Quack and Pincay is scheduled to ride Solar Salute.

Favored Willful ($3.40) scored a three-quarter length victory Wednesday over Champs Champ and Riquillo in the featured Children's Theater Association Purse.

Southpaws In Demand In National League

SAN DIEGO — "We tried to get him," said Charlie Fox when he learned that the Astros were successful in swinging a deal with the Cardinals for Jerry Reuss, a 6-foot-5, 200-pound southpaw.

Late in spring training, the manager of the Giants acknowledged that he and Jerry Donovan, Horace Stoneham's executive assistant, had stepped up their trade talks with the Expos and Cardinals for Dick Dietz.

AT ONE STAGE of the talks with the Expos, Jim Fanning, Montreal's general manager, was ready to make a deal for Dietz but Gene Mauch, the Expos' field general, dinged it.

So the talks with the Cardinals were intensified but suddenly terminated when the 600 major league players walked out in baseball's first general strike.

During the 13-day strike all trade talks were suspended because the imperative issue now was settlement of the strike. On March 30, the day before the walkout, Dietz caught what was to become the final spring exhibition game for the Giants. It was in Palm Springs against the California Angels.

HARRY DALTON, the fellow who had swung so many important deals for the perennial American League champion Baltimore Orioles, was very impressed by Dietz' performance against the Angels for whom Dalton now is general manager.

Dalton went to Fox and asked if Dietz still was available. Fox told Dalton that he had no chance of getting Dietz now. It wasn't that the Giants had changed their mind about dealing Dietz. "I don't believe there is a chance of getting waivers on him in our league," Fox told Dalton.

Fox was right. When the Giants tried to get waivers on Dietz in the National League, the Dodgers claimed him for the $20,000 waiver price on April 14, the day after the strike was settled. The Giants could have taken Dietz off the waiver list but by this time Fox had made up his mind to do what he had planned to do from the opening day of spring training: platoon Fran Healy, a righthanded hitter, and Dave Rader, a lefthanded hitter, in catching roles.

RADER, WHO HAD been optioned to Phoenix on April 6 to meet the 25-player team limit for the opening day that never opened because of the strike, was recalled by the Giants and joined the team in Houston just as the Astros were announcing they had obtained Reuss from the Cardinals.

Spec Richardson, Houston's general manager who swung the deal for Reuss, said: "I think we can win it now. I felt that way even before we got Reuss because the 1972 Astros are the best club we've put on the field. But Reuss, with Dave Roberts, gives us the necessary southpaw depth we lacked before against lefthanded lineups, such as the Dodgers can throw at you."

Richardson then added: "The Dodgers aren't the only team with dangerous lefthanded hitters. The Pirates and Cubs have some pretty good lefthanded swingers, too."

THAT'S PRECISELY why the Giants traded Gaylord Perry and Frank Duffy last winter for Sam McDowell. Fox also tried to add Reuss to the Giants' pitching staff, knowing as everyone else in the National League did that the Cardinals were unhappy with Reuss, not because of his pitching but because he was a holdout who hadn't signed a contract.

He didn't report until spring training was long under way and only then because the Cardinals declared his contract automatically renewed under a reserve clause stipulation.

Marin Tar Tennis Team In Conference Playoffs

The College of Marin tennis team will play West Valley College in Campbell tomorrow in the first round of the Camino Norte Conference post-season playoffs.

Under the playoff setup, the first-place team meets the fourth-place team and No. 2 meets No. 3. Winners of the first round will collide next Tuesday, so it is possible the Tars will get another shot at league champion Canada College of Redwood City, which drubbed them last week, 9-0.

Marin clinched second place in the CNC Tuesday by defeating West Valley, 5-3. The Tars finshed at 6-1, while West Valley was 5-2. Canada was 7-0.

Marin 5, West Valley 3

Singles — Bruce Bassett (M) d. Jim Martin, 6-2, 6-1; Andy Giddings (M) d. Dan Horrigan, 6-2, 6-2; Ken Hamilton (WV) d. Carter Ingram, 6-4, 6-7, 6-3; Norm O'Neil (M) d. Glenn Davis, 6-1, 6-3; Steve Borkenhagen (WV) d. Jim Doney, 6-1, 4-6, 7-6; Charles Sharples (WV) d. Greg Calas, 6-4, 6-2.

A's Sign Horlen, Option Infielder

OAKLAND (UPI)—Veteran righthander Joe Horlen has been signed as a free agent by the Oakland Athletics.

Horlen, 34, was released by the White Sox this spring after he compiled a 113-113 record in 11 seasons with the club. To make room for Horlen, the A's optioned utility infielder Tim Cullen to their Iowa farm club in the American Association.

Trevino Talks Golf

A 'Waist' Of Shots

By LEE TREVINO

It's tough to think about birdies when your stomach's making bogeys. I'm not saying I got my eating and drinking program from Weight Watchers, but I don't carry any fried chicken or tamales in my bag, either.

I've seen young dudes eat like they were scared somebody was gonna steal their forks, then try to play golf. After six holes they got a belly full of misery.

I don't even eat breakfast if I'm teeing off before 9 o'clock. Maybe I'll have a roll and coffee, or milk. If I'm playing after 12 noon, corned beef hash and eggs around 9 or 10 o'clock will do me, but nothing heavy.

When it's real hot you lose a lot of body liquids, so I'll drink a little cup of water on each hole. Just one cup. Ice water is bad for a player who's hot and sweaty. Orville Moody got sick from the heat at Philadelphia, probably from too much water.

Don't stuff yourself and expect to make birdies. Go easy on the grub. AFTER you're in, a mess of tacos, nachos and a cold drink are . . . know what I mean?

Tam's Clifford Hall Is League Leader

Outfielder Clifford Hall of Tamalpais High School, a professional baseball prospect who somehow managed to hit .235 in the Marin County Athletic League last year, apparently is determined not to let it happen again.

The speedy left-handed batter belted six hits in his last two games and currently is leading the league with a .571 average. He also leads in triples, is tied for the lead in home runs, and is tied for second in doubles and runs batted in.

Novato's Bill Busher ranks second at .526. Marin Catholic's Vince Bormolini is tied for third at .462 and leads in runs batted in with five.

Leading pitcher, based on earned run average, is Gene Frey of Redwood. His ERA is 0.33, computed on a seven-inning basis, and his record is 2-0. Redwood teammate Mark Ruggles, 2-0 with a perfect 0.00 ERA in eight innings of work, barely missed the minimum qualifying total of 10 innings pitched.

The statistics, which include games through Tuesday:

A Big Week For Moller Of Redwood

Perhaps Jan-Eric Moller should run in a meet every day.

Due to rain-outs, Redwood High School's track and field team was compelled to run two meets on consecutive days last week. Moller, a distance man, was more than equal to the task.

On Thursday, he ran the Marin County Athletic League's fastest mile (4:37.5) against Terra Linda, and on Friday, he ran the fastest two-mile (9:50.8) against Novato. On Saturday, presumably, he rested.

There were several other changes in the league's best dual-meet performances for 1972. Notable among them was a 42 foot, 7-inch triple jump by Roy Garner of Tamalpais. It was the third longest in MCAL history, according to figures compiled by Redwood coach Dough Basham.

Steve McGee of Redwood heaved the shot 53-5½, sixth longest in league history. McGee had a 53-4 earlier this year, ubt it was declared unofficial because the shot put circle at Marin Catholic, where the put occured, does not have a toe board.

A 14.8 clocking by Ed Harris of Novato in the high hurdles, previously proclaimed a best, is not. The course was shorter than the normal 120 yards, according to Novato mentor Craig Bond. Harris' earlier 15.6 remains the best.

Greg Biber of Tamalpais, who virtually owns the 180 low hurdles, again lowered his best, to 21.0. Dave Janbaz of Terra Linda did 23.3 in the 220.

Redwood pole-vaulter Kip Kermoian and Novato 100 man Joe Powell each equaled their previously-established bests.

The top marks:

120 HH — Ed Harris (Novato), 15.6; 440 Relay — San Marin (Steve Goins, Larry Butti, Bob Briot, Randy Colfer), 45.3; 880 — Gary Lathrop (San Marin), 2:01.2; 100 — Joe Powell (Novato), 10.1; Mile — Jan Eric Moller (Redwood), 4:37.5; 440 — Bob Briot (San Marin), 52.4; 180 LH — Greg Biber (Tamalpais), 21.0; 220 — Dave Janbaz (Terra Linda), 23.3; Two-Mile — Jan-Eric Moller (Redwood), 9:50.8; Mile Relay — San Marin (Ron Zechlin, Gary Lathrop, Bob Briot, Randy Colfer), 3:33.4; Shot Put — Steve McGee (Redwood), 53-5½; Pole Vault — Kip Kermoian (Redwood), 12-6; Discus — Darrell Elder (Redwood), 150-2½; Long Jump — Don Nelson (Marin Catholic), 21-6; High Jump — Mark Farrar (San Rafael), 6-2; Triple Jump — Roy Garner (Tamalpais), 42-7.

SWIMMING

A Calm Before A Storm

It must be the calm before the storm.

Rick DeMont of Terra Linda High School made inroads into the sprint freestyle territory this week, but elsewhere all was quiet on the Marin County Athletic League swim scene in a lull before the championship confrontation Tuesday between Redwood (9-0) and Terra Linda (8-1).

DeMont equaled Redwood's John Redig's 50-yard freestyle time of 23.0 seconds this past week, and lowered his own 100 free time to 49.1, but there were no other changes in the listing of MCAL best times.

The top marks:

200 medley relay - Redwood (Pete Brunstetter, Paul Cane, Corky Hull, John Redig), 1:46.0; 200 free - Spencer Eldred (Redwood), 1:54.5; 200 I.M. - Rick DeMont (Terra Linda), 2:06.0; 500 free - John Redig (Redwood) and Rick DeMont (Terra Linda), the 23.0; Diving - John Summerfield (Novato), 362.45; 100 fly — Rick DeMont (Terra Linda), 57.0; 100 free - Rick DeMont (Terra Linda), 49.1; 400 free - Spencer Eldred (Redwood), 4:06.2; 100 back - Roger Rechsteiner (Novato), 1:00.8; 100 breast - Paul Cane (Redwood), 1:03.5; 400 free relay - Redwood (Troy Dunham, Spencer Eldred, John Goepp, John Redig), 3:30.6.

San Marin Track Men Tie For 1st

San Marin High School moved into a first-place tie with Redwood in the Marin County Athletic League track and field standings yesterday by defeating Tamalpais 77-59, in a meet at San Marin.

Castro Dickens won three events for Tam and Greg Biber took two more but it was not enough to offset the Mustangs.

Northern Cal Car Dealers Offer Aid In Blue Furor

By U.P. INTERNATIONAL

SACRAMENTO — A group of Northern California automobile dealers has offered to put up the salary money needed to get pitcher Vida Blue to sign his 1972 contract with the Oakland A's.

Jack Vandenberg of Sacramento, president of the 92-dealer Northern California Chrysler Sales Association, said Wednesday that the association has offered to pay the difference between what Blue is reportedly demanding in salary and what A's owner Charles Finley is offering.

"The story we hear is that Finley has offered $50,000 but that Blue will settle for $65,000," Vandenberg said. "Anyway, our Chrysler dealers will pick up the difference. We don't think it is dignified for Blue to be out of baseball and working for a plumbing concern."

Basketball

NEW YORK — Sidney Wicks was No. 2 in the National Basketball Association's collegiate draft last year but he turned out to be No. 1 in the Rookie-of-the-Year balloting.

Wicks, who scored 2,009 points for the Portland Trail Blazers, received 77 votes from a panel of sportswriters and broadcasters in the 17 NBA cities to easily win the award over Buffalo's Elmore Smith, who was a distant second with 21 votes.

Tennis

CHARLOTTE, N.C. — Tiburon's Bob Lutz was ousted yesterday by John Alexander in the $50,000 North Carolina National Bank tennis tournament singles competition but the Marinite still has championship aspirations.

After losing 3-6, 6-2 to Alexander, Lutz was set for his doubles match with teammate Arthur Ashe against Roger Taylor and Owen Davidson today.

ELECTRONIC CABLE PROTECTORS

An operator at the Philadelphia Insulated Wire Plant of GTE Sylvania Inc., Moorestown, N.J., adjusts one of a battery of shield braiding machines used to electronically protect cable used in the telecommunications and computers industries. All coaxial cable has a slight signal loss and the armored cable drains off and prevents interference with adjoining cables.

Diamond Fake Is Accepted

By JOSEPHINE RIPLEY
The Christian Science Monitor News Service

If your diamonds aren't real, don't apologize. "Counterfeit" diamonds have become socially acceptable.

More and more of today's sparklers are phonies. And it's not all a gigantic swindle. It's honest counterfeiting. People are buying these stones for what they really are — genuine frauds.

TEMPORARY ECONOMY

Many an engaged girl is now flashing a simulated diamond and doesn't care who knows it. After all, it's a temporary economy, as a rule.

Setting up housekeeping is expensive in these days of rising costs. So why pay for a real diamond when you can get a finely cut replica for only $75, and put the difference into furnishings for the new home, young couples ask themselves.

Not that "counterfeit" diamonds really take the place of the genuine gem. That will probably come later, after the heavy expenses of homemaking have been met.

ONLY JEWELER KNOWS

But it's not only the young people who are buying these replicas. Many of the well-to-do who already possess fine gems have stashed them away in the vault and are now wearing simulated jewels so genuine in appearance that only their jeweler knows the difference.

In this case, it's not only a safety measure, but an economy as well. The cost of insurance for real jewels is lower when they are kept in a vault.

Even jewel thieves have been taken in sometimes by these very genuine looking counterfeits.

COUNTERFEIT STOLEN

The story is told of a man who bought a 24-carat replica to replace a ring he had in storage, only to have the counterfeit stolen within a matter of weeks.

He laughed — and sent for another to replace it. Not long afterward, another jewel thief bit the dust.The replacement was stolen. The owner laughed again, but not as hard.

Many of these fine fake diamonds are cut by experienced European lapidists.

FUTURE ECONOMY CAR

Two views of the Modulo, a low-priced economy car of the future designed by Italian designer Sergio Pininfarina and exhibited yesterday at the 16th Annual New York International Automobile Show. The car has no doors, no drag and the whole front slides forward for passengers to walk in, standing up to be seated. The dashboard has been eliminated and controls are in an adjustable sphere at the driver's right. A partial vacuum created by the fastback rear is eliminated by holes and vents that also draw in air to cool the engine.

Marin's New Shut-In Service Can Help Almost Any Needy

A new service called SIS has opened up in Marin to help make life more pleasant for shut-in patients — older adults, the chronically ill, and almost anyone needing assistance.

SIS, which stands for Shut-In-Services, is operated by Maxine Cooley of Post Office Box 2434, San Rafael, 94902. She's in the phone book under SIS. The service is available on either a regular schedule or on a one-time only basis.

Mrs. Cooley explained that she launched the business at the suggestion of a Marin doctor who saw a crying need for the service. People who are confined like to know that someone cares. SIS will call daily or periodically and make a personal visit if there is no answer after several calls.

Other services offered by SIS are personal visits daily or periodically, shopping for those who cannot get to a store, secretarilal and bookkeeping services for the shut-in, and dozens of other little chores that may seem impossible for one who is confined.

"This is an organization that exists to help when relatives or friends cannot," said Mrs. Cooley. "Most families appreciate the assurance of having SIS to call on when they are not available. This service is not intended to replace family assistance — only as a supplement to it."

All services are $7.50 per hour, except telephone reassurance calls. This fee varies with the number of calls made each month.

RONALD W. MURPHY of San Rafael has been appointed associate manager of the San rancisco-Grayson Agency of Home Life Insurance Co. The firm specializes in pension planning and advanced underwriting.

Murphy started with Home Life in 1967 as a supervisor in San Rafael and was assigned to the western regional office in San Francisco in 1969.

JAMES C. NELSON JR. of Lucas Valley, executive vice president and creative director of Hoefer, Dieterich and Brown advertising agency, was principal speaker at the Wednesday meeting of the San Francisco Advertising Club. He urged the advertising industry to be more responsive to what women are saying and thinking today.

BRITTON'S CHEVRON has taken over the former Darrell Foust Chevron Service at 1722 Fourth Street in San Rafael.

New owner Garry Britton, who took over this month, has been in the business since 1947, mostly with Chevron Service in Danville. He will keep the station open seven days a week from 6 a.m. to midnight. Helping Britton manage the station is Robert Steward, who was with Foust Chevron for the past five years.

Britton's Chevron Station offers such services as front end alignment, brake service, tune-up, and smog control inspection and service. Britton has all the state licenses issued by the Bureau of Automotibe Repairs.

Darrell Foust, the former owner, sold the station to Britton and went into the selling field.

GOLDEN GATE MARKET in Sausalito, owned by Albert M. Leet for 30 years, may soon be sold to his son and one of his employees.

Prospective purchasers are Donald L. Leet and a long-time employee, Ervin D. Cox of Mill Valley. Cox said the transfer of ownership of the market and the off-sale liquor license is still pending because the legal papers have not been completed. No change is contemplated in the operation of the market, located at 221 Second Street.

PACIFIC HOUSE in San Anselmo at 727 Sir Francis Drake Boulevard, next to Sight and Sound TV, carries a complete line of jade, pearls and coral. The last time we reported on the expansion of Pacific House, we failed to mention jade, pearls and coral among the Far East art objects sold at the store. Customers are invited to have tea and cookies with owner-manager Maria Miyagi Bartruff.

Soybean Futures Had A Good Week

CHICAGO (BW) — Soybean futures values advanced throughout the week making new contract seasonal high levels in the process, according to the Chicago board of trade's weekly summary.

This week's advances moving futures into new, upside, uncharted territory came on follow through response to the tight balance between supply and demand being drawn by domestic and export users of the old crop.

SUCCESSFUL INVESTING

Stock's Price Rise Makes Sale Good

By ROGER E. SPEAR

Q. A few years ago when our son was employed there, he urged us to buy shares of Sheller-Globe. We are in our seventies and need income. Would you advise a change at this time? — M.M.

A. The 80 per cent price rise since the end of the year presents an excellent chance for you to sell these Big Board shares. While further appreciation is anticipated over the next several years, the strong performance of the first quarter will undoubtedly be modified. As a replacement, First Mortgage Investors offers a generous indicated return of 9.1 per cent. Listed on the NYSE, FIM was the first mortgage investments trust to qualify under the REIT Act of 1960.

For the year ended Jan. 31, 1972, earnings reached $2.40 a share, an 18 per cent increase year-to-year. In the previous five years earnings have increased an average of 15 per cent compounded annually. Further earnings gains, reflecting the upturn in construction, are anticipated this year. Since at least 90 per cent of earnings must be paid to shareholders in order to retain tax exemption as an investment trust, dividends should remain generous.

Q. I am 19 and this will be my first venture in the stock market. I am interested in buying Maritime Fruit Carriers (OTC) and would like your opinion on it. — L.G.

A. Company has just reported its fifth consecutive year of rising earnings. Sales for 1971 gained 67 per cent to $47.6 million. On a fully diluted basis, earnings rose to $1.49 a share from $1.31 in 1970 despite a 15 per cent increase in shares outstanding. Maritime's 24 automated refrigerated cargo ships are chartered to a Swedish company. By 1974 the fleet will number 41 ships.

Other activities include oil tanker operations, a 75 per cent interest in an oil venture company and insurance. Although shares are trading at 15x last year's earnings, the $80-million market value of common is almost double 1971 sales volume. Long-term debt was $97 million and current ratio less than 1-to-1 at the 1970 year end, not unusual in the transportation industry. Maritime has speculative appeal.

Late Flurry Erases Loss In Market

NEW YORK (UPI)—A flurry of buying late in the session today on the New York Stock Exchange erased some early losses and the list closed mixed in fairly active trading.

Of the more than 1,743 issues traded, declines led advances by around 250 issues.

The Dow average was down more than five points at one time.

Analysts attributed the market's comeback to selective interest in quality issues. The sharp downturn earlier stemmed from stepped-up activity in Vietnam and the budget in the inflation rate. Analysts had said the market appeared "tired" after a five-month advance.

First quarter earnings reports continued to help a number of stocks.

RCA was again actively traded. Trading was led by a block of 89,500 shares at 38 3-4, up 1-2.

Dentsply got a boost after announcement by the American Dental Association saying it has provisionally accepted the dental supply firm's new plastic sealant designed to stop decay.

Prices were slightly lower in fairly active trading on the American Stock Exchange.

Some Medi-Cal Lab Payments Criticized

SACRAMENTO (UPI) —The Medi-Cal program is paying "too much" for clinical laboratory services and Reagan administration changes to cut the costs are "inadequate," a legislative report said today.

The report, prepared y the auditor general's office, was submitted to the legislature by the Joint Legislative Audit Committee.

The report saia the Medi-Cal reimbursement system conducted by California Blue Shield for providers of laboratory services in "cumbersome and lacking in control because of excessive manual pricing of claims."

"We conclude that the MediCal program is paying too much for laboratory services," the report said.

It noted the Department of Health Care Services last year under the Medi-Cal Reform Act issued changes on its clinical laboratory regulations on an emergency basis.

But the report said the changes were "inadequate" because they affect only 16 laboratory tests out of a total of about 690 tests.

It also said the department gave Blue Shield permission to set payment policy if the policy does not conflict with department regulations or the prices do not exceed the maximum price schedule.

But the report said, "Blue Shield has made changes without the department's knowledge which are in conflict with the regulations."

The committee recommended that Blue Shield set up reimbursement rates for tests conducted simultaneously by automated methods instead of billing Medi-Cal for each individual test in such circumstances. It said such a practice will hold down costs.

Other recommendations include reviewing maximum reimbursement rates for laboratory procedures, periodically monitoring of lab payments to determine if Blue Shield is to comply with policy guidelines and requiring Blue Shield to use a computer to process claims as a means of reducing errors.

Photograph's Feature New Mexico Scenes

A display of photographs entitled "A New Mexican Village" is on view at the Social Security office, 549 Northgate Drive, San Rafael.

The photographs were taken by Lynn Adler, Jules Backus and Ben Tarcher, known collectively as the Optic Nerve. Viewing hours are 8:30 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. weekdays.

THAT WAS THE NIGHT THAT WAS

Not only did the night watchman sleep through the burglary of the Bolinas Community Center, but no one woke up to see that a $900 announcing system had been missing for a month and a half, according to sheriff's deputies.

Deputies said a guard sleeping in the the building woke up to find the door standing open in early March, but couldn't find anything missing.

Not until this month was the theft discovered and reported, deputies said.

NASA Exhibit At Larkspur Library

A special exhibit of National Aeronautics and Space Administration material has been put on display in the Larkspur Library, thanks to the interest of a group of children in the Apollo 16 journey.

The children — 4 to 6 year olds who attend the library's story hours — sent special notes and pictures to the astronauts in Houston.

The Manned Space Craft Center sent back colored photos of space crews and other NASA material. The items are on display from 10 a.m. to 9 p.m. Monday and Friday, 10 a.m.to 6 p.m. Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday and 10 a.m. to noon on Saturday.

Fire Board Seeking Director

The Kentfield Fire Protection District board will hold a special meeting next Monday night at 7:30 p.m. in the fire house to discuss appointment of a new director and decide on hose purchases, according to Kentfield Fire Chief Kenneth Kamp.

District Board member Raymond N. Vogel drowned April 8 after a boating accident in the Golden Gate.

Kamp also said the board will consider buying 2,000 feet of fire hose for the district's new 1,500 gallon per minute pumper, purchased Feb. 10, 1971 from the Van Pelt Fire Apparatus Co. in Oakdale. Delivery is expected in about two months, Kamp said.

He said the board has approved sending Asst. Fire Chief Robert G. Mariani to a fire training seminar May 1 to 5 in Fresno, and scheduled a grass and brush fire seminar at the Kentfield fire house this Friday and Saturday, to be conducted by the County fire department.

Inflation Bill Sent To House By Senate

WASHINGTON (UPI)—The Senate has passed and sent to the House a resolution calling on Americans to fight inflation by planting their own vegetable gardens this summer.

Only four senators were on the floor when the resolution passed on a voice vote.

SURVIVAL INC. IS FIGHTING TO LIVE

Faced With Money And Morale Problems, It Will Charge Marin Residents A Fee

By JAY GOODWIN

The best things in life are free.

Not any more — when you're talking about garbage recycling in Marin County.

Faced with financial ruin and deteriorating morale, the two young directors of Survival Inc. — a 14-month-old organization — have decided to charge their customers 50 cents per carload of recyclable garbage.

Survival Inc. had decided to close down its collection depots at Terra Linda, Tamalpais, San Marin, Redwood and Sir Francis Drake High Schools and Pacheco Plaza, when the suggestion was made to charge customers for the recycling service.

Beginning Saturday, the program will seek to survive on a "pay-as-you-dump" basis.

Survival Inc. is run by two directors — 24-year-old Judy Nicoll of San Rafael, and 22-year-old Roger Bockrath. She handles the organization's bookkeeping and administrative details, while he serves as the group's field director.

Yesterday, sitting in Mrs. Nicoll's home — which doubles as Survival's office — they discussed some of their group's problems.

"Our biggest problem is the communication gap we're forced to deal with," explained Mrs. Nicoll. "More than 75 per cent of the people who recycle with us don't even know what we do with all their stuff. For all they know, we're driving down the street and dumping it in the bay."

"Another public misconception that we face," she said, "is that recycling is lucrative. On an average weekend we recycle some 35 tons of cans and bottles. It takes about 100 people to do this. Our gross financial return is around $500. It's plain to see that with trucks, insurance, an office, gas and you name it . . . only about 10 per cent of those people receive anything, and then only about $1 per hour."

She attributed Survival's survival thus far to the volunteer work of a great many young people, but this, in turn can work to the organization's disadvantage, Mrs. Nicoll said, since it prevents many adults from taking it seriously.

Most people, she continued, simply don't realize the size of the job Survival is undertaking. Families drive down to one of the six depots, unload their bottles and cans and drive off.

Unless clients painstakingly sorted their bottles into clear and tinted glass, and cans into aluminum, tin or bi-metal, the volunteers are forced to spend hours doing that job.

If, as Mrs. Nicoll estimates, 25 per cent of the people of Marin dump their recyclable garbage with Survival Inc., that's a pretty big pile of garbage.

Even 100 spirited high school students can get pretty tired and disgusted, she said, when case after case of unsorted bottles get dumped at their feet.

The recyclables collected on the weekends are transportd for sale to three companies during the week.

Glass is sold at $20 per ton to the Owens-Illinois Glass Co. in Oakland. On an average weeuend, Survival Inc. might collect about $500 on that glass.

"Aluminum is easier," explained Nicoll, "because it's lightweight and we don't have to carry it as far. Survival Inc. gets $200 per ton of aluminum from the Golden Gate Distribution Corp. of San Rafael. A good weekend might bring in $150.

"Tin and bi-metal are a real pain in the neck," said Mrs. Nicoll. The sorting process, which all buyers require, is considerably time-consuming for cans. Survival yields about $80 a weekend on these cans from the M and T Chemical Co. of South San Francisco.

While sensing a genuine concern among many businesses for the ecological benefits of recycling, Mrs. Nicoll believes that most firms buying garbage from Survival Inc. are simply tolerating the group — not helping it.

"They're taking our glass as a public relations trip," she said. "They're for recycling bottles as we're doing it now. If we tried recycling bottles without smashing them, you know the bottling companies would not be as friendly."

National figures, Mrs. Nicoll said, attribute about five pounds of garbage daily to each person. In Marin that works out to 1,000,000 pounds, or 500 tons daily. At least half this, she said, is generated by homes, not industry.

Mrs. Nicoll said that since technology cannot yet handle this, and educating the public to cut down on the generation of waste needs time, Survival was formed, not as a solution but as an interim effort to buy time.

Up to their necks in recyclable garbage, Mrs. Nicoll and Bockrath have turned to the county for help. At one time or another, they've asked for use of county-owned trucks to assist in transporting the garbage; access to a corporation yard or paved parking lot that would eliminate the need to use their tiny lot near the College of Marin and respect from the board of supervisors for the work Survival Inc. is doing.

"We want to get rid of the attitude that this is a kid's project," said Bockrath. "This is a county problem and it's time we all tackled it together."

In the near future, according to Mrs. Nicoll, supporters of the recycling group will ask to have their formal requests placed on the board of supervisors agenda.

Until then, the high school students will continue to sort the unsorted mountains of glass and metal. Approximately 300 to 400 people will continue to drop off their garbage at each depot each weekend. And Survival Inc. will continue to struggle — unassisted — with its enormous task.

SORTED OUT — Some of the waste, generated by the hundreds of tons daily in Marin, sits neatly sorted in barrels, some holding flattened paper cartons, some holding tinted glass, some holding clear glass, some holding flattened aluminum cans, some holding tin cans. Most of this sorting, Survival volunteers say they must do because householders either are too lazy or unaware to do it themselves.

HELP, IF YOU CAN — One of the Survival Inc. volunteers unloads a gunnysackful bi-metal cans at the M and T Chemical Co. in South San Francisco. The recycling group gets paid $10 per ton for these cans.

Bay Smog Leaders Hit Proposition 9

I-J Special Report

SAN FRANCISCO — Bay Area smog officials yesterday branded Proposition 9 as an unworkable proposal that would clog the courts and interfere with the urgent need for nuclear power plants.

Bay Area Air Pollution Control District directors agreed unanimously that the Environment Initiative on the June ballot should be rejected by the voters.

The proposition would set unprecedented limits on lead in fuel, prevent new offshore oil or gas leases, bar nuclear power plants for five years, bar persistent pesticides and set extremely tough conflict of interest provisions for members of agencies regulating air and water quality.

Industry has objected that it will be impossible to comply with many of the antipollution provisions in the proposition. It would fine polluting companies .4 per cent of their previous annual gross income for each day they violate pollution limits.

The smog officials, with 10 of 18 directors present, postponed a formal vote opposing the proposition to their May 3 meeting so that more directors could vote on it.

First Curbs On The Brown Air

I-J Special Report

SAN FRANCISCO — Bay Area smog officials, after 17 years in business, yesterday adopted their first limit on nitrogen oxides, the pollutant that turns air brown.

The key pollutant that cooks under the sun into photochemical smog, these oxides also irritate the lungs of sensitive people. The new regulation, aimed at large power plant and industrial boilers, will eliminate up to 30 tons of the oxides that end up in the air each day, district officials estimated.

This reduction still would leave 180 tons a day from sources under district jurisdiction. Motor vehicles add another 419 tons a day, a figure to be cut by future emission controls.

The new limits will apply to new and expanded operation of both large and medium-size boilers, and to existing large boilers in three years. Existing medium-size boilers were exempted pending further staff study of the feasibility of cutting their emissions of nitrogen oxides.

Spokesmen for Pacific Gas and Electric Co. insisted that these medium-size boilers cannot be modified to meet the limits. Changes to the large boilers alone will cost up to $10 million, they said.

The district's advisory council had recommended limits apply only to new and expanded boilers, but existing large boilers had to be included at the last momentwbecause of demands by the state Air Resources Board. The district's administrator, D.J. Callaghan, conceded that he had overlooked the state board's requirements when the advisory council drafted the regulation.

The board voted 10-1 to approve the new limits. Director Mountain View City Councilman William R. Jelavich, an outspoken critic of Callaghan, refused to approve the limits without their review by the advisory council. He noted that the limits had been under study by the district since January, 1970.

The staff estimated that the combined effects of the new district limits and new car smog controls will cut nitrogen oxide emissions by 1985 back to the 1955 level of 300 tons a day. The daily tonnage, however, will climb again after 1985 because the increased number of motor vehicles will more than offset the effect of smog controls according to the staff.

Paul Matthew, manager of PG&E's steam generation department, insisted that "we just don't know how" to cut emissions from existing medium-size boilers to meet the proposed limit. "We have an orderly process" of replacing boilers with improved equipment that may meet the limits, he said, adding that boilers last up to 40 years.

On another issue, cracking down on heavy pollution when industrial equipment breaks down, the board again postponed action to June 22. The issue has been under study by the district since May, 1969.

Citizen groups have urged that all breakdowns be prosecuted as violations of district regulations. They now are excused as unavoidable accidents in most cases.

Glenn H. Baumer, environmental engineer for Phillips Petroleum Co., said "there are hazards in our civilization, and we have to put up with them or abandon our civilization." While some of the breakdowns are caused by human error, he said, "in many cases they are not avoidable."

In other business, the board appointed Dr. David T. Mage, assistant professor at San Jose State College's school of engineering, to a vacancy on the advisory council. Mage early this month reported that air pollution in the Bay Area is far worse than reported by district officials.

His appointment was urged by the labor councils of Contra Costa and Santa Clara counties.

Jury Returns Guilty Verdict

A jury in Marin Superior Court yesterday convicted Ernest Edwin Scott, 38, of San Francisco of selling heroin to an undercover agent in Sausalito last August.

After five and a half hours of deliberation, the jury returned its verdict and Judge E. Warren McGuire set sentencing for May 23.

Scott turned himself in to San Francisco police Oct. 14 when he learned he was wanted for the sale of $380 worth of heroin.

Pastor Says Hart Not A Minister

Rev. Reuben J. Sequiera, minister of the Assembly of God Church in San Rafael, said yesterday that Leonard B. Hart, ordered jailed last month for embezzling money from the Grateful Dead rock group, is not an ordained minister of that church.

Reverend Sequiera said a check with church of cials contradicted the claims in court of Hart's attorney, Robert McCreadie, that his client was a minister in the Assembly of God church.

HOW TO KEEP WELL

By DR. THEODORE R. VAN DELLEN

Smothering Baby With Love Doesn't Mean A Happy Adult

Does the quality of love and care influence the future personality of an infant? Many pediatricians and psychiatrists believe it does, although this theory is difficult to prove. Total inattention may adversely affect the personality, but smothering the baby with love and affection is no guarantee he will become an emotionally stable adult. Certain studies show children deprived of all mothering do not flourish. Other surveys suggest such children become emotionally retarded or unstable.

The opposite also occurs. Some youngsters reared in institutions mature more quickly and outstrip their playmates who have been showered with maternal love. However, factors other than love during early life enter the picture. Important as is mothering, so are playmates.

RESEARCH on rhesus monkeys at the University of Wisconsin has helped in understanding these problems. Primates show three basic social responses: affection, fear, and aggression. According to the Wisconsin studies, monkeys show a "frightening comparability to children" when deprived of love. In certain cases, normal patterns of development can be blocked and disrupted. For example, an infant monkey raised without its mother forms strong emotional attachments to soft, cloth-covered substitute mothers. The animals do not respond affectionately to "wire mothers," even tho they receive nourishment from the mother substitute.

AFFECTION, a reaction to cuddling, warmth, and food, is followed by fear. The latter occurs as the infant grows and begins exploring a somewhat hostile world. Aggression ensues when the monkey is older and mature enough to take care of itself. A young rhesus monkey can manage without its mother if it associates with other monkeys. If deprived of both mother and peers, it becomes fearful, aggressive, and sexually inadequate. It is the warm relationship with others of the same age that does most to ensure normal development.

According to Wisconsin psychologist Harry F. Harlow, there are definite advantages to these animals having two sources of affection — mother and peers. Each compensates for the deficiencies of the other. Rhesus mothers denied normal affection in early life may be brutal to their offspring. Human mothars do the same, and the battered baby syndrome is an example of the outcome of this type of deprivation.

DISPLACED SHOULDER JOINT

G.R. writes: My shoulder has come out of place three times recently. I'm 32 years old and would like to know if there is a cure for this type of dislocation.

REPLY

Yes. Surgery is indicated after three dislocations. The capsule that supports the shoulder is stretched or torn and must be repaired, to hold the socket together.

Brandt In London

LONDON (UPI)—West German Chancellor Willy Brandt arrived today for a two-day confidential summit with Prime Minister Edward Heath on the organization of an enlarged Europe and future relations with the Soviet bloc.

Legal Bingo Bill Passed By Assembly

SACRAMENTO (UPI) —The Assembly yesterday passed legislation clearing the way for legalization of nonprofit, charitable bingo games over objections it would lead California down the "inexorable" path of permitting all gambling.

Assemblyman Robert W. Crown, D-Alameda, warned, "We should not permit a break in the dike."

He said the question was "whether or not we're going down that inexorable path towards legalized gambling."

But Assemblyman Leroy F. Greene, D-Sacramento, author of the legislation, said he had a list of 1,911 places where bingo is currently being played in violation of state law, including city police associations, a mortuary, churches, lodges and country clubs.

"It is going on today. It went on yesterday and it will go on tomorrow no matter what you do," Greene told his colleagues.

The House voted 55-12 to send to the Senate his proposed constitutional amendment permitting bingo. A companion bill was passed 44-22.

The amendment needed 54 votes and the bill 41.

If approved by the voters, the constitutional amendment would permit the nonprofit games on a local option basis. The bill imposes stringent controls on the games including making it a misdemeanor for persons to receive a profit, wage or salary from the game.

San Diego Still Site Of GOP Convention

WASHINGTON (UPI) —The Republican Party conceded yesterday preparations for its 1972 convention in San Diego had run into "major problems" but said it was "presently proceeding with plans" to meet in the California city Aug. 21.

R. L. Herman, vice chairman of the GOP convention arrangements committee, left open the possibility, however, that the party still might move to another site.

"The arrangements committee does have major problems in San Diego," said Herman in a statement released by the Republican National Committee.

"We are working on them and so are the people of San Diego. It is unlikely that all the difficultues can be solved completely. Most of them can be met even though the situation may not be ideal. Thus, we are presently proceeding with our plans to open the Convention in San Diego Aug. 21. However, it is my obligation to attempt to prepare for any eventuality and to be aware of alternatives."

In a story in the Miami news, Herman was quoted as also saying: "If Miami Beach has an interest, they should make an offer."

The newspaper also said that Jesse Weiss, a member of the Miami Beach Tourist Development Authority, reported that high ranking GOP officials had telephoned him twice last week about the possibility of moving the convention to Miami Beach, which will also be the site of the Democratic convention.

"The people who talked to me are too high in the party to play games," Weiss said. "I think they are very sincere in wanting to come to Miami Beach."

Herman's statement said the "critical problem lies in modifying the San Diego Sports Arena, where the convention is to be held," but that there was also problems of securing enough hotel space and in obtaining cash commitments from the city.

"Our architect and contractor inform us that all of the modifications of the arena cannot be completed in time unless work can begin sooner than the arena owner presently will permit," Herman said.

Another "stumbling block," said Herman, "has been a location of the anchor booths for the television networks that would be satisfactory to both the networks and us."

He also said the San Diego Civic Host Committee "has been having some difficulty in meeting the commitments made in its bid to us."

"We expected to have 12,500 hotel rooms reserved by this time," Herman said, "with a prospect of increasing that number to 14,000 or even 14,500. Today we have available 11,200 rooms, a number which would not permit us to accommodate all of the estimated 4,500 news media within the immediate area."

As for money, Herman said his committee had received $100,000 of the $600,000 pledged in cash by the San Diego community.

The agreed on schedule, he said, called for paying of $200,000 "each on Aug. 1, 1971, and Jan. 1, 1972, and April 1, 1972."

"We understand the Civic Committee has pledges for these funds, and that their cash commitment will be met. The arrangements Committee has now reached a point where we need the funds to meet our own commitments."

Fire Hits Peace Groups' Quarters

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — The headquarters of two anti-war groups were gutted by an arson fire Wednesday, causing "considerable damage."

A spokesman for the peace groups said at least $4,000 worth of furniture and equipment was lost in the two blazes.

The fire department said flammable liquids were poured on printing material to ignite the fires in the offices of the northern California peace action coalition and the Student Mobilization Committee.

Pamphlet Available On VD Crisis

A vivid green pamphlet entitled "The V.D. Crisis" has been published for public distribution by the Marin County Department of Public Health Services.

Dr. Carolyn B. Albrecht, county health officer, said the pamphlet, available by writing to health educator Natalie Posner in Room 400 of the Civic Center, "contains answers to many questions that people have about VD and what can be done to control the present epidemic of gonorrhea."

Love, Hate Notes Flood Tax Board

SACRAMENTO (UPI) —A strange collection of love and hate notes has inundated the state Franchise Tax Board along with the usual flood of income tax returns this year.

Among the potpourri of taxpayers' messages opened by frenzied state workers Wednesday was a letter from a young woman explaining why she had enclosed signed W-2 forms.

"In case you were wondering, IB did not try to burn my W-2s out of anger," she wrote the board. "I would have liked to.

"I had a slight misfortune with a candle. Trying to be romantic and figure taxes at the same time does not work (Hah!)."

Another taxpayer wrote: "If the state of California slides into the sea, do I get my $64 back?"

"If this is for the war on poverty, where do I surrender?" was one wry remark.

A merchant seaman tried a novel approach through taxes in trying to get a date. He told the board he was 25 years old, 5'10" and 170 pounds.

"I just want to meet a nice girl in this off the-wall way to do it," he wrote. "Please write back if you know somebody who wants to try this."

Other notes were caustic.

"Please use this money more wisely than you have been in the past," one taxpaper wrote.

One person enclosed a button with the note: "I would give my shirt but the U. S. federal got it."

But others enclosed good tidings. One taxpayer sent a beautiful Christmas card with a partridge and a pear tree. "Have a Merry Christmas" was crossed out and scribbled in was the salutation: "Have a happy tax season."

A spokesman for the tax board said thus far it had processed 2 1-4 million returns of the 6 million expected this year. The deadline for filing state returns was midnight Monday.

He said about $415 million has been banked by the state thus far of an expected total of about $1.2 billion.

He noted that the state switched to a withholding system this year so next year most of the money will have been collected before income tax return time.

The board spokesman also said some taxpayers this year forgot to claim the 20 per cent forgiveness deduction because of the switch to the withholding system. He said in such cases the tax workers will recompute the return to include the forgiveness and mail the forgetful taxpayer a refund.

Five Girls To Compete For Tile Of Miss Sonoma County

Five Marin and Southern Sonoma girls will be competing for the title of Miss Sonoma County at the 25th annual pageant tomorrow at 8 p.m. at the Santa Rosa Veterans Memorial Auditorium.

Local contestants include Linda Watson of Mill Valley, Susan Dennis and Holly Reynolds of Novato and Patty Blundell and Jill Rath of Rohnert Park.

Other contestants are Carey Moore, Gail Poladian and Joan Goode of Santa Rosa and Sally Christianson of Healdsburg.

Miss Watson, 21, is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. D. Watson of Mill Valley and is a senior dance major at Sonoma State College. She graduated from Tamalpais High School in 1968. Miss Reynolds, 20, is the daughter of James R. Reynolds of San Rafael and Patricia Reynolds of San Francisco. She is a home economics major at Santa Rosa Junior College and graduated from San Marin High School in 1970.

Miss Dennis, 20, is also a 1970 graduate of San Marin and attends Santa Rosa Junior College. She is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George Dennis of Novato.

Miss Blundell, 18, is the daughter of June Blundell of Santa Rosa. She graduated from Rancho Cotate High School, Rohnert Park, in 1971 and is employed by State Farm Insurance. Jill Rath, 23, is a senior at Sonoma State, majoring in sociology. She is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Rath of Sebastopol.

A total of $1,200 will be given in scholarships at the pageant and the winner will go on to compete in the Miss California Pageant at Santa Cruz in June.

Power Cut By Backhoe In Novato

Power was out to about 600 customers in northeast Novato yesterday after a backhoe accidently flipped a private telephone line into the primary power line, according to John Zima, manager of the Novato office of Pacific Gas and Electric Co.

The mishap occurred between Highway 101 and the Northwestern Pacific Railroad Co. tracks, north of Atherton Avenue, shortly before 11:30 a.m. The backhoe, owned by MGM Construction Co., was working on pipeline relocation for the North Marin County Water District in connection with the Highway 101 bypass project.

Zima said it flipped the private telephone line used by PG&E.

Power was restored to 95 per cent of the customers in about 30 minutes, Zima said.

Sausalito Nursery Sets Spring Fair

Sausalito Nursery School will sponsor a spring fair May 6 and 7 in downtown Sausalito, behind the Bank of America branch on Bridgeway from 11 a.m. to 5 p.m. each day.

According to school officials, arts, crafts and flea market booths will be set up in the fund raising event.

Ex-Marin Schools Chief May Leave Berkeley Job

I-J Special Report

BERKELEY — Dr. Richard L. Foster, former Marin County schools superintendent who has resigned as chief of Berkeley schools, held out the possibility yesterday he may recant.

"Closed minds are the mark of narrow people," Foster told the Independent-Journal.

Foster announced his resignation, effective in April 1973, at a board of education meeting Tuesday night, although the five-member board, with two abstentions, voted to reject it.

The superintendent, whose career has been shadowed by controversy, indicated yesterday he was firm in his decision at this time but that the situation could change within the next year.

He said his resignation was due in part to the "administration being treated less than . . . men." He did not elaborate.

Foster added he always has been of the belief that urban school administrators should "stay on for three, five years, get an 'R and R' (rest and recreation), then move on."

Foster was namd to the Berkeley job in 1969, several months after resigning as superintendent of the San Ramon Valley Unified School District bacause of what he termed the "attacks of a highly vocal rightist group."

Foster, long a fighter for desegregation and special educational opportunities for minorities, had widespread support when his term began, but had come under fire within the last year.

Many of Berkeley's teachers game him a "no confidence" vote in a poll conducted in March 1971 by the Berkeley Educators' Association and the Berkeley Federation of Teachers.

Rev. W. Haziah Williams, a black member of the board of education, accused two white board members Tuesday night of undercutting the superintendent.

McCarthy Marin Leader Is Selected

Richmond Young of Corte Madera, a former College of Marin student, has been named coordinator of the Marin McCarthy for President Campaign, supporting former Sen. Eugene J. McCarthy.

Young, 20, is president of the Marin County Young Democrats for Change, Marin County Democratic Central Committee and chairman of the California Democratic Council Youth Caucus.

Two Awarded Scholarships In Teaching

Two students at Dominican College in San Rafael have been awarded $500 scholarships for teacher training by the California Congress of Parents and Teachers.

One of the winners, Delores B. Booker of 26 Mount Whitney Drive, San Rafael, is working for an elementary school credential. She is a graduate of Hampton Institute in Virginia and has been doing teacher's aid and library aid work at Dixie School in Terra Linda and Wolfe Grade School in Kentfield.

The other winner is Mary Johnson of Ukiah, who is working for a credential in special education.

Military Reservists To Have San Rafael Session

About 400 military reserve leaders are scheduled to attend a convention of the California Units of the Reserve Officers Association of the United States in San Rafael May 5-7.

Retired Army Lt. Col. Aaron E. Rucker of Kentfield, convention chairman, said the business session will start at 9 a.m. May 6 at the Holiday Inn with a flag pageant.

Maj. Gen. Rollin B. Moore Jr., commander of the Western Air Force Reserve Region, Hamilton Air Force Base, will be the keynote speaker.

On the afternoon of May 6, leaders will discuss "What's in Store for the Reserve Forces in the Future?" at three separate section meetings.

Maj. Gen. O. A. Leahy, deputy commanding general, Sixth Army, will speak at the Army section; Maj. Gen. Homer I. Lewis, chief of Air Force Reserve, at the Air Force section; and Rear Adm. Edward Wilson of the Naval Reserve, and Capt. Robert M. Pond, deputy chief of staff, 12th Naval District, at the Naval section.

Officers will be elected and installed at a formal military banquet that evening.

The agpipe Band of the Army Reserves' 91st Division and the Marin Chapter of the Sweet Adelines will entertain.

John T. Carlton of Washington, D. C., executive of the Reserve Officers Association of the United States, will be the installing officer.

A GIANT RACKET

Federal Jaws Close Trapping Of 'Gators

By JOHN DILLIN
The Christian Science Monitor
News Service

ATLANTA — Federal jaws have snapped shut on the multi-million-dollar alligator hide racket. Trading has almost halted in the past few weeks, U.S. officials say.

A two-year probe by federal agents has uncovered the names of 460 persons, including just about every man and woman illegally trading 'gators in the southeastern United States, the officials add.

As many as 112 people may be indicted in the next 12 months.

Alligators are on the list of endangered species in the U.S. and cannot legally be hunted. But prices are high, and thousands of skins are shipped covertly to Japan every year for processing into wallets, belts, handbags, and shoes.

The current federal crackdown bids to blunt what U.S. Attorney John W. Stokes Jr. in Atlanta calls "the greatest slaughter of wildlife since the American buffalo was killed off."

Few people realize how many alligators have been killed in the past two decades and what damage this has done to the natural environment in Florida, Louisiana, and Georgia.

In south Florida's Everglades, for example, Dr. Frank Craighead, Sr., an ecologist, estimated that in 1950 there were two million alligators. Today he estimates that 98 or 99 per cent of these have been killed, mostly by poaching. (Officials in Everglades National Park, which includes only a portion of the Everglades, say from 90 to 95 per cent of the alligators have been killed in the park itself.)

Hundreds of thousands more have been slaughtered in southern Louisiana and southeastern Georgia. Butchering goes on every night in the swamps of central Florida.

Across the southeast there are about 100 poachers, or hunters. Some make as much as $1,000 for a single night's work.

But government prosecutors have chosen to move first in this crackdown against Quince Clayton Plott, an Atlanta businessman who is charged with being a middleman in the alligator racket.

A federal grand jury here returned a 40-count indictment against Mr. Plott and his son, Christopher Joel Plott. They are charged specifically with receiving 6,294 skins from a wide range of persons in Louisiana, Texas, and Florida.

U.S. Attorney Stokes says about 40 persons in several states may eventually be charged under federal laws, and about 80 under state laws. Federal law comes into play only when skins cross state lines.

Federal jurisdiction in this area began in 1969 with passage of the Endangered Species Act. Investigations are carried out by agents of the Bureau of Sport Fisheries and Wildlife, division of management and enforcement, Department of the Interior.

State game officials cooperated in the current probe.

But states have been generally unsuccessful in protecting their alligator populations, despite night patrols and other special efforts. Federal agents, however, were able to work in the other direction when they seized voluminous records applying to the alligator racket.

With these records, agents learned names, dates of sales, prices paid, and other vital information. "Even illegal businesses must keep good records," Mr. Stokes noted.

Records showed that most skins from the United States are going to one firm — Inoue & Fujai — in Tokyo. There are no laws in Japan prohibiting such imports.

Best prices — about $6 a foot — were paid to hunters for 'gator hides in the three-to-five-foot range. The middleman got about $9 a foot once the skins were aboard a ship bound for Japan.

This middleman's price has now leaped to $22 a foot because of the federal crackdown. But few are moving, even at that price, agents assert.

Only unhappy feature of the federal effort was voiced by Frederick A. Williams, regional supervisor of the Bureau of Sports Fisheries and Wildlife in Atlanta.

Williams said that many of those 460 people suspected of trading in skins will escape prosecution because the statue of limitations ran out during the lengthy investigation. All the charges are misdemeanors and — under Florida law, for example — the government has only two years to prosecute.

The probe could have moved much faster — one agent estimated three times faster — if the wildlife agency had been given additional personnel to enforce the Endangered Species Act.

Not one officer has been added, however, in the Southeast region, and it was necessary to build the entire case by taking officers from other duties, such as enforcing migratory bird laws.

Even now, Williams says, he could use "at least a dozen investigators... full time to continue this investigation."

The probe has turned up other significant violations of "a similar nature and significance," but checking into them must be postponed indefinitely for lack of manpower, he says.

Williams says he hopes this case will call attention to what he considers a serious need for both more money and manpower to enforce the growing number of wildlife laws on the books.

CAN SMILE AGAIN — This giant alligator in the Florida swamps has something to smile about. Federal agents have almost shut down illegal trappings of 'gators for their valuable hides.

Serious Crimes Continue Moderate Climb

By PETER C. STUART
The Christian Science Monitor News Service

WASHINGTON — "Slowed down" . . . "tapering off" . . . "actual decrease."

Any American reading these descriptions of the nation's crime — issued by the Department of Justice in 1970, 1971, 1972, respectively — might well conclude that crime is declining.

It isn't. Serious crime actually continues to mount — by 31 per cent during the past three years judging by the department's own figures, albeit at a slackened pace.

The rosy pronouncements, critics say, began appearing not long after the Nixon administration came into office largely on a platform of "law and order."

Traditionally, crime statistics were left to the Federal Bureau of Investigation. The FBI routinely compiled the nation's only reliable figures, then released them to the public.

The results were workmanlike, but — in a period of rising crime rates — normally more chilling than cheery.

But in 1970, when the annual crime reports began reviewing the Nixon years, the Department of Justice started issuing its own interpretation of the FBI figures. A Justice public information officer has conceded that his office rewrites the FBI analyses.

Critics see a "self-fulfilling prophesy" — the President promises to cut crime, then his Justice Department interprets the annual crime statistics to suggest that Nixon is fulfilling his pledge. The administration denies it.

Critics add that the Justice Department was headed, until recently by the same man who ran the President's law and order campaign (Atty. Gen. John N. Mitchell).

Grumbling also has been detected, by some, from the FBI (an arm of the Justice Department) and other professional law enforcement officers.

Here's how the crime increase of the Nixon years have been described by the Justice Department:

In 1969, a 12 per cent increase in serious crime. "The rate of crime slowed down substantially" (from 17 per cent in 1968).

1970, an 11 per cent increase. "The second year in a row that crime statistics showed a tapering off of the sharp upward swing recorded during the mid-1940's."

1971, a 6 per cent increase. "Fifty-three of the nation's major cities reported an actual decrease in serious crime," Justice reported Thursday, March 30. It termed the nationwide rise "the smallest increase in six years."

Crime rates for these past six years show a continuing upward trend, although modifying: 1966, 11 per cent; 1967, 16 per cent; 1968, 17 per cent; 1969, 12 per cent; 1970, 11 per cent; 1971, 6 per cent.

Behind the "things are getting better" optimism of the Justice Department press release, however, last week's 1971 figures offer little comfort for crime-plagued Americans.

Violent crime (murder, rape, robbery, assault) rose at a sharper rate than overall crime — 9 per cent.

Offsetting that drop in crime in 53 major cities are hefty increases in the once safe suburbs (11 per cent) and rural areas (10 per cent).

The growing crime problem in suburban areas was analyzed about a year ago by then-Attorney General Mitchell in a magazine interview:

"Mainly (it occurs) because of the rapid growth of suburban population. Also . . . it may be partly because the city police departments are becoming so effective that criminals are moving their operations out into the suburbs, where police are not quite so effective."

Even in some cities where the crime wave is ebbing, the new figures left some citizens' fears uncalmed. Here in Washington, for example, overall crime dropped 13 per cent. But the year brought 54 more murders than the preceding year.

©1972 The Christian Science Publishing Society

BUSY AS EVER — This picture taken recently in the nation's capital shows that police are as busy as ever, no matter what crime statistics show. While minor crimes have been reported on the decline during the past three years, major crimes continue to spiral.

Private Schools Feel Pinch Of State Colleges

By KENNETH G. GEHRET
The Christian Science Monitor News Service

In recent months, high-school senior Johnny Smith has spent long hours poring over college catalogs, checking out loan and scholarship opportunities, talking with his school guidance counselor on the pros and cons of various colleges and universities.

Now he has made some decisions and mailed applications to three admissions offices.

Options open to Johnny — quality options — were many. A few decades ago he would have settled on a college within a narrower range. If money were not a pressing problem, he probably would have selected at that early date one of the fine private colleges that abound in the United States.

Or if his family were less affluent, he might well have limited his choice to a public college or university in his state. That would have held expenses down, both on tuition and travel. He might even have commuted, if the distance were not too great.

But these savings in cost of a college education would have been realized at a price — a second class education. In those days, many state-run colleges were emerging from agricultural and mechanical institutions and normal schools.

Today, the situation has dramatically changed. Although quality varies among state supported campuses (as it does elsewhere), these institutions as a group have closed the gap considerably. Some of them now rank with the best of private colleges. And their costs remain lower. Also, they often are more accessible.

One result: Johnny and his peers tend to favor publicly supported colleges and universities over private ones. So state campuses now attract five students to private colleges' two, in contrast to a 50-50 division of enrollment until 20 years ago. And the disparity continues to grow.

Feeling the pinch, officials of a number of private institutions are crying "unfair competition." They want state help to put their campuses on a more nearly equal footing with ublic colleges and universities in charges.

They reason this way: By drawing on private funds, independent and church related colleges save the taxpayers' money. Burgeoning enrollments in public colleges require vast outlays for new buildings and facilities, while places in many private colleges go unfilled. The state should make use of these available places, thus saving on building costs. It could do this by making attendance at private colleges more attractive — either by a partial tuition subsidy for students choosing to go there, or by raising charges levied at state colleges.

A NEW BALLGAME — Some of these students at a state university might have gone to a private school years ago. But rising tuition costs and just as good schooling are sending more of them to state universities now. And this has resulted in an outcry from some of the nation's top private colleges and universities.

Either way, a fairer balance would be struck between the two types of institutions, proponents contend.

One advocate of state aid is Dr. John R. Silber, president of Boston University. He has said: "There is no logic in driving private universities to the point of bankruptcy in order to duplicate the facilities they now have by creating public colleges. Private universities could educate a lot more students without any additional capital outlays."

Dr. Silber claims that if his institution had been given the funds spent in developing the University of Massachusetts' Boston campus, it could have educated 20,000 students "in perpetuity."

State university officials dispute the educator's logic. But this is the kind of conflict in the area of public vs. private education that is beginning to surface.

The eruption is caused by greater intensity of feeling, because the stakes are now higher. Many private colleges and universities see themselves as approaching the point of fiscal desperation, if not yet of bankruptcy, and are struggling for a way out.

Inflation and declining income (relative or actual) have made a bad situation worse. Earlier efforts to increase income through tuition rises proved counter-productive, encouraging more students to enter state colleges.

Private institutions no doubt prefer subsidy — which is money in their pockets — to higher charges at public colleges as a way of redressing the balance between the two kinds of campuses. Plans have been proposed in several states, whereby private colleges would receive a state payment for each student admitted. The amount, however, would probably be modest, perhaps $100 per student.

General aid is already granted in some states. New York, for example, awards colleges $400 for each bachelor's and master's degree issued, and $2,400 for each doctoral degree.

Although private colleges are unlikely to abandon the effort to win more state funding, they now are lining up behind proposals for higher tuition at state colleges as an equalizer.

Expressing the sentiments of administrators on many private campuses, Dr. Robert W. Hartman of the Brookings Institution said at a recent conference:

"A seller of a service who has to recover his costs from a group of consumers who can get the same thing free — or nearly so — down the block is not a seller with a rosy future. As long as the gap between the tuition charged by the private and public sectors remains as wide as it is, the private sector will be in for a rough time."

Dr. Hartman envisions an arrangement by which students at public colleges and universities pay a reasonable tuition, with some of the money going into scholarships and some into aid for private colleges.

This is essentially the plan advocated by a group of 106 New York State private institutions. Their combined deficits last year were $29 million and are expected to total about the same this year. Private colleges and universities in the state report some 15,000 vacancies, which they attribute to the expansion of the State University of New York (SUNY) and its low-tuition policy.

But this is now about to change. Beginning with this year's summer session, SUNY's tuition will be increased substantially. Instead of a flat $550 per year fee for undergraduates, freshmen and sophomores will be charged $650, and juniors and seniors $800. Graduate students will pay correspondingly more.

Higher fees run counter to the recent emphasis on open admissions or freer access, aimed particularly at minorities and other low income individuals who might otherwise be denied a college education. On the other hand, voices have been raised in opposition to open enrollment on the grounds that those able to pay should do so, rather than rely on taxpayer support.

The New York plan appears to walk the line between both viewpoints. It protects the interest of poorer students by exempting from tuition those whose family income is in the "lowest bracket."

Where family income is below $12,000, the student still gets a tuition break. For example, a freshman whose family has net taxable income of $7,000 now pays $350 ($200 less than the full amount); under the new sechedule, he will pay $450.

The purpose of the increases, according to SUNY Chancellor Ernest L. Boyer, is to preserve the quality of academic programs in the face of an appropriations freeze. Gov. Nelson A. Rockefeller's proposed budget for the new fiscal year recommends that state university spending be held to the previous year's figure of $481 million.

In announcing the tuition hikes, Dr. Boyer made no reference to the action as designed in any way to strengthen the position of private colleges. Yet the effect is in line with the desires of the 109 college group in the state, moving public college tuition closer to that of the private institutions.

Opposing these tuition increases, the New York Times stated editorially: "Even if this maneuver were to boost the private institution's sagging enrollment, which is doubtful, it would do nothing to strengthen their long-term financial position...

"Far more productive... could be Rockefeller's appeal for a statewide and regional cooperation between the public and private sectors."

This theme is being heard more frequently. After hearing a private university president extol the virtures of private institutions over public as a reason for state aid, one Midwestern state university spokesman responded in conversation: "Now's the time to close ranks. Nothing's to be gained by private and public universities fighting for the same dollars. If we aren't careful, education itself will be harmed, and we'll both lose out."

Nodding vigorous agreement is Dr. Robert Wood, president of the University of Massachusetts, a fast growing state institution.

The university's board of trustees has announced a policy of collaboration between the university and the private universities and colleges within the state. It is evident in the cooperative arrangement in the university's "home town" of Amherst, where the university and four nearby private colleges joined forces to organize an experimenting college, and all five make up a viable consortium.

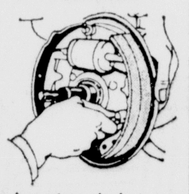
Guaranteed Brake Reline

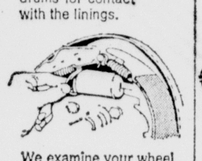
$39.70 Drum-type Brakes
Fords, Chevys, Plymouths and American Compacts. Other models higher.

We do a lot more than reline your brakes...here's what we do:

We replace your worn linings with new bonded brake linings on all four wheels.

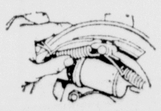


Inspect your brake drums for contact with the linings.

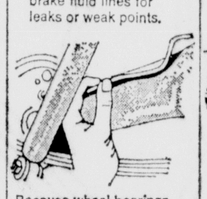


We examine your wheel cylinders and master cylinder for leaks.

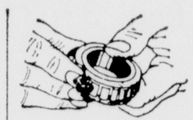
Brake shoe return springs are checked for proper tension.



Next, we inspect the brake fluid lines for leaks or weak points.



Because wheel bearings can be badly damaged if the original grease has dried and caked, we clean and repack the outer bearings on both front wheels.



The final step is to add heavy duty brake fluid and road test your car.

As you can see...your money goes a long way at Firestone. It buys you prompt and dependable brake service by expert brake mechanics. Why not give us a try?

Senkaku Islands Crisis Looms

By ELIZABETH POND
The Christian Science Monitor News Service

TOKYO — A slow-burning crisis may be developing over the technicalities of who really owns the Senkaku islands located to the northeast of Taiwan.

So far the Senkakus issue appears to be an irritant rather than a major bone of contention between Japan and the U.S., diplomatic sources suggest.

American officials are uncertain just where the repeated comments by Foreign Minister Takeo Fukuda are leading, however. Diplomats see a danger of escalation from the momentum either of domestic politics or increasing friction between Tokyo and Washington.

The uninhabited but potentially oil-rich Senkaku islands, located between Okinawa and Taiwan, are claimed concurrently by Japan, Communist China, and the Republic of China. The U.S. has administered these islands since the end of World War II as a part of the Ryukyu islands (Okinawa and its surrounding islands).

The U.S. is returning the Ryukuyus (and the Senkakus) to Japanese administration on May 15, but it has reserved its position on the legal ownership of the Senkakus. It says only that it is returning administration of the Senkakus to the country from which it took over in 1945.

Paradoxically, however (as the Japanese are quick to point out), the U.S. will continue to use a bombing range on the islands under its security treaty with Japan.

Japan is unhappy with American neutrality on the subject and would like to have Washing- ton endorse its claims. Fukuda has made several statements to this effect in the past few days. He was reported as saying in the Diet that Tokyo might make a strong protest to Washington if American ambiguity continues.

SENKAKU ISLANDS — These islands, located northeast of Taiwan, are the focal point of what may be a slow burning crisis over who really owns them. So far the issue, according to U.S. and Japanese diplomatic sources, is more irritating than major.

©1972 The Christian Science Publishing Society

It is difficult to determine the exact context and meaning of Fukuda's words, however. Earlier, he reportedly told the Diet that he would not ask for American support for Japan's territorial claims, on the grounds that the islands so clearly belong to Japan that no American endorsement is necessary.

Some foreign diplomats think they detect a coordinated position on the Senkakus that has been thought through in advance by the Foreign Ministry. The ministry, however, has not yet made a formal approach to the U.S., informed sources report.

Fukuda might be making his statements on the Senkakus for the benefit of domestic politics. He is widely considered to be the front-runner to succeed Prime Minister Eisaku Sato this year. However, he has been losing ground recently, both in larnering party votes and on the glamorous China issue. In these areas Fukuda's chief rival within the ruling Liberal Democratic Party, International Trade and Industry Minister Kakuei Tanaka, has been making rapid gains.

The foreign minister has therefore shown himself eager to take modest initiatives that would show he is not totally bound to the pro-Taiwan and pro-American policies of the LDP's right wing, with which Fukuda is associated. Equally, he has shown himself eager to publicize his experience in Tanaka's weak spot, foreign affairs.

In this context Japan's claim to the Senkakus is an ideal popular issue for Fukuda, as it is the one aspect of the China dispute on which practically all Japanese are united. The Communist Party is reserving its position, but the other opposition parties — no matter how strong their pro-Peking impulses — support Japan's territorial claims. So also does the generally pro-Peking press.

An alternative interpretation of Fukuda's statements on the U.S. and the Senkakus might be found in increased friction and non-communication between Japan and the U.S. Ever since the "Nixon shocks" of last year, working contracts between the two countries have deteriorated. Thus, to some Japanese politicians and bureaucrats, Washington has appeared to be bringing deliberate, concerted pressure on Tokyo in the realms of China policy and economic policy.

Moreover, Japan has found the U.S. withholding major and minor information from it (as well as speaking with different tongues in the State Department, Defense Department, and White House). Whether by reflex or by design, Japan has begun to reciprocate and to withhold information from the U.S. that it would have shared freely in the past.

So far the spat has been confined to minor issues, and it may be that the Senkakus fit into this pattern.

Some diplomats, however, fear unintentional escalation of the issue. Whether the dynamics of the Senkakus flurry are to be found in domestic politics or in a Tokyo-Washington tiff, a momentum might develop that would be difficult to stop.

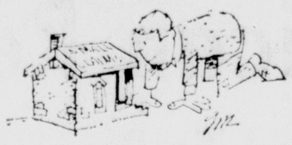
Advantages Of Claims Courts



Since March 1972 the small claims court has been letting people sue for up to $500. The old limit was $300.

Small claims courts have advantages. They're quick, informal, inexpensive. But they have disadvantages too. Before you file, consider what it cannot do for you.

One problem: if you're the one who files the suit, you've only got one shot. If you lose, you can't appeal, you can't get a new trial, and you can't get the court to consider new evidence after the judgment. But if you win, the other fellow may appeal — because he wasn't the one who picked the court in the first place.

Also, you're your own attorney in small claims. Sometimes that's good. You save fees. But you aren't likely to present your case quite as well to the judge.

If you win you have all the remedies of a judgment creditor to enforce your judgment.

But suppose you're the defendant in a small claims court? If you lose, and want to appeal, here's what you do. Post a bond, file a notice of appeal and if you perfect your appeal, you'll be given a trial "de novo" (new trial) in superior court. The court hears the case as if tried for the first time.

You might counter-claim against the plaintiff in the small claims court. Then if you get judgment, the plaintiff can appeal. But his appeal is restricted to the counterclaim.

Small claims cases have to be heard within 60 days after filing. The hearings go fast. Either side may call witnesses to testify. And they can bring in books or records. But neither may have an attorney present the case.

The judge has broad powers over the evidence presented. He many informally make any investigation about the dispute. He can give judgment and make such orders as to time of payment or otherwise may seem to the judge to be right and just.

Balaguer, Bosch Are The Dominican Republic Today

Both Expected To Play Key 1974 Election Roles

SANTA DOMINGO, — From behind a paper-laden, ornately carved desk in his corner office in the Dominican presidential palace, Joaquin Balaguer for six years has been carefully orchestrating the course of events in this island nation. He shows every intention of wanting to continue doing so for years to come.

But only blocks away, Juan Bosch, who once sat briefly in the same office and is something of a folk hero to many Dominicans, waits his opportunity to once again play a more commanding role in Dominican events. He has recently begun to regear his oft-persecuted political movement, te Partido Revolucionario Dominicano (PRD), which remains the island's most cohesive political movement.

In many ways, the story of the Dominican Republic today is the story of these two men and their works and actions.

It is likely to be that way for years to come. Although there are obviously other Dominican politicians businessmen, military leaders, and professionals of prominence, the feeling persists here that it is only Joaquin Balaguer and Juan Bosch who count.

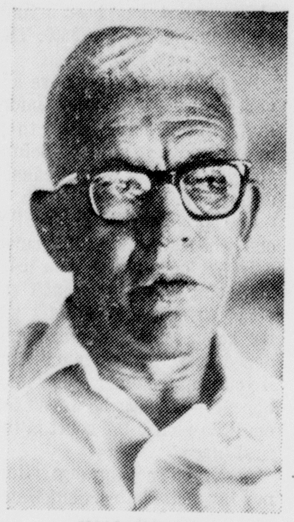
Moreover, much Dominican attention is already focused on the 1974 presidential elections, in which the two are bound to play the key roles.

The campaign actually has begun. To be sure, Balaguer has not said he will seek a third term, nor has Bosch indicated whether he will contest the 1974 vote rather than sitting it out as he did in 1971. But these two very dissimilar men who have so frequently clashed in the past — verbally and politically — are actively involved in the 1974 contest.

President Balaguer and former President Bosch already have registered opposing views on the mixed realities of Dominican life today: economic conditions improving in only some sectors of society; staggeringly high unemployment; a continuing, although somewhat reduced, wave of police inspired terrorism against many of Bosch's followers; and repeated rumors of possible military action against the Balaguer government.

Balaguer is convinced that his six years in office have brought a significant degree of stability and political peace to the much tortured island, and that the result has been a broad based economic growth.

He can cite a roster of impressive economic gains; a seven per cent growth rate last year, with perhaps a percentage point more this year; improved sugar quotas on the United States markets as well as good sugar prices on the international market with a resultant improvement in Dominican exports; impressive new construction, particularly in Santo Domingo, including a new National Theater and a National Library.



JUAN BOSCH
Former president

But on the debit side of the ledger, nagging unemployment clouds the economic bubble and shows no sign of improvement. At least a third of all ablebodied Dominican men are out of work. Even massive government-sponsored, make-work projects — such as beautifying the road leading to Santo Domingo's airport — have failed to make much of a dent in the unemployment problem.

"It simply won't go away," a Dominican labor official close to the Balaguer government admitted, adding that "the more we try to solve it, the more apparent it becomes."

Part of the awareness of the problem is directly due to Bosch, who has made much of the issue in his frequent radio addresses to the nation. An articulate orator, the former president has lost no opportunity to suggest that the Balaguer government has failed to solve the pressing social problems that have long beset Dominican regimes.

Actually, Bosch's radio appearances serve to illustrate the wide gulf that separates the present power structure around Balaguer and the forces around Bosch and the PRD. That gulf is at the heart of the Dominican problem. It springs from the 30-year Trujillo dictatorship, which ended with the assassination in 1961 of Rafael Leonidas Trujillo Molina.

Although the dictator has been gone for 11 years, his legacy of hatreds and rivalries remains. The Trujillo stamp is firmly on Dominican politics, and it is likely to be years before the effects of his personal and often corrupt control of Dominican economic affairs is removed.

In a nation in which the Trujillo legacy looms so large, Joaquin Balaguer has the right credentials for retaining power. He accommodated himself with Trujillo in the dictator's later years, a fact that has made him acceptable to the Dominican power apparatus and in military circles. That he has ably manipulated the power apparatus in no way minimizes the influence which that apparatus possesses in Dominican life.

By contrast, Juan Bosch never had the right credentials. During the Trujillo years, he spoke out from exile. When he returned in the heady days immediately after the Trujillo assassination, his popular reception was more than the power elite could accept. When elected president, he served only seven months before the military ousted him.

Whether the military would now permit him to assume the presidency, if he were to run and win in 1974, is doubtful. But this does not lessen his influence in Dominican politics — a fact which Joaquin Balaguer may well appreciate more than most.

It is widely reported in Santo Domingo that President Balaguer is Bosch's most ardent listener. It is said that the president uses the Bosch broadcasts as a weather vane, to help scent out the political winds. The story may be apocryphal and President Balaguer will not answer questions on it. But there is little doubt that the Bosch broadcasts have an impact on the presidential office.

For example, in mid-1971, a terrorist campaign against PRD supporters was building to new heights with, it was widely believed, official connivance. Police units were said to look the other way when paramilitary elements killed, wounded, or kidnapped PRD supporters.

Bosch on numerous occasions used his oratorical skills to stir massive public opinion against the police and indirectly against the government.

He had good cause. At least 100 PRD militants were assassinated during 1971. The PRD, a moderate leftist political movement, received the brunt of the terrorist campaign.

In September, President Balaguer, reacting to the stories, ousted the police chief, who was widely accused of permitting the campaign to go on. In his place, the President named Gen. Neit R. Novar Seigas. The number of terrorist incidents declined sharply within days, and the Balaguer government has made a determined effort to downplay the violence that seemed so evident nine months ago and which caused widespread public indignation.

But that violence is generally believed to be just below the surface. Both President Balaguer and Bosch say it would not take much to let it spill over. Indeed, the antagonisms that were so much a part of the Dominican civil war of 1965, which was truncated by U.S. intervention, are almost as strong today as they were in 1965.

There is considerable speculation that the coming presidential campaign may prove the most bitter election since the Trujillo assassination.

"Balaguer has worked hard to smooth over the cleavage between the established power on the island and the forces which in many instances support Juan Bosch," a long-time foreign resident of the island commented. "But despite his own tremendous appeal with the masses, he has to realize that gulf . . . is as wide today as it was in the civil war."

Whether such a pessimistic view is valid may be debatable, but it is held by a great many observers — foreigners and Dominicans. The very presence of Joaquin Balaguer and Juan Bosch, moreover, suggests there may be some truth in the view, for these two men who so dominate Dominican politics represent the two forces.

"The more time goes on," a foreign diplomat commented, "the more the events and the cast of characters remains the same."

South Viet Land Reform Program's Success Varies

By DANIEL SOUTHERLAND
The Christian Science Monitor News Service

SAIGON — The Saigon government's land reform program now has reached an advanced stage, with new land ownership titles issued for more than half of the eligible tenant farmers.

Under this U.S.-supported "land to the tiller" program — now entering its third year — about 2.5 million acres of privately owned riceland are supposed to be transferred free of charge to about a million tenant farmers.

But progress varies from one region to another.

In the central lowlands, for instance, the program has gotten virtually nowhere. Land is scarce, and in numerous cases landlords have intimidated tenant farmers and defrauded them of the benefits of the program.

Another problem is that tradition-bound tenants and sharecroppers, who are deeply mistrustful of the government, hesitate to apply for land titles. The reform program in the central lowlands could eventually prove to be more of a liability than an asset.

In the central highlands, the land reform program for the Montagnards is also beset with problems and has yet to get moving.

But in the Mekong Delta, the statistics indicate that this much heralded program to abolish tenancy and win peasant support is moving along in most provinces, sometimes ahead of schedule.

Because the delta contains most of the country's riceland and most of its tenant farmers, this is the area where the government is most hopeful of using land reform to build political support.

But the statistics tell only part of the story. Interviews by this correspondent with farmers in three delta provinces indicate that the political impact of the land reform program may be minimal, or at least much less dramatic than some U.S. and Vietnamese officials had hoped.

Even in so-called secure areas of the countryside, many farmers seem to cling to their traditional neutrality. Although they make accommodations with the government when forced to, they still withhold any firm commitment to it.

The farmer's suspicion of the government is deep rooted, and it will probably take a great deal more than land reform at this point to gain their allegiance. Other factors, such as a lack of effective government political organization at the village level, also weigh in the balance.

Most important of all, perhaps, many farmers remain to be convinced that the Thieu government is going to last. To them, President Thieu appears to be a dubious creation of the Americans.

In areas which were only recently secured by the government or are still contested by the Viet Cong, the Viet Minh and the Viet Cong broke the landlords' hold years ago. In these areas, the farmers have not been paying rents for many years, and the land reform program appears to some merely to confirm a distribution of land already made by the Communists.

Some farmers criticize the land reform program because it does not give land to the farm laborers in the delta, who are one step lower on the socio-economic scale than the tenant farmers.

Officials say that such truly landless peasants make up less than 10 per cent of the population in the delta. But in view of some farmers, the government's neglect of this group is significant.

If the land-to-the-tiller law is aimed at creating "social justice," they say, then why isn't this rural proletariat being given land? After all, they say, the Viet Minh gave land to the poorest people during the war against the French.

Another neglected group, critics say, are soldiers who were tenant farmers when they got drafted and who may not have any land to go back to when they are released from the army.

Some farmers remain skeptical of land reform because they fear that it may be a prelude to heavy government taxation.

The falsification of documents by landlords, in collusion with local officials, and a pro-landlord bias among judges handling land cases are other factors reducing the impact of the land reform program.

It is difficult to tell how widespread landlord evasion of the law has been, but once farmers feel relaxed with an interviewer, they talk at length about deals being made at the expense of the tenant farmers who are supposed to benefit from the land reform law.

In a number of cases, farmers who have tried to take their complaints to court have been asked to make appearances before a judge month after month, without ever having their cases settled.

If a farmer lives in a village far from the province capital, such trips to court can be expensive and trying.

And farmers are discovering that they have little chance of getting a fair hearing. The courts only accept written depositions, and this is a tremendous barrier to many illiterate farmers.

While the landlord class is not nearly as strong as it once was, the landowners still have great influence in the courts.

The favorite landlord dodge has been to get tenanted land declared as land required to raise funds for annual feasts and other activities in honor of one's ancestors.

Several farmers among those surveyed complained, for instance, that they had suddenly been told that the land they farmed as tenants for many years was "ancestral worship land." Under the law, a landlord can retain five hectares (12.35) acres) of such "worship land."

In some cases, farmers say, the landlords have been getting village officials to issue falsified, predated documents showing that a landlord held worship land. In such cases, the tenant must continue to pay rent on the land and cannot obtain ownership of the land even though he is tilling it.

Another way of dodging the law is this: A landlord claims that the tenant farmers working his land are "day laborers." If a landlord can get the government land service chief to agree to this, then he may be able to retain his land.

American land reform officials are aware of the abuses that are occurring, but they contend that the pros of the land reform program still outweigh the cons.

U.S. land reform officials never considered the land-to-the-tiller program to be a panacea that would "win the war."

But U.S. advisers argue that the program is bound to bring economic benefits to the tenants, who make up the majority of the population in the delta. After all, hundreds of thousands of tenants, who are paying high rents to landlords, now will own the land they are tilling and will no longer have to pay rents.

If nothing else, U.S. officials say, the program should put to rest the claim that the Saigon government is a government of landlords.

"There's a considerable element in the United States who think that land reform is going to win the war," said a U.S. official in the delta.

"Land reform is not going to make or break the government," he said. "But it is an important program that can contribute to the credibility of the government.

"There are many abuses, just as there would be in the United States if you were dealing with real property on such a scale," he said. "By local standards, there is a lot of money involved."

On the compensation side of the program, the cost of paying landlords in cash and in bonds over a 10-year period for the loss of their land is expected to come to more than $500 million. The United States has pledged $40 million in aid funds to offset the inflationary impact resulting from the payment of the compensation funds, and the U.S. Congress has appropriated $25 million of that amount so far.

American officials are convinced that the coming year will be the most critical for land reform. So far, the government has done the easiest part of the job, they say.

Now the government must begin to move into areas where coordination with military forces will be required and into other areas where the landlords are firmly entrenched.

In some areas where the Communists never broke the power of the landlords, such as An Giang province in the delta, landlords have intimidated their tenants and made deals with local officials.

How the government handles such difficult cases will be the real test of its determination to carry through with land reform, U.S. advisers say.

IS IT WORKING? — Peasants, many of whom are skeptical of the South Vietnam land reform program, move along a road west of Saigon. In the Mekong Delta, the program is having its most success.

BUSY DAY

Professor Keeps Constantly On Go

By JEFFREY B. NELSON

(Editor's note: The impression of a professor as devoting a major portion of his time to writing and research, with relatively little contact with students, is not universally true. Here is a moe typical situation, a day in the life of Dr. Peter Steese.)

The Christian Science Monitor News Service

FREDONIA, N.Y. — Dr. Peter Steese is in the classroom nine hours a week this semester, and although he frequently teaches his college's normal 12-hour load, the numbers themselves belie his activity.

The English professor at the State University College at Fredonia is rarely stationary because he has professional commitments to teaching, research, campus governance, and community activities.

On a Monday, he arrives on campus at 9 a.m., the usual time, giving himself a few minutes to open mail, check the notes that dot the bulletin board above his desk, and review his class material.

Shortly before 10 he's on his way downstairs to the first section of his undergraduate course, "The Bible as Literature."

He has taught the course for the past 10 years, so it doesn't require much day-to-day work. He spent an hour the night before reviewing his notes —on the evolution of English translations —to add to his substantial and frequent background reading in the area. He also bolstered his knowledge of the subject with a 10-day tour of Israel last fall.

This class is primarily a lecture ("Next time we'll get to the stores," he assures the 40 students), although the lively professor stops to ask questions and listens to comments. "Otherwise the gap between you and the student is too great," he explains.

A Jewish student stays after class for 30 minutes to discuss Hebrew terminology.

The flow of students in and out of Steese's Fenton Hall office is fairly small this morning. Early in the semester not many want counseling on their classwork. A few students who need special permission to enter the already jammed sections plead their cases and increase his enrollment.

Sometime between 11:30 and 12:15 the professor devotes 20 minutes to a senior seminar he will teach later in the day. "Usually I don't count on doing too much at school because I'm interrupted too much," he says with a smile.

At 12:15, as one of the faculty representatives to the United Fund drive, he is in the dorm dining hall for a luncheon meeting.

By 1:30 the dark-haired teacher, who sports a recently grown moustache and longish sideburns, is back in Fenton, although not quite in his office. A fellow professor stops him in the hall to arrange their trip to another state university campus Tuesday for an all-day meeting. Steese has been asked to attend as alternate faculty senator. And a student who serves on the admissions committee (Steese is chairman) talks with him about a coming meeting.

Packing notes and books together, he rushes off to the second section of the Bible course. It's the same material, but he delivers it again with gusto. (He has a resonant voice and sings in the Fredonia Catch Club.)

Questions come up in and after class, ranging from what will be covered on exams to why Adam and Eve put on "aprons" of fig leaves.

Another dash to his office for a quick change of books, and then Steese settles into a chair facing a dozen students for his upper-division seminar on quite a different topic —the age of decadence in British literature. Over the weekend he has spent five hours preparing for this one session, but, he keeps repeating," I should have done more."

The seminar is not quite so enervating as the larger classes, and the experienced teacher is still lively at 4, when he interviews a student who is applying for study in Europe.

At 5:30 p.m., when he usually goes home ("It's a little later this year than others"), he has in his green bookbag a manuscript for a chapter of a rhetoric textbook he is coauthoring.

At home his family takes over, including time for reading to his 9 and 6-year-old daughters. Later he spends two hours reading the book he has assigned for Wednesday's seminar.

A neighbor calls to tell him he has been elected to the community's United Fund board. At 11:30 p.m. the textbook still hasn't been touched.

As he looks back over this one day and his professional activities year round, Steese estimates that he spends 60 per cent of his time on activities relating to teaching, 25 per cent on committee work, and 15 per cent on research. He'd like to lower the committee percentage and increase research.

A scholar of James Boswell, he never has all the time he'd like to study the 18th Century biographer of Samuel Johnson. He did write a paper on the subject for his department's annual symposium (he's on that committee, too), and with a grant last summer he studied Boswell manuscripts at the Yale library.

The English professor's committee work is perhaps heavier than average. "I get on more than I get off of," he offers by way of explanation. But it also reflects his belief, stemming in part from a year as an administrator in the Pennsylvania State University system, that faculty members should participate in college governance.

Steese also serves on several other college committees, as a church elder, has written a textbook on Ecclesiastes and five articles, and participates in the community's Torch Club.

He is helping high schools develop Bible literature courses, and he finds time to rap with students on any topic in any place.

He remains clear about his priorities, nonetheless. "Teaching," he states firmly, "always seems to come first."

ACTIVE — Dr. Peter Steese, a professor of English at State University College at Fredonia, N.Y., fields a student's question. He puts emphasis on being with his students but also has many other activities.

New Seat Belt Law: Traffic Deaths Dip

SYDNEY, Australia (UPI)— A 19 per cent drop in January traffic deaths was attributed by state officials to a new, compulsory seat belt law.

The new law levies an on-the-spot $24 fine on any driver or passenger who police see riding without a seat belt.

MODELING INSTRUCTION

Wendy Ward director Christina Nyberg of Montgomery Ward in the Corte Madera Shopping Center instructs Sugar and Spice students Lisa Berry (left) and Bridget Halley how to make a model's pivot. New classes are now under way.

Sleeping Through X-Ray Examination

NEW YORK (UPI)—Premature infants may sleep right through an X-ray examination at St. Vincent's Hospital where a radiologist and a radiologic technician modified the incubators—at a cost of $10 each—so that the baby never leaves the environment so necessary to his existance.

Infants with problems requiring the incubator oxygen also may need X-ray studies for diagnosis. Formerly this meant removal from the incubator. Dr. Harriet Wisniewski and technologist James D. White eliminated this by raising the incubator mattress 1½ inches to make room for an X-ray film cassette to slip through a doored slot at its base. A guide track positions the film underneath, close enough to minimize magnification, and the examination is made with a minimum of disturbance.

Lost Timber

NEW YORK (UPI)—Insects and disease destroy 2.4 billion cubic feet of timber a year, it is estimated by the American Forest Institute.

Fish America's Favorite Pets

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — A doggie in the window has great appeal but in the $3 billion annual pet industry fish are outselling them.

"Fish are the No. 1 pet now," said S.E. Herbert, head of Pet Dealers Supply Co., South San Francisco. "It's a tossup, now, whether dogs, kittens come next.

Herbert, whose firm supplies most pet stores in the San Francisco Bay area, is backed up by Pet Supplies Marketing magazine, published in Fond du Lac, Wis., which heads its statistics with "aquaria" in its list of pet "livestock."

Robinson's "House of Pets," one of Herbert's largest customers in the area, also backs up its supplier. The four-generation Robinson firm was founded in 1849 during the gold rush when Ansel W. Robinson dumped a pail of gold fish, newly shipped from China, into a horse trough and set up a hand-letter for-sale sign.

"That was San Francisco's first commercial store," said Jim Umberfield, now its general manager. "I can't explain why gold fish sold except that every person has a yearning for a pet. The gold miners took the fish away in any small glass bowl or container they could lay their hands on."

Fish are still money in the bank today, with shops such as Buker's Pet Store selling red tail guppies for up to $4.95 per pair, red scats at $3.50 apiece and knife fish for $2.50. Ordinary gold fish go for 25 to 35 cents each.

Umberfield thinks he understands the popularity of fish, and he explained: "In a congested city area apartment owners have many restrictions — out. San Francisco is a pet-loving city. There are more dogs and cats registered than people.

He said some apartment dwellers bought hamsters, adding: "They just sneak 'em in because they're quiet. It's just natural for people to have pets."

The pet population in the United States, now three times as large as the people population, bears him out. The Bank of America, in a special study, estimated that the care of this livestock of 600 million animals, fish and birds costs $3 billion in 1971, triple the figure in 1960.

The bank study said in addition to pet sales, the business is comprised of these basic ingredients — prepared foods for which dogs and cats are the main market; accessories and equipment ranging from jeweled collars to elaborate aquarium setups; animal health products including drugs, ointments, shampoos and cosmetics; groomers, pet sitters, veterinarians and boarding kennels.

There are, too, exotic pet shops which specialize in such items as boas, pythons, lizards, crocodiles and other pet exotica, but more conservative pet dealers hold such specialties "interesting but not easy to sell."

Finally comes the time when the "loved one" dies. Outfits such as Pet's Rest Cemetery and Crematory in Colma, a San Francisco suburb, are ready with landscaped grounds, lawn and shrubs.

Flabby Tourists Can Slim Up

TOKYO (UPI) — Flabby tourists with fat wallets today can tread trails in the mighty Himalayas that once were reserved for the world's best mountain climbers.

The Japanese investors have opened a tourist hotel in Nepal near the foot of 29,028-foot high Mt. Everest, the world's highest peak.

A room and two meals a day, at the "Everest View Hotel" costs $39 per person. Thoughtfully, the Japanese have installed an oxygen cylinder in each room for guests who have trouble breathing at the hotel's 12,600-foot elevation.

The hotel sits on a hill overlooking the Nepalese town of Namache Bazaar, traditional jumping off point for Everst climbers. It opened in autumn 1971 and had about 120 guests before winter set in. This year its manager expects more than 2,000. The peak seasons are April and Novemeber when the Himalayan weather is at its best. The hotel makes guides available to help serious climbers.

Table Auctioned

KUALA LUMPUR (UPI) — A table costing $2 U.S. was auctioned here for $1,500. Lai Ban Chai, a goldsmith, won the bid at a fund-raising dinner given by a Chinese school group to finance a new building.

A Reunion Along Suez Canal

By THOMAS CHEATHAM

KANTARA, Suez Canal (UPI) — The only boats plying the quiet waters of the Suez Canal these days carry out the mission of a sort of "marriage counselor" between Egypt and Israel under the flag of the International Red Cross.

The red, black and yellow motorboats chug back and forth across the 200-yard wide waterway an average of twice a month as the result of the only agreement the two warring nations have come to snce the 1967 Middle East War closed the canal.

Four months after Israeli troops had captured the east bank, the Red Cross successfully urged Cairo and Jerusalem to agree to the exchange of civilians and prisoners by boat under the provisions of the 1949 Geneva accords.

Eighty-four times since then, the boats have carried prison- under the provisions of the 1949 Geneva accords.
were separated by the canal after the Israeli conquest of the Sinai Peninsula and the Gaza Strip.

The exchanges have involved the crossing of more than 12,000 persons under the auspices of the Red Cross, whose top man in Israel likens his organization's role in the Middle East conflict to that of a "marriage counselor."

"You try to bring about a reconciliation between the couple, or at least reduce the misery," Frenchman Guy DeLuz said. "Our task is to listen and, if possible, to help—but never to gossip."
recent exchange. It wa: a sunny spring morning and the Red Cross flags were flying on both sides of the canal—the signal that puts the routine into motion each time.

The first trip of the boats is made with only the belongings of the participants—cardboard boxes full of clothes, baskets of oranges, even television sets.

Then, on the Israeli side, out of a bus whose windows have been blacked out to hide Israeli forts enroute to the canal—come 15 Egypt-bound exchangees, including several wide-eyed children. bfor all of them it is a big day, perhaps the biggest in their lives. They soon will be reunited with loved ones they haven't seen in five years.
eyed children. For all of them has replaced the roar of gunfire that marked many of the exchanges prior to the August, 1970, Middle East cease-fire, and it is an entirely happy scene.

A mothe carrying a baby is positively mother An old man, supporting himself with a cane, has to be helped out of the bus. Two boys, about 15, look frightened. mother
ened. But suddenly, as the boat young mother disembarks. She dashes back to the bus, disappears inside and emerges again grasping an envelope she had left behind.

"Probably the plans to our whole Suez defense line," comments a grinning Israeli soldier.

Then the motorboat is off again, this time to complete its journey. Soon, it returns, and now it carries 20 persons coming to rejoin their families in the Gaza Strip or Sinai. Among them are six Arab doctors who have completed their studies in Cairo and are returning to practice at home.

The returnees pile into the blacked-out bus. Down come the Red Cross flags, back to its mooring goes the boat. Another exchange has been completed and a little bit of Middle East and a little bit of Middle East anxiety has been relieved.

Dwarfing Disease Defined, Classified

EDMONTON, Alta., Canada (UPI) — Medical investigators have defined and classified the dwarfing disease, pycnodystosis, which plagued French artist Henri de Toulouse-Lautrec during most of his life.

Dr. B.C. Lentle, radiologist at Royal Alexandra Hospital here, discovered pycnodystosis in a native North American Indian child from the Yukon, the first case of the disease to be reported from Canada. In 1967, other investigators were able to collect only 33 cases from the world's medical literature. Lentle reported on X-ray findings in the child in the Journal of the Canadian Association of Radiologists.

Continuing Drama

MANTEO, N.C. (UPI)—The oldest continuing outdoor drama in North Carolina, "The Lost Colony," tells the story of the first English settlement in America. The play, written by Pulitzer Prize winner Paul Green, made its first summer run in 1937.

Family Planning Stamp Is Issued

NEW YORK (UPI)—The nation's first commemorative Family Planning stamp was issued by the U.S. Postal Service March, little more than 50 years after Margaret Sanger was jailed for using the mails to advocate birth control as a basic human right.

The Planned Parenthood Federation of America, an outgrowth of Mrs. Sanger's pioneering efforts, is sponsor of the new stamp markng a half-century of progress in contraceptive methods, services and education. The Federation now has 188 affiliates in this country and is the U.S. member and a major supporter of the International Planned Parenthood Federation. The 8-cent multicolored stamp honoring the movement depicts a small family group.

Scratch One More Controversy

CHICAGO (UPI) — Scratch one more controversy off the list—there's an answer to how much time a checker player has to make a move.

People for centuries have quarreled about taking too long to move from one square to another. But Encyclopaedia Britannica says standard tournament rules now provide that when a move is not made by the end of five minutes, time is called and if a move is not completed in 60 seconds the procrastinating player loses the game.

Hearst Castle Worth The Visit

By MARK JONES

SAN SIMEON, Calif. (UPI)—If you'd like a peek into Europe's ancient past for just $2, without leaving the United States, fall in line; more than 650,000 others will have the same idea this year.

Your destination is the famous Hearst Castle, a glittering $50 million showplace for art and antiquities built with a lavish hand by the late newspaper magnate William Randolph Hearst.

The publisher's legendary zest for art treasures was an auctioneers' dream on two continents. Stone by stone, statue by statue, Hearst created a fascinating chunk of Europe and the Mediterranean for display on his sun-washed 123-acre hilltop.

Undeterred by cost, he carved an airstrip on the slopes of his grand manor, dug a harbor below, cloaked the barren hills with California oaks, installed on the hillsides the world's largest private zoo —all to grace "the most imposing estate on the North American continent." To this day the title stands undisputed.

A French monarch once possessed 1,300 important works of art. But he was an amateur compared to Hearst, who collected more than 200,000 expensive oddments of art, a small portion of which still lies crated in a New York warehouse.

The splendid "ranch" perches atop a toasted brown hill in the Santa Lucia Mountains along central California's coast, overlooking a spectacular sweep of ocean.

The castle became a state monument in 1958 and from that year on more than six million persons have beaten a well-worn path to Hearst's gigantic wrought iron front door.

The oldest pieces inside, fashioned when Rome was in its glory, are wired to the walls against the threat of earthquakes.

Hearst's estate is best symbolized by gleaming white marble cathedral-like towers in the early Spanish Renaissance style of the 15th Century. But the collector's tastes were far-flung and Greco-Roman and Florentine touches are everywhere.

For example, Hearst constructed two vast swimming pools. The indoor pool is a combination of Grecian design coupled with mosaic of Venetian glass sandwiched with 24 carat gold leaf. Hearst's groundsmen and housekeepers swam in it and for a time it was dubbed "the employees' million-dollar pool."

The other pool faces the sea and is a breathless example of a vast Roman bath complete with a bevy of bare-breasted statues reclining in the heated water. A genuine Greek temple facade, shipped crate by crate from Crete and other Greek islands, looms overhead.

Leafy courtyards dotted with palms and fruit trees, broad marble terraces wide enough for a Fred Astaire cakewalk and fountains filled with goldfish and encrusted pennies add to the atmosphere,

Last year nearly 650,000 tourists were bused up the winding, five-mile road, past grazing zebras and exotic mountain sheep. The tourists fall into single-file lines as they're led by competent guides through the greatest collection of art money could buy. One California man has taken the tour 149 times.

Disbelief is a common visitor's reaction to it all. One recent day, standing in Hearst's favorite room, the baronial dining hall, a visitor stopped in astonishment as he looked upon the long, dark table, chest-high silver candlesticks and, overhead, the carved 16th Century ceiling.

"Gee," the man whispered. "Can you imagine eating ham and eggs alone in a room like this?"

San Simeon, home of the castle, was a prosperous whaling and mining village in the 1880s, with the mountains as a rich backdrop. Hearst's wealthy father paid 60 cents an acre for his land and carved out a huge estate from an old Spanish land grant.

On Christmas, 1925, the Hearst family opened the castle and its doors almost never closed over the next three decades, with famous visitors ranging from President Calvin Coolidge to Clark Gable and the "Gone with the Wind" cast; from Winston Churchill and the Shah of Iran to Charles Lindbergh.

The publisher died in 1951 and a few years later his five sons invited then-Gov. Goodwin Knight for a weekend visit and deeded the castle to the state. Only one of the three lavish guest houses, La Cuesta Del Mar, is off-limits to tourists these days. The Hearst family uses the 16-room house usually on Thanksgiving and Christmas.

Old Tradition Continues: Correspondence Courses

These are but a few of the 16,000 students, representing 78 countries and all 50 states, currently enrolled in correspondence courses (Independent Study) at the University of California Extension. Some lessons are mailed to addresses behind the Iron Curtain, in Poland and Hungary. American businessmen and diplomats stationed in foreign lands register their high school age children; Armed Forces personnel on lonely bases around the world scan UC Independent Study catalogs and sign up for courses.

The first UC correspondence course was written in 1913 and now, almost 60 years later, the roster of offerings ranks as the best and most comprehensive in the world. Some of the best minds at the University of California have contributed to these courses. Of the 323 credit courses listed in the current catalog, more than 200 are either upper division level or part of University Extension's professional series.

Bertrand Evans, Professor of English Emeritus at UC Berkeley, who wrote and taught several courses, and edited many others, once said, "Treating each student separately, as an individual whose thought on the subject is exposed each time he submits a lesson, I am able to guide, encourage, exhort, bully, demand — and get increasingly fine work as the course progresses."

Correspondence study does not appeal to everyone. About one in three persons who signs up for a course eventually completes it. Some of the reasons students have given for dropping out include "too hard," "missed human contact," "couldn't organize myself."

Director Alice Rowbotham dubs "the true correspondence student" one who finds independent study to his liking and enrolls repeatedly. "For instructors, there is great satisfaction in witnessing and assisting individual achievement of a very high order," she says.

The same instructor who wrote the individual course, reads and evaluates the assignments which are turned in. Many instructors find that the student-faculty relationship is more intimate even though based on corespondence.

Leonard Breger, who conducts a highly successful basic course in drawing, asks his students to send him a word biography and also three preliminary sketches — a "self-protrait," the corner of my room," and "people close to me." He returns highly perceptive and acute comments about his pupils' work. Those students who own recorders are encouraged to put their questions on tape so that a spoken dialogue is set up between student and teacher.

About 80 persons are currently enrolled in a new correspondence course offered by Independent Study this year in cooperation with the School of Environmental Design, UC Berkeley. The program leads to a certificate in city planning. Students in this course include architects, private consultants, Department of Housing and Urban Development personnel and local governmental planning employees.

Institutions which have adapted UC Extension correspondence courses to classroom use include San Francisco State, San Jose State, Houghton College (New York) and Follett (Washington).
